The petition must be filed before the defendant is required by the laws of the State or the rules of the state court to answer or plead to the declaration or complaint — that is, to make any defense whatever, either in abatement or on the merits. (Judicial Code, § 29; 151 U.S. 673.) Failure to take advantage of defendant's default in pleading does not extend time for removal. (138 U.S. 298.) But it is not essential to the jurisdiction of the district court that the petition be filed within the time stated, and failure to do so may therefore be waived. (151 U.S. 673, 684-691.) A petition for removal filed as soon as the case becomes a removable one — as when it is discontinued against defendants who are citizens of the same State as plaintiff and as to whom there is no separable controversy — is filed in time, although it was after the time when defendant was required to answer. (169 U.S. 92; 198 U.S. 95; 212 U.S. 364.) Otherwise, however, when the court itself dismisses such defendants without the assent of the plaintiff. (215 U.S. 246.)

By the due filing of the petition and bond the jurisdiction of the state court absolutely ceases and that of the district court immediately attaches, if the case on the face of the record is a removable one. Any order thereafter made in the state court is void (Judicial Code, § 29; 106 U.S. 118; 181 U.S. 240), unless its jurisdiction is in some way restored. (222 U.S. 164.) No order of the state court is necessary to accomplish the removal, and no refusal of such an order can prevent the jurisdiction of the district court from attaching. (103 U.S. 485; 141 U.S. 589, 595.) The state court is only at liberty to inquire whether, on the face of the record, a case has been made which requires it to proceed no further. All issues of fact made upon the petition for removal must be tried in the district court. (131 U.S. 240, 244; 214 U.S. 153; 215 U.S. 308.) The burden of showing the facts necessary to establish the jurisdiction of the district court rests upon the removing party. (121 U.S. 421.)

If the state court persists in hearing the suit, the party removing does not waive his objection by defending in the state court. (103 U.S. 485; 106 U.S. 118.) Otherwise, however, where he not merely defends but introduces an affirmative cause of action. (214 U.S. 153.) If the party chooses to proceed in the state court, the latter's refusal to grant the petition for removal or to approve a bond with sufficient surety may be reviewed by the supreme court on writ of error after final judgment. (100 U.S. 457, 472; 214 U.S. 153, 159.)

Failure to file the record within the prescribed time does not oust the jurisdiction of the district court, which may in its discretion relieve against the failure for cause, or remand the suit to the state court. (106 U.S. 118, 122.) If the suit is remanded for failure to file record, the same party is not entitled to file a second petition for removal on the same ground. (108 U.S. 212.)

No amendment of the petition or record in the state court can be made in the district court to show that the case is a removable one (131 U.S. 240, 245); but if upon the face of such petition and record sufficient grounds for removal are shown, the petition may be amended in the district court by stating more fully and distinctly the facts which support those grounds. (169 U.S. 92, 101.)

In suits of class (2) removable on the special ground of prejudice or local influence, ante, II, 4, a, the procedure is not by petition to the state court but by petition to the district court of the proper district. (Judicial Code, §§ 28, 29; 153 U.S. 192, 197.) The statute requires that it "shall be made to appear to said district court" that prejudice or local influence exists. Although no particular mode is prescribed, this showing may be made by affidavits. (137 U.S. 451.) Neither notice to adverse parties nor bond is specifically required, although in practice both are often given. To accomplish the removal of cases of this class the district court must enter an order of removal, which order must be filed in the state court and a transcript of the record obtained therefrom and filed in the district court. (148 U.S. 255, 258, 259.) And in such cases the removal may be had "at any time before the trial thereof" (Judicial Code, § 28), which has been construed to "require the application to remove to be filed before or at the term at which the cause could first be tried and before the trial thereof." (178 U.S. 229, 238, 239.)

Suits of classes (5), (6), and (7), ante, II, 4, a, may be removed at any time before the trial or final hearing in the state court. (Judicial Code, §§ 31, 33, 34; 19 Wall. 214; 99 U.S. 539;

100 U.S. 473.) In class (6) the procedure is by petition to the State court stating the facts and verified by oath; and further as specially provided in Judicial Code, §§ 31, 32. In classes (5) and (7) the procedure is by petition to the district court, verified by oath, setting forth the nature of the action, and accompanied by a certificate of petitioner's counsel that he has inquired into all the proceedings and believes the petition to be true; and further as specially provided in Judicial Code, § 33.

2. Procedure after Removal.

The district court cannot proceed until a copy of the record is filed there. (104 U.S. 5, 15.) If the clerk of the state court refuses to furnish a copy of the record the same may be supplied by affidavit or otherwise as the district court shall allow (Judicial Code, § 35), or the latter may issue a writ of certiorari to the state court commanding the production of the record. (Ibid. § 39.) Refusal by the clerk of the state court to furnish a copy of the record is made an offense against the United States. (Ibid. § 39.)

The copy of the record being entered, the parties removing the suit shall, within thirty days thereafter, plead, answer, or demur to the declaration or complaint, and the suit shall then proceed in the same manner as if it had been originally commenced in the district court and the same proceedings had been taken therein as shall have been had in the state court prior to removal. (Judicial Code, § 29, amending the old practice as to time for pleading, also § 38.) Any attachment or sequestration of the goods or estate of the defendant had in the state court shall hold the same to answer the final judgment or decree in the same manner as by law they would have been held to answer final judgment or decree of the state court. (Ibid. § 36.) All bonds, undertakings, or security given by either party prior to removal shall remain in effect; and all injunctions, orders, and other proceedings had in such suit prior to its removal shall remain in full force and effect until dissolved or modified by the district court. (Ibid. § 36.)

The prohibition of the Revised Statutes, § 720, against the United States courts enjoining proceedings in state courts has no application to proceedings in suits which have been removed from a state to a United States court. (22 Wall. 250.) Therefore, after removal, further proceedings in the state court by the plaintiff may be enjoined by the district court. (196 U.S. 239; 213 U.S. 207, 219.) Or, should the state court proceed to judgment notwithstanding the removal, plaintiff may be enjoined from taking any proceedings in the state court to enforce such judgment. (22 Wall. 250.)

A petition for removal, even though not stating that the defendant appears specially for the sole purpose of presenting the petition, is nevertheless not, like a general appearance, a waiver of any objection to the jurisdiction of the court over the person of the defendant for want of sufficient service of the summons or otherwise. (164 U.S. 271, 281.) The district court will judge whether service of the summons was sufficient by the rules of decision governing that subject in the federal courts, which may so far differ from those of the state court that what would be sufficient service in the latter would not be in the former. (215 U.S. 437.) The right and the procedure of removal of causes are to be determined by the federal law; neither the legislature nor the judiciary of a State can limit either the right or its effect. A suit must be actually pending in the state court before it can be removed; but its removal is not an admission that it was rightfully pending and that defendant can be compelled to answer. After removal defendant can avail in the federal court of every reserved defense, to be pleaded in the same manner as though the action had been originally commenced in the federal court. Exercising the right of removal and filing the petition does not amount to a general appearance. These rules have not been altered by the adoption of §§ 29 and 38 of the Judicial Code. (232 U.S. 124.)

While only personal service can give the district court jurisdiction to render a personal judgment against the defendant, nevertheless that court may enter judgment enforceable against the property of defendant which, upon notice by publication in accordance with the state law, had been attached before the removal of the suit from the state court. (203 U.S. 164.)

VIII. APPELLATE JURISDICTION OF SUPREME COURT AND CIRCUIT COURTS OF APPEALS.

1. Decisions of District Courts reviewable directly by Supreme Court.

Appeals and writs of error may be taken from district courts, including the district court for Hawaii and Porto Rico, direct to the supreme court, (a) where the jurisdiction of the court is in issue, in which case the question of jurisdiction alone shall be certified from the court below for decision; (b) in prize cases; (c) in cases involving constitutional questions (namely, the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States, or the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or whether a state constitution or law is in contravention of the Constitution of the United States), or the validity or construction of any treaty; (d) in such controversies in the district courts sitting as courts of bankruptcy and arising in bankruptcy proceedings as would be within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court in other cases; (e) in suits in equity by the United States under the Anti-Trust Act of July 2, 1890, ch. 647, 26 Stat. 209; or any other act having a like purpose; and (f) from any order be taken to the supreme court from any final decision of a court of appeals allowing or rejecting a claim under the bankruptcy laws: 1st, where the amount in controversy exceeds two thousand dollars and the question involved is one which might have been taken on appeal or writ of error from the highest court of a State to the supreme court; or, 2d, where a justice of the supreme court shall certify that in his opinion the determination of the question involved in the allowance or rejection of such claim is essential to a uniform construction of the laws relating to bankruptcy throughout the United States. (Judicial Code, § 252; 224 U.S. 145.)

Cases in which the judgment or decree of the circuit court of appeals is made final by the statute as above set forth, including controversies arising out of the settlement of the estates of bankrupts (186 U.S. 203, 205), upon petition of any party, may be reviewed by the supreme court, in its discretion, by writ of certiorari. (Judicial Code, §§ 240, 252.) Any other case likewise may be reviewed by the supreme court by writ of certiorari where agreeable to the usages and principles of the common law (Judicial Code, § 262; 217 U.S. 268, 278); but except as provided in Judicial Code, § 240 (supra), this writ is ordinarily used by the supreme court as an auxiliary process only, to supply imperfections in the record of a case already before it, and not like a writ of error, to review the judgment of an inferior court. (148 U.S. 372, 380.) The supreme court has like power of review by mandamus over the circuit court of appeals as over the district court. (Ante, IX, 1.)

The power of the supreme court to review decisions of the circuit court of appeals by writ of certiorari "will be sparingly exercised, and only when the circumstances of the case satisfy us [the supreme court] that the importance of the question involved, the necessity of avoiding conflict between two or more courts of appeals, or between courts of appeals and the courts of a State, or some matter affecting the interests of this nation in its internal or external relations, demand such exercise." (166 U.S. 506, 514; 148 U.S. 372, 383.)

The power may be exercised not alone after final judgment of the circuit court of appeals, but at any stage of the case in that court, provided the case is one in which the decision of the circuit court of appeals is not reviewable by the supreme court by writ of error or appeal. (166 U.S. 506, 514.)

Where the jurisdiction of the district court was invoked by plaintiff solely on a ground which by the terms of the statute (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 6; Judicial Code, § 128) would make the judgment of the circuit court of appeals final (e.g., diverse citizenship), but subsequently by way of defense or otherwise a constitutional question arose and was decided, if the unsuccessful party, although entitled to appeal to the supreme court because of the constitutional question, shall yet elect to appeal to the circuit court of appeals, the decision of that court is made final by the express language of the Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 6, reenacted in Judicial Code, § 128. (165 U.S. 359, 362; 179 U.S. 472, 478; 181 U.S. 277, 280, 281; 213 U.S. 288.)

On the other hand, where the jurisdiction of the district court was invoked on a ground which by the statute would make the judgment of the circuit court of appeals final, and also on a constitutional ground, if the unsuccessful party, although entitled to take the case to the supreme court on the constitutional ground, shall elect to appeal to the circuit court of appeals, the decision of that court in such a case, not being made final by the statute, may be appealed to the supreme court. (192 U.S. 397; 213 U.S. 288, 296; 223 U.S. 70; 225 U.S. 101.)

Judgments and decrees of the circuit court of appeals in all proceedings and causes arising under "An Act to establish a uniform system of bankruptcy throughout the United States (1912 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 464), and in all controversies arising in such proceedings and causes; also, in all causes arising under "An Act relating to the liability of common carriers by railroad to their employees in certain cases (1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 584); also, in all causes arising under "An Act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employees thereon (1909 Supp. Fed. Stat. Annot. 581); also, in all causes arising under "An Act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroad by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes and their locomotives with driving-wheel brakes and for other purposes (6 Fed. Stat. Annot. 752), shall be final, save only that it shall be competent for the supreme court to require by certiorari, upon the petition of any party thereto, that the proceeding, case, or controversy be certified to it for review and determination, with the same power and authority and with like effect as if taken to that court by appeal or writ of error. (Act of Sept. 6, 1916.)

4. When Appeal from District Court lies only to Supreme Court.

Where the sole question for review is the jurisdiction of the district court, an appeal from it can be taken only to the supreme court. (109 Fed. 497; 138 Fed. 548; 208 U.S. 333, 340; 195 Fed. 9.) The same is true where the jurisdiction of the district court is invoked by plaintiff solely on a constitutional ground. (181 U.S. 277, 281; 184 U.S. 291, 295; 189 U.S. 71, 73; 192 U.S. 397, 407; 195 Fed. 66.) (The distinction between a constitutional question and the mere construction of an act of Congress is important here. 192 U.S. 397, 407.)

5. When Appeal from District Court lies only to Circuit Court of Appeals.

Except where the case contains one or more of the grounds permitting an appeal direct to the supreme court, an appeal from the district court lies only to the circuit court of appeals. (155 U.S. 109, 112.)

6. When there is an Election between Supreme Court or Circuit Court of Appeals.

Where the jurisdiction of the district court is invoked by plaintiff on a constitutional ground and some other available ground besides, e.g., diverse citizenship, the defeated party may elect whether to appeal to the supreme court or the circuit court of appeals. (192 U.S. 397, 407; 203 U.S. 335, 341, 342; 213 U.S. 288, 293; 220 U.S. 446; 223 U.S. 70; 225 U.S. 101.) Again, in cases of the class that may be taken to the circuit court of appeals and in which its judgment, if appealed to, is made final under the statute as above set forth, as where the jurisdiction of the district court is dependent entirely upon diverse citizenship, if a federal question of a constitutional nature has been injected by the defendant and passed upon, the unsuccessful party may, at his election, appeal to the supreme court instead of the circuit court of appeals (165 U.S. 359, 362; 179 U.S. 472, 478; 181 U.S. 277, 280, 281; 213 U.S. 288); but if the federal question so injected by defendant was not of a constitutional nature nor otherwise within the description of questions permitting of a direct appeal to the supreme court (as defined in Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 5, reenacted in Judicial Code, § 238, as amended by Act of January 28, 1915, ch. 22, 38 Stat. 803), an appeal can be taken only to the circuit court of appeals, and its judgment will be final. (187 U.S. 585, 590.)

7. Appellate Jurisdiction of Supreme Court over State Courts.

Decisions of the Supreme Court of the Philippine Islands may be reviewed by the United States Supreme Court by certiorari, but not on writ of error or appeal. (Act of September 6, 1916.)

A final judgment or decree in any suit in the highest court of a State in which a decision in the suit could be had may be reexamined and reversed or affirmed in the supreme court upon writ of error, (a) where is drawn in question the validity of a treaty or statute of, or an authority exercised under, the United States, and the decision is against their validity; or (b) where is drawn in question the validity of a statute of, or an authority exercised under, any State, on the ground of their being repugnant to the Constitution, treaties, or laws of the United States, and the decision is in favor of their validity; (Judicial Code, § 237, as amended by Act of September 6, 1916). And it is now competent for the supreme court to require, by certiorari or otherwise, any such case to be certified to it for review and determination with similar power and authority, although the decision below be the opposite of that required to give jurisdiction by writ of error; also cases where any title, right, privilege, or immunity is claimed under the Constitution, or any treaty or statute of, or commission held or authority exercised under the United States, without regard to the decision. (Act of December 23, 1914, ch. 2, 38 Stat. 790, as amended by Act of September 6, 1916.)

As in the case of writs of error from the supreme court to the district courts, only the final judgment of the state court may be reviewed. (Ante, IX, 1.) But this is not necessarily the judgment of the highest court of the State. It is sufficient if it is the final judgment of the highest state court in which a decision could be had, which might under the law of the State be an inferior court. (4 Wall. 426; 9 Wall. 661.) The validity of a statute or treaty is not drawn in question where only its construction is involved. (153 U.S. 358.) The question relied upon to give jurisdiction to the supreme court must be raised at the trial (235 U.S. 45) and must appear upon the record of the court below; an omission in this respect cannot be cured by a certificate of the chief justice of the State stating that such question was raised and decided. (204 U.S. 551; 225 U.S. 477; 235 U.S. 50.)

Where the judgment of the state court rests upon an independent, non-federal ground, which is adequate to sustain it, the supreme court has not jurisdiction. (233 U.S. 536.) Questions of general law, not involving construction of federal laws, cannot be reviewed on writ of error to the state court. (238 U.S. 507.)

IX. APPELLATE PROCEDURE.

1. General.

The supreme court has adopted rules of practice governing review proceedings, supplementary to the statutory rules, and based on the former practice of the courts of king's bench and of chancery in England. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 3.) The several circuit courts of appeals have also prescribed rules of practice, adopting those of the supreme court so far as applicable. These rules, as well as the statutes, should of course be consulted by the practitioner in a given case.

The Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517 (26 Stat. 826), establishing the circuit courts of appeals provides: "And all provisions of law now in force regulating the methods and system of review, through appeals or writs of error, shall regulate the methods and system of appeals and writs of error provided for in this act in respect of the circuit courts of appeals, including all provisions for bonds or other securities to be required and taken on such appeals and writs of error, and any judge of the circuit court of appeals, in respect of cases brought or to be brought to that court, shall have the same powers and duties as to the allowance of appeals or writs of error, and the conditions of such allowance, as now by law belong to the justices or judges in respect of the existing courts of the United States respectively."

2. Modes of Review.

a. Decisions of Federal Courts. — In actions at law in the federal courts, the mode of review is by writ of error, which brings up questions of law only. In suits in equity and in admiralty the mode is by appeal, which brings up questions of both law and fact. (Story, Const. § 1762.) Where in a suit at law, equitable defenses have been interposed or equitable relief sought, under Act of March 3, 1915, ch. 90 (38 Stat. 956), review of the judgment or decree is to be regulated by rule of court. Whether such review be sought by writ of error or appeal, the appellate court has full power to render such judgment upon the records as law and justice may require. (Ibid.; Judicial Code, § 247 b.) Decisions of the circuit courts of appeals made final by the statute, and therefore not reviewable by writ of error or appeal, are reviewable by the supreme court in its discretion by writ of certiorari, which brings up the whole case. (Judicial Code, § 238, as amended by Act of January 28, 1915, ch. 22, 38 Stat. 803; Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 5; Sup. Ct. Rule No. 37, subdiv. 3, as amended June 10, 1912.)

b. Decisions of State Courts. — Cases in state courts of whatever nature, over which the United States supreme court has appellate jurisdiction, are reviewable only by writ of error, which shall be issued in the same manner, and under the same regulations, and shall have the same effect, as if the judgment or decree complained of had been rendered or passed in a court of the United States. (Judicial Code, § 237, as amended by Act of December 23, 1914, 38 Stat. 790, ch. 2; R. S. § 1003.)

3. Time within which Review Proceedings must be Brought.

No judgment, decree, or order of a district court, in any civil action, at law or in equity, shall be reviewed in the supreme court, on writ of error or appeal, unless the writ of error is brought, or the appeal is taken, within two years after the entry of such judgment, decree, or order; provided, that infants and insane and imprisoned persons may have two years exclusive of the term of their disability. (R. S. § 1008.) The time is specially limited to sixty days in suits in equity by the United States under the Anti-Trust Act of July 2, 1890, ch. 647 (26 Stat. 209), or any other act having a like purpose. (Act of February 11, 1903, ch. 544, 32 Stat. 823, § 2.)

No order, judgment, or decree of a circuit court of appeals shall be reviewed by the supreme court unless the appeal shall be taken or the writ of error sued out within one year after the entry of such order, judgment, or decree. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 6.)

No appeal or writ of error by which any order, judgment, or decree may be reviewed in the circuit courts of appeals shall be taken or sued out except within six months after the entry of such order, judgment, or decree, unless otherwise specially provided. (Ibid. § 11.) An appeal to a circuit court of appeals from an interlocutory order or decree appointing a receiver, or granting, continuing, refusing, dissolving or refusing to dissolve, an injunction, must be taken within thirty days from the entry of such order or decree. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 6; Judicial Code, § 129.)

It has been held that, there being no statutory provision fixing the time within which to apply to the supreme court for a writ of certiorari to review the decision of a circuit court of appeals, one year will be allowed, as in the case of writs of error and appeals to and from such court. (166 U.S. 110, 114.)

Appeals in bankruptcy proceedings from the courts of bankruptcy to the circuit courts of appeals shall be taken within ten days after the judgment appealed from has been rendered, and may be heard and determined by the appellate court in term or vacation. (Act of July 1, 1898, ch. 541, 30 Stat. 544, § 25 a.)

In order that a writ of error shall be "brought" or "sued out" or an appeal "taken" within the statutory period, it is not enough that it be allowed within that period, but the writ, or in the case of an appeal the petition and order or other evidence of allowance, must be filed within such period in the court whose decision is sought to be reviewed. (128 U.S. 258; 215 U.S. 541, 544.) It is not necessary, however, that the citation shall be signed or the bond filed within such period. (134 U.S. 330, 331; 114 U.S. 436; 108 Fed. 715.)

While it cannot extend the statutory time for bringing a writ of error or taking an appeal, the appellate court may in proper cases enlarge the time for making return thereto. (215 U.S. 541, 545.)

4. Allowance of Writs of Error, Appeals, and Writs of Certiorari.

Writs of error, appeals, and writs of certiorari to bring up cases for review in the United States supreme court must be applied for within three months after entry of the judgment or decree complained of. (Act of September 6, 1916.)

A writ of error or an appeal to review a decision of a federal court of appeals may be allowed in term time or in vacation by any justice or judge of either the reviewing court or the court whose decision is to be reviewed. R. S. §§ 999, 1012; Judicial Code, § 132; Sup. Ct. Rule Nos. 36, 40; 140 U.S. 200, 205, 207, 208; 156 U.S. 277, 283. The practice is to present to the justice or judge a petition for the writ of error or appeal (128 U.S. 258), which must be allowed in a proper case as a matter of right (112 U.S. 177, 178; 140 U.S. 200, 205).

provided an assignment of errors setting out separately and particularly each error asserted (and usually concluding with a prayer for reversal) shall have been filed in the court below. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 35.) The assignment of errors is not jurisdictional, however, and may be waived. (135 U.S. 609; 215 U.S. 541, 544.) The supreme court may allow the amendment of a writ of error in any matter of form, provided the defect has not prejudiced and the amendment will not injure defendant in error. (R. S. § 1005.) The statute makes no provision for the form or manner of allowing an appeal. Acceptance of security for the appeal and the signing of the citation, or acceptance of the security alone, where no citation is necessary, is sufficient allowance. (96 U.S. 712, 714.)

A writ of error from the supreme court to a state court must be allowed either by a justice of the supreme court or the chief justice of the state court. (154 U.S. 588.) It is not allowed as a matter of right, as in the case of writs of error from the supreme court to the lower federal courts. The practice is to submit the record to a justice of the supreme court to ascertain whether upon the face thereof the allowance of the writ is justified. (7 Wall. 321; 123 U.S. 143, 164; 154 U.S. 588.) In urgent cases the motion for allowance of the writ may be permitted to be argued before a full bench. (7 Wall. 321, 325.)

A writ of error from the supreme court or a circuit court of appeals so allowed may be issued as well by the clerks of the district courts, under the seal thereof, as by the clerk of the supreme court or of a circuit court of appeals. (R. S. § 1004 as amended by Act of January 22, 1912, ch. 12, 37 Stat. 54.) It must be under the seal of the court which issues it and bear the signature of the clerk. (153 U.S. 535.)

Writs of error and appeals must be served before the return thereof. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 8, subdiv. 5.) In theory a writ of error is a process of the appellate court and is served when deposited with the clerk of the court to which it is directed. (6 Wall. 355.) By analogy it would seem that an appeal is served when the order or other evidence of the allowance thereof is likewise deposited. (6 How. 81, 90.)

A writ of error is not "brought" nor an appeal "taken," however, within the legal meaning of the terms, by the mere allowance thereof as above described, but only after the writ of error so allowed, or, in the case of an appeal, evidence of the allowance thereof, has been filed in the court which rendered the judgment or decree sought to be reviewed. (128 U.S. 258, 260, 261.) A writ of error having been thus "brought" or an appeal "taken," it yet cannot be prosecuted in the appellate court until a citation to the adverse party has been issued and served (except in certain cases where a citation is unnecessary) and a bond given as hereunder set forth. (R. S. §§ 999, 1000, 1012; 93 U.S. 86, 87; 128 U.S. 258, 259.)

Application for a writ of certiorari to review a decision of a circuit court of appeals is made to the supreme court by written petition accompanied by a certified copy of the entire transcript of record of the case, including the proceedings in the circuit court of appeals. The petition shall contain only a summary and short statement of the matter involved and the general reasons relied on for the allowance of the writ. A failure to comply with this provision will be deemed a sufficient reason for denying the petition. Thirty printed copies of such petition and of any brief deemed necessary shall be filed. Notice of the date of submission of the petition, together with a copy of the petition and brief, if any, in support of the same shall be served on the counsel for the respondent at least two weeks before such date in all cases except where the counsel to be notified resides west of the Rocky Mountains, in which cases the time shall be at least three weeks. The brief for the respondent, if any, shall be filed at least three days before the date fixed for the submission of the petition. Oral argument will not be permitted on such petitions, and no petition will be received within three days next before the day fixed upon for the adjournment of the court for the term. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 37, subdiv. 3, as amended June 10, 1912.) The petition must be signed, and presented in open court, by a member of the bar of the supreme court (210 U.S. 503), unless the time fixed by statute for its presentation expire during vacation, in which case it may within that time be filed with the clerk of the court. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 37, subdiv. 4, added June 12, 1916; 241 U.S. 635.)

5. The Citation.

The citation is notice to the adverse party of the writ of error or appeal; no particular form is required. (6 How. 90; 114 U.S. 438.) It must be signed by a justice or judge authorized to allow the writ of error or appeal, and must give the adverse party at least thirty days' notice before the hearing of the writ of error or appeal. (R. S. §§ 999, 1012; Judicial Code, § 132; Sup. Ct. Rule No. 36; 99 U.S. 608, 609.) Where an appeal is allowed in open court during the term at which the decree appealed from is rendered, no citation is necessary unless the required bond is accepted after the expiration of such term, since the parties, being presumptively present during the whole term, are charged with notice of all that is done by the court in that period affecting their interests. (96 U.S. 712, 715; 130 U.S. 104, 114; 220 U.S. 90, 93.) Otherwise, however, with writs of error, since there it is held that the statute requires a citation in all cases. (R. S. § 999; 121 U.S. 254.) The citation must be made returnable not exceeding thirty days from the signing thereof, and must be served before the return day, except in writs of error and appeals from California, Oregon, Nevada, Washington, New Mexico, Utah, Arizona, Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Alaska, Idaho, Hawaii, and Porto Rico, when the time shall be extended to sixty days, and from the Philippine Islands to one hundred and twenty days. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 8, subdiv. 5.) It may be served either upon the party or his attorney of record. But the service must be personal; the mails will not suffice. (141 U.S. 126, 129.) The manner of service provided for subpoenas in equity by the 13th Equity Rule of the supreme court is adequate for citations. (141 U.S. 126, 129.) Service of a citation may be waived, of course; e.g., by a general appearance, or other action equivalent to acknowledgment of notice. (141 U.S. 126, 129.)

6. The Bond.

Every justice or judge signing a citation on any writ of error shall, except in cases brought up by the United States or by direction of any department of the Government, take good and sufficient security that the plaintiff in error or the appellant shall prosecute his writ or appeal to effect, and, if he fail to make his plea good, shall answer all damages and costs where the writ is a supersedeas and stays execution, or all costs only where it is not a supersedeas as aforesaid. (R. S. § 1000.) The same requirement applies to appeals. (R. S. § 1012.) The taking and approving of a bond by the judge signing the citation is not, however, essential to establish the jurisdiction of the appellate court; and therefore the requirement may be waived, or the bond may be subsequently given in the appellate court. (7 Wall. 306, 311; 134 U.S. 330, 650, 682; 220 U.S. 90, 93.)

7. Supersedeas and Stay of Execution.

In any case where a writ of error may be a supersedeas, the defendant may obtain such supersedeas by serving the writ of error by lodging a copy thereof for the adverse party in the clerk's office where the record remains, within sixty days, Sundays exclusive, after the rendering of the judgment complained of, and giving the security required by law on the issuing of the citation. But if he desires to stay process on the judgment, he may, having served his writ of error as aforesaid, give the security required by law within sixty days after the rendition of such judgment, or afterward with the permission of a justice or judge of the appellate court. And in such cases where a writ of error may be a supersedeas, executions shall not issue until the expiration of ten days. (R. S. § 1007.) Supersedeas on appeals stands on the same footing. (R. S. § 1012; 93 U.S. 86, 90.) The effect of this provision is thus stated by the supreme court: "Had the section stopped here, [the first clause] a plaintiff in error or appellant would have been compelled to elect, when he sued out his writ of error, or took his appeal, whether he would have a supersedeas or not; because it is made one of the conditions of the stay of proceedings that the requisite security shall be given, upon the issuing of the citation. Having once made his election, he would be concluded by what he had done. But Congress, foreseeing, undoubtedly, that cases might arise in which serious loss would result from such a rule, went further and, in a subsequent part of the section, provided that if a writ of error had been served, as required in the first paragraph, a stay might be had as a matter of right by giving the required security within sixty days, and afterwards, as a matter of favor, if permission could be obtained from the designated justice or judge. Thus prompt action in respect to the writ was required, and indulgence granted only as to the security." (93 U.S. 86, 90.) No order granting a supersedeas or stay of execution is necessary. It results from the writ of error or appeal without more, upon compliance with the statutory requirements. (10 Wall. 273, 291.) The provision of Rule 36 of the supreme court that any justice thereof, or any circuit judge within his circuit, or any district judge within his district "may also grant a supersedeas and stay of execution or of proceedings, pending such writ of error or appeal," apparently applies only to cases in which no security is required or taken, e.g., criminal cases. (140 U.S. 200, 208; see, also, 156 U.S. 277, 282, 283.) The amount of the indemnity required is regulated by Rule 29 of the supreme court. The appellate court may, for cause arising after the bond was approved, direct an increase of security or vacate the supersedeas in whole or in part. (21 Wall. 17; 103 U.S. 753; 117 U.S. 200.) As to what is secured by supersedeas bond on appeal from a foreclosure decree, see 107 U.S. 378. When an appeal from a final decree in an equity suit granting or dissolving an injunction is allowed by a justice or judge who took part in the decision of the cause, he may, in his discretion, at the time of such allowance, make an order suspending or modifying the injunction during the pendency of the appeal, upon such terms, as to bond or otherwise, as he may consider proper for the security of the rights of the opposite party. (Sup. Ct. Eq. Rule No. 74.) As to time within which to obtain a supersedeas where motion for a new trial is entertained, see 194 Fed. 37.

8. Return to Writ of Error or Order allowing Appeal.

No writ of error shall be dismissed solely because an appeal should have been taken, and no appeal shall be dismissed solely because a writ of error should have been sued out, but the court shall proceed as though the correct procedure had been followed. (Act of September 6, 1916, § 4.)

The clerk of the court to which any writ of error may be directed shall make return of the same by transmitting it (the original) to the appellate court with a true copy of the record, and of the assignment of errors, the prayer for reversal (which usually constitutes the concluding part of the assignment of errors), the citation, and of all proceedings in the case.

under his hand and the seal of the court. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 8, subdiv. 1; R.S. § 997; 6 Wall. 355.) The return to an order allowing an appeal is similarly made. Writs of error and appeals must be made returnable not exceeding thirty days from the day of signing the citation, except that in those from California, Oregon, Nevada, Washington, New Mexico, Utah, Arizona, Montana, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Alaska, Idaho, Hawaii, and Porto Rico, the time shall be sixty days, and in those from the Philippines one hundred and twenty days. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 8, subdiv. 5.)

No general rule can be stated for determining what portions of the record below shall be included in the transcript for the appellate court. Of course everything necessary to an adjudication of the questions at issue must be included. The rules of the supreme court and of the several circuit courts of appeals must be consulted in a given case. The supreme court requires the parties to indicate to the clerk the portions of the record below to be sent up, and makes the party indicating any unnecessary portion liable for costs. (Rule 8, subdiv. 1.) In admiralty cases in which the facts have been found by the court below and the review is limited to questions of law, the transcript shall be confined to the pleadings, the findings of fact, and conclusions of law thereon, the bills of exceptions, the final judgment or decree, and such interlocutory orders and decrees as may be necessary. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 8, subdiv. 6.) In all cases there must be annexed to the record a copy of the opinion or opinions. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 8, subdiv. 2.)

In cases taken direct to the supreme court on a question of jurisdiction the general rule is that the record must contain a certificate from the district court setting forth the jurisdictional question. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 5; Judicial Code, § 238, as amended by Act of January 28, 1915, ch. 22, 38 Stat. 803; 196 U.S. 89, 91.) But exceptions have been recognized where the explicit terms of the decree, or even of the order allowing the appeal, might properly be considered as equivalent to the formal certificate. (196 U.S. 89, 91; 224 U.S. 496.) Thus a decree showing dismissal for want of jurisdiction only will take the place of the certificate. (224 U.S. 496.) Likewise, where the record shows that the only matter tried and decided was one of jurisdiction, and the petition for appeal or writ of error asked for a review only on the ground that the district court had no jurisdiction, the question of jurisdiction is sufficiently certified. (208 U.S. 333, 338.) For other instances of equivalent for certificate, see 156 U.S. 322; 160 U.S. 217; 161 U.S. 355; 176 U.S. 668; 185 U.S. 282. It is held that the jurisdictional certificate must be issued during the term of court at which the question is decided. (158 U.S. 456; 224 U.S. 496.) Also, that where lack of a certificate is supplied by a decree equivalent thereto, the appeal may be perfected subsequently, within two years, as are other appeals. (185 U.S. 282; 224 U.S. 496.)

The certificate of a circuit court of appeals submitting to the supreme court a question or proposition of law, under the Judicial Code, § 239, must contain a proper statement of the facts on which such question or proposition arises. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 37, subdiv. 1; 209 U.S. 101; 205 U.S. 410; 167 U.S. 60; 162 U.S. 435; 149 U.S. 259; 148 U.S. 266.) The entire record should not be transmitted. (215 U.S. 216; 186 U.S. 33.) If any party applies in such cases to have the whole record sent up to the supreme court, he must furnish a certified copy of same. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 37, subdiv. 2.)

9. Filing Record and Docketing Case.

Plaintiff in error or appellant in the supreme court must docket the case and file the record with the clerk by or before the return day (which is fixed by Sup. Ct. Rule No. 8, subdiv. 5). But for cause the justice or judge who signed the citation, or any justice of the supreme court, may enlarge the time. If plaintiff in error or appellant shall fail to comply with this rule, defendant in error or appellee may have the case docketed and dismissed upon producing a certificate, whether in term time or vacation, from the clerk of the court below, stating the case and certifying that such writ of error or appeal has been duly sued out or allowed; and thereafter the case may not be docketed by plaintiff in error or appellant unless by order of the court. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 9, subdiv. 1.) Defendant in error or appellee may at his option docket the case and file a copy of the record; and if the case is docketed and the record filed by plaintiff in error or appellant within the period above stated or by defendant in error or appellee at any time thereafter, the case will stand for argument. Upon the filing of the record, the appearance of the counsel for the party docketing the case shall be entered. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 9, subdivs. 2, 3.)

Writs of error and appeals being returnable to the term of the appellate court next succeeding, if the transcript of record (the return) is not filed in the appellate court before the expiration of its term next succeeding the taking of the appeal or the bringing of the writ of error that court acquires no jurisdiction, as the writ has then become functus officio and the appeal has spent its force and the case will be dismissed (6 How. 81, 90; 137 U.S. 615, 621); although if the statutory period has not expired a second writ of error or appeal may be brought or taken. (19 How. 183.) When, however, a return has been made by seasonably depositing the record in the clerk's office the jurisdiction of the appellate court is not lost by omission formally to docket the case before the expiration of the term (because, for example, the fee bond was not given), since that may be done subsequently in the discretion of the court. (102 U.S. 575; 137 U.S. 615, 621.) Remedies may be found where plaintiff in error or appellant is entirely free from laches or want of diligence, and is prevented from obtaining the transcript by the fraud of the other party, the order of the court, or the contumacy of the clerk. (137 U.S. 615, 621.)

In all cases the plaintiff in error on docketing a case and filing the record shall make such deposit with the clerk for the payment of his fees as he may require or otherwise satisfy him in that behalf. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 10, subdiv. 1.) Compliance with this requirement is a condition precedent to the filing of the record and the docketing of the case. (137 U.S. 615, 623.)

The printing of records of cases in the supreme court is regulated by its Rule No. 10 amended March 20, 1916. (240 U.S. 670. See Act of February 13, 1911, ch. 47, 36 Stat. 901.)

In filing the record and docketing a case in a circuit court of appeals, the rules of that court must of course be consulted.

10. Judgment on Review.

Cases reviewed and determined by the supreme court, whether coming from the district courts direct or from the circuit courts of appeals, shall be remanded to the proper district court for further proceedings in pursuance of such determination. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 10.) The supreme court may affirm, modify, or reverse any judgment, decree, or order of a district court lawfully brought before it for review, or may direct such judgment, etc., or such further proceedings, in the inferior court, as justice may require; but it shall not issue execution but shall send a special mandate to the inferior court to award execution thereupon. (R. S. § 701.)

Cases reviewed and determined by a circuit court of appeals, where its decision is final, shall be remanded to the district court for further proceedings in pursuance of such determination. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 10.)

Where a circuit court of appeals has asked instruction from the supreme court on a question of law, the latter may either give such instruction or require the whole record to be sent up and decide the entire matter in controversy as if brought up by writ of error or appeal. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 6; Judicial Code, § 239.)

There shall be no reversal upon a writ of error for error in ruling any plea in abatement, other than a plea to the jurisdiction of the court, or for any error in fact. (R. S. § 1011.)

When an issue of fact in a civil case in a circuit [district] court is tried and determined by the court without a jury, pursuant to R. S. § 649, the rulings of the court in the progress of the case, if excepted to at the time, and duly presented by a bill of exceptions, may be reviewed by the supreme court [or circuit court of appeals] upon a writ of error or appeal; and when the finding is special the review may extend to the determination of the sufficiency of the facts found to support the judgment. (R. S. § 700; 212 Fed. 634.) An exception furnishes no basis for reversal upon any ground other than the one specifically called to the attention of the trial court. (236 U.S. 512.)

Where a district court dismisses a bill for want of jurisdiction and certifies that question to the supreme court, which sustains the jurisdiction, the case will be remanded for hearing on the merits, although the district court also expressed the opinion that the bill was without equity. (189 U.S. 25.)

Where, to a judgment of a state court of last resort refusing to allow a writ of error to or an appeal from a judgment of a lower state court, a writ of error from the United States supreme court is prosecuted, the same will be dismissed unless it is affirmatively stated in the judgment of the state court of last resort that in so refusing to allow a writ of error or appeal it exercised its jurisdiction to review the judgment of the lower state court on the merits, affirming it. (225 U.S. 264.)

On appeal from an interlocutory order granting or refusing an injunction, etc., under Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 7, reenacted in Judicial Code, § 129, the circuit court of appeals may dispose of the whole case where the record presents the same in such wise that it may properly be disposed of at that stage; and where such a case is before the supreme court on writ of certiorari that court will likewise dispose of it in its entirety. (165 U.S. 518; 168 U.S. 583; 177 U.S. 495; 178 U.S. 183; 195 U.S. 540; 197 U.S. 244, 287.)

A party taking no appeal or writ of error cannot, by assigning cross-errors or by brief or argument, obtain a review of rulings against him in the court below. (194 Fed. 1.)

11. Costs.

Where upon a writ of error judgment is affirmed, the court shall adjudge to the respondent in error just damages for his delay, and single or double costs, at its discretion. (R. S. § 1010; Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 11.) The same rule would seem to apply to judgments on appeals. (R. S. § 1012.)

There shall be taxed against the losing party in every case pending in the supreme court the cost of printing the record in such case, except when the judgment is against the United States. (Judicial Code, § 254.)

Costs in cases reviewed by the supreme court are regulated by Rules Nos. 10 and 24 of that court. The several circuit courts of appeals have power to fix costs and fees in cases reviewed by them. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 2, as amended by Act of February 19, 1897, ch. 263; 31 Stat. 536, and their special rules must be consulted. See, also, Act of February 13, 1911, ch. 47; 36 Stat. 901.)

12. Record on Appeal.

In an appeal from a final decree in an equity cause the new Equity Rules 75, 76, and 77 impose new burdens on the bar in the preparation of appeal records, and such rules require careful examination. The principal requirements are the reduction of testimony to narrative form and the provisions for the omission of immaterial parts of the evidence.

X. CONTEMPT PROCEDURE.

The power to punish for contempt is inherent in all courts (19 Wall. 505; 128 U.S. 289) and has long since been expressly conferred upon the United States courts by a statute, which is now embodied in § 268 of the Judicial Code; but, until recently, the procedure in such matters was not directly governed by any statutory regulations.

The Act of October 15, 1914, ch. 323 (38 Stat. 730), entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," now imposes strict regulations in favor of persons sought to be punished for contempt, where the contempt charged is of such a character as to constitute also a criminal offense under any statute of the United States or under the state laws.

The United States courts are allowed power to punish by fine or imprisonment, at the discretion of the court, contempts of their authority; provided that such power to punish contempts shall not be construed to extend to any cases except the misbehavior of any person in their presence, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, the misbehavior of any of the officers of said courts in their official transactions, and the disobedience or resistance by any such officer, or by any party, juror, witness, or other person to any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command of the said courts. (Judicial Code, § 268.)

Any person who willfully disobeys any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree or command of any district court of the United States or any court of the District of Columbia by doing any act or thing therein, or thereby forbidden to be done by him, if the act or thing so done by him be of such character as to constitute also a criminal offense under any statute of the United States, or under the laws of any State in which the act was committed, shall be proceeded against for his said contempt in the following manner:

Whenever it shall be made to appear to any district court or judge thereof, or to any judge therein sitting, by the return of a proper officer on lawful process, or upon the affidavit of some credible person, or by information filed by any district attorney, that there is reasonable ground to believe that any person has been guilty of such contempt, the court or judge thereof, or any judge therein sitting, may issue a rule requiring the said person so charged to show cause upon a day certain why he should not be punished therefor, which rule, together with a copy of the affidavit or information, shall be served upon the person charged, with sufficient promptness to enable him to prepare for and make return to the order at the time fixed therein. If upon or by such return, in the judgment of the court, the alleged contempt be not sufficiently purged, a trial shall be directed at a time and place fixed by the court. Provided, however, that if the accused, being a natural person, fail or refuse to make return to the rule to show cause, an attachment may issue against his person to compel an answer, and in case of his continued failure or refusal, or if for any reason it be impracticable to dispose of the matter on the return day, he may be required to give reasonable bail for his attendance at the trial and his submission to the final judgment of the court. Where the accused is a body corporate, an attachment for the sequestration of its property may be issued upon like refusal or failure to answer.

The trial may be by the court, or, upon demand of the accused, by a jury; in which latter event the court may impanel a jury from the jurors then in attendance, or the court or the judge thereof in chambers may cause a sufficient number of jurors to be selected and summoned, as provided by law, to attend at the time and place of trial, at which time a jury shall be selected and impaneled as upon a trial for misdemeanor. The trial is to conform, as near as may be, to the practice in criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or upon information.

If the accused be found guilty, judgment must be entered accordingly, prescribing the punishment, either by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court. Such fine shall be paid to the United States or to the complainant or other party injured by the act constituting the contempt, or may, where more than one is so damaged, be divided or apportioned among them as the court may direct, but in no case shall the fine to be paid to the United States exceed, in case the accused is a natural person, the sum of one thousand dollars, nor shall such imprisonment exceed the term of six months.

In any case the court or a judge thereof may, for good cause shown, by affidavit or proof taken in open court or before such judge and filed with the papers in the case, dispense with the rule to show cause, and may issue an attachment for the arrest of the person charged with contempt; in which event such person, when arrested, shall be brought before such court or a judge thereof without unnecessary delay and shall be admitted to bail in a reasonable penalty for his appearance to answer to the charge or for trial for the contempt; and thereafter the proceedings shall be the same as though the rule had issued in the first instance. (Act of October 15, 1914, ch. 323, 38 Stat. 730, §§ 21, 22.)

It is further provided that the evidence taken upon the trial of any persons so accused may fraud of the other party, the order of the court, or the contumacy of the clerk. (137 U.S. 615, 621.)

In all cases the plaintiff in error on docketing a case and filing the record shall make such deposit with the clerk for the payment of his fees as he may require or otherwise satisfy him in that behalf. (Sup. Ct. Rule No. 10, subdiv. 1.) Compliance with this requirement is a condition precedent to the filing of the record and the docketing of the case. (137 U.S. 615, 623.)

The printing of records of cases in the supreme court is regulated by its Rule No. 10 amended March 20, 1916. (240 U.S. 670. See Act of February 13, 1911, ch. 47, 36 Stat. 901.)

In filing the record and docketing a case in a circuit court of appeals, the rules of that court must of course be consulted.

10. Judgment on Review.

Cases reviewed and determined by the supreme court, whether coming from the district courts direct or from the circuit courts of appeals, shall be remanded to the proper district court for further proceedings in pursuance of such determination. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 10.) The supreme court may affirm, modify, or reverse any judgment, decree, or order of a district court lawfully brought before it for review, or may direct such judgment, etc., or such further proceedings, in the inferior court, as justice may require; but it shall not issue execution but shall send a special mandate to the inferior court to award execution thereupon. (R. S. § 701.)

Cases reviewed and determined by a circuit court of appeals, where its decision is final, shall be remanded to the district court for further proceedings in pursuance of such determination. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 10.)

Where a circuit court of appeals has asked instruction from the supreme court on a question of law, the latter may either give such instruction or require the whole record to be sent up and decide the entire matter in controversy as if brought up by writ of error or appeal. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 6; Judicial Code, § 239.)

There shall be no reversal upon a writ of error for error in ruling any plea in abatement, other than a plea to the jurisdiction of the court, or for any error in fact. (R. S. § 1011.)

When an issue of fact in a civil case in a circuit [district] court is tried and determined by the court without a jury, pursuant to R. S. § 649, the rulings of the court in the progress of the case, if excepted to at the time, and duly presented by a bill of exceptions, may be reviewed by the supreme court [or circuit court of appeals] upon a writ of error or appeal; and when the finding is special the review may extend to the determination of the sufficiency of the facts found to support the judgment. (R. S. § 700; 212 Fed. 634.) An exception furnishes no basis for reversal upon any ground other than the one specifically called to the attention of the trial court. (236 U.S. 512.)

Where a district court dismisses a bill for want of jurisdiction and certifies that question to the supreme court, which sustains the jurisdiction, the case will be remanded for hearing on the merits, although the district court also expressed the opinion that the bill was without equity. (189 U.S. 25.)

Where, to a judgment of a state court of last resort refusing to allow a writ of error to or an appeal from a judgment of a lower state court, a writ of error from the United States supreme court is prosecuted, the same will be dismissed unless it is affirmatively stated in the judgment of the state court of last resort that in so refusing to allow a writ of error or appeal it exercised its jurisdiction to review the judgment of the lower state court on the merits, affirming it. (225 U.S. 264.)

On appeal from an interlocutory order granting or refusing an injunction, etc., under Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 7, reenacted in Judicial Code, § 129, the circuit court of appeals may dispose of the whole case where the record presents the same in such wise that it may properly be disposed of at that stage; and where such a case is before the supreme court on writ of certiorari that court will likewise dispose of it in its entirety. (165 U.S. 518; 168 U.S. 583; 177 U.S. 495; 178 U.S. 183; 195 U.S. 540; 197 U.S. 244, 287.)

A party taking no appeal or writ of error cannot, by assigning cross-errors or by brief or argument, obtain a review of rulings against him in the court below. (194 Fed. 1.)

11. Costs.

Where upon a writ of error judgment is affirmed, the court shall adjudge to the respondent in error just damages for his delay, and single or double costs, at its discretion. (R. S. § 1010; Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 11.) The same rule would seem to apply to judgments on appeals. (R. S. § 1012.)

There shall be taxed against the losing party in every case pending in the supreme court the cost of printing the record in such case, except when the judgment is against the United States. (Judicial Code, § 254.)

Costs in cases reviewed by the supreme court are regulated by Rules Nos. 10 and 24 of that court. The several circuit courts of appeals have power to fix costs and fees in cases reviewed by them. (Act of March 3, 1891, ch. 517, 26 Stat. 826, § 2, as amended by Act of February 19, 1897, ch. 263; 31 Stat. 536, and their special rules must be consulted. See, also, Act of February 13, 1911, ch. 47; 36 Stat. 901.)

12. Record on Appeal.

In an appeal from a final decree in an equity cause the new Equity Rules 75, 76, and 77 impose new burdens on the bar in the preparation of appeal records, and such rules require careful examination. The principal requirements are the reduction of testimony to narrative form and the provisions for the omission of immaterial parts of the evidence.

X. CONTEMPT PROCEDURE.

The power to punish for contempt is inherent in all courts (19 Wall. 505; 128 U.S. 289) and has long since been expressly conferred upon the United States courts by a statute, which is now embodied in § 268 of the Judicial Code; but, until recently, the procedure in such matters was not directly governed by any statutory regulations.

The Act of October 15, 1914, ch. 323 (38 Stat. 730), entitled "An Act to supplement existing laws against unlawful restraints and monopolies, and for other purposes," now imposes strict regulations in favor of persons sought to be punished for contempt, where the contempt charged is of such a character as to constitute also a criminal offense under any statute of the United States or under the state laws.

The United States courts are allowed power to punish by fine or imprisonment, at the discretion of the court, contempts of their authority; provided that such power to punish contempts shall not be construed to extend to any cases except the misbehavior of any person in their presence, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, the misbehavior of any of the officers of said courts in their official transactions, and the disobedience or resistance by any such officer, or by any party, juror, witness, or other person to any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command of the said courts. (Judicial Code, § 268.)

Any person who willfully disobeys any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree or command of any district court of the United States or any court of the District of Columbia by doing any act or thing therein, or thereby forbidden to be done by him, if the act or thing so done by him be of such character as to constitute also a criminal offense under any statute of the United States, or under the laws of any State in which the act was committed, shall be proceeded against for his said contempt in the following manner:

Whenever it shall be made to appear to any district court or judge thereof, or to any judge therein sitting, by the return of a proper officer on lawful process, or upon the affidavit of some credible person, or by information filed by any district attorney, that there is reasonable ground to believe that any person has been guilty of such contempt, the court or judge thereof, or any judge therein sitting, may issue a rule requiring the said person so charged to show cause upon a day certain why he should not be punished therefor, which rule, together with a copy of the affidavit or information, shall be served upon the person charged, with sufficient promptness to enable him to prepare for and make return to the order at the time fixed therein. If upon or by such return, in the judgment of the court, the alleged contempt be not sufficiently purged, a trial shall be directed at a time and place fixed by the court. Provided, however, that if the accused, being a natural person, fail or refuse to make return to the rule to show cause, an attachment may issue against his person to compel an answer, and in case of his continued failure or refusal, or if for any reason it be impracticable to dispose of the matter on the return day, he may be required to give reasonable bail for his attendance at the trial and his submission to the final judgment of the court. Where the accused is a body corporate, an attachment for the sequestration of its property may be issued upon like refusal or failure to answer.

The trial may be by the court, or, upon demand of the accused, by a jury; in which latter event the court may impanel a jury from the jurors then in attendance, or the court or the judge thereof in chambers may cause a sufficient number of jurors to be selected and summoned, as provided by law, to attend at the time and place of trial, at which time a jury shall be selected and impaneled as upon a trial for misdemeanor. The trial is to conform, as near as may be, to the practice in criminal cases prosecuted by indictment or upon information.

If the accused be found guilty, judgment must be entered accordingly, prescribing the punishment, either by fine or imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court. Such fine shall be paid to the United States or to the complainant or other party injured by the act constituting the contempt, or may, where more than one is so damaged, be divided or apportioned among them as the court may direct, but in no case shall the fine to be paid to the United States exceed, in case the accused is a natural person, the sum of one thousand dollars, nor shall such imprisonment exceed the term of six months.

In any case the court or a judge thereof may, for good cause shown, by affidavit or proof taken in open court or before such judge and filed with the papers in the case, dispense with the rule to show cause, and may issue an attachment for the arrest of the person charged with contempt; in which event such person, when arrested, shall be brought before such court or a judge thereof without unnecessary delay and shall be admitted to bail in a reasonable penalty for his appearance to answer to the charge or for trial for the contempt; and thereafter the proceedings shall be the same as though the rule had issued in the first instance. (Act of October 15, 1914, ch. 323, 38 Stat. 730, §§ 21, 22.)

It is further provided that the evidence taken upon the trial of any persons so accused may be preserved by bill of exceptions, and any judgment of conviction may be reviewed upon writ of error in all respects as now provided by law in criminal cases, and may be affirmed, reversed, or modified as justice may require. Upon the granting of such writ of error, execution of judgment shall be stayed, and the accused, if thereby sentenced to imprisonment, shall be admitted to bail in such reasonable sum as may be required by the court, or by any justice, or any judge of any district court of the United States or any court of the District of Columbia. (Ibid. § 23.)

Nothing in the provisions of the Act of October 15, 1914, ch. 323 (38 Stat. 730), is to be construed to relate to contempts committed in the presence of the court, or so near thereto as to obstruct the administration of justice, nor to contempts committed in disobedience of any lawful writ, process, order, rule, decree, or command entered in any suit or action brought or prosecuted in the name of, or on behalf of, the United States; but the same, and all other cases of contempt not specifically embraced within section twenty-one of the Act, may be punished in conformity to the prevailing usages at law and in equity. (Ibid. § 24.)

No proceeding for contempt may hereafter be instituted against any person unless begun within one year from the date of the act complained of. No such proceeding shall be a bar to any criminal prosecution for the same act or acts. (Ibid. § 25.)

Jurisdiction extends over the States of California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, and Arizona, and the Territories of Alaska, and Hawaii, and over the United States court for China.

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS.

Chief Justice, Edward K. Campbell. Judges, Fenton W. Booth, Samuel S. Barney, George E. Downey, and James Hay. Chief Clerk, Samuel A. Putnam. Assistant Clerk, F. C. Kleinschmidt. Bailiff, J. J. Marcotte.

Jurisdiction. — This court was established by act of Congress, February 24, 1855 (10 Stat. L. 612). It has general jurisdiction (36 Stat. L., 1135) of all claims founded upon the Constitution of the United States or any law of Congress, except for pensions, or upon any regulation of an executive department, or upon any contract, expressed or implied, with the government of the United States, or for damages, liquidated or unliquidated, in cases not sounding in tort, in respect of which claims the party would be entitled to redress against the United States, either in a court of law, equity, or admiralty, if the United States were suable, except "claims growing out of the late civil war, and commonly known as war claims," and certain rejected claims.

It has jurisdiction, also, of claims of like character which may be referred to it by any executive department, involving disputed facts of or controverted questions of law, where the amount in controversy exceeds three thousand dollars, or where the decision will affect a class of cases or furnish a precedent for the future action of any executive department in the adjustment of a class of cases, or where any authority, right, privilege, or exemption is claimed or denied under the Constitution.

In all of the above cases the court may enter judgment against the United States, payable out of the public treasury.

There is a statute of limitations which prevents parties from bringing actions more than six years after the cause of action accrued; but the departments may refer claims at any time, if they were pending therein within the six years.

An appeal, only on questions of law, lies to the Supreme Court on the part of the defendants in all cases, and on the part of the claimants when the amount in controversy exceeds three thousand dollars. The findings of fact are final and not subject to review in the supreme court.

By section 151, Judicial Code (36 Stat. L. 1135), whenever any bill, except for a pension, is pending in either house of Congress providing for the payment of a claim against the United States, legal or equitable, or for a grant, gift, or bounty to any person, the house in which such bill is pending may, for the investigation and determination of facts, refer the same to the court of claims, which shall proceed with the same in accordance with such rules as it may adopt and report to such house the facts in the case and the amount, where the same can be liquidated, including any facts bearing upon the question whether there has been delay or laches in presenting such claim or applying for such grant, gift, or bounty, and any facts bearing upon the question whether the bar of any statute of limitation should be removed or which shall be claimed to excuse the claimant for not having resorted to any established legal remedy, together with such conclusions as shall be sufficient to inform Congress of the nature and character of the demand, either as a claim, legal or equitable, or as a gratuity against the United States, and the amount, if any, legally, or equitably due from the United States to the claimant: provided, however, That if it shall appear to the satisfaction of the court upon the facts established that, under existing laws or the provisions of this chapter, the subject-matter of the bill is such that it has jurisdiction to render judgment or decree thereon, it shall proceed to do so, giving to either party such further opportunity for hearing as in its judgment justice shall require, and it shall report its proceedings therein to the house of Congress by which the same was referred to said court.

Section 5, act of March 4, 1915 (38 Stat. 996), provides: "That from and after the passage and approval of this act the jurisdiction of the Court of Claims shall not extend to or include any claim against the United States based upon or growing out of the destruction of any property or damage done to any property by the military or naval forces of the United States during the war for the suppression of the rebellion, nor to any claim for stores and supplies taken by or furnished to or for the use of the military or naval forces of the United States, nor to any claim for the value of any use and occupation of any real estate by the military or naval forces of the United States during said war; nor shall said Court of Claims have jurisdiction of any claim which is now barred by the provisions of any law of the United States."

By the act of 1891, ch. 538 (1 Supplement to Rev. Stat. 2d ed. p. 913), jurisdiction was conferred on claims arising from Indian depredations upon petitions filed within three years from passage of the act, with right of appeal to the supreme court as in other cases.

The act of June 25, 1910, chapter 423 (36 Stat. L., 851-852), "An act to provide additional protection for owners of patents of the United States, and for other purposes," conferred a new jurisdiction.

Since 1867, cases decided have been regularly reported in a series of volumes, one each year, called "Court of Claims Reports," now numbering fifty-one volumes.

There are a chief justice and four judges, who sit together in the hearing of cases. The concurrence of three is necessary for the decision of any case.

Term. — The court sits in Washington, D. C., in the Old Corcoran Art Building, 17th and Pennsylvania Avenue, on the 1st Monday in December, and continues to sit until all cases ready for trial are disposed of. It again sits in October, continuing its sittings until the beginning of the next term. Cases may be commenced and entered at any time, whether the court be in session or not.

COURT OF CUSTOMS APPEALS.

Presiding Judge, Robert M. Montgomery. Associate Judges, James F. Smith, Orion M. Barber, Marion De Vries, and George E. Martin. Clerk, Arthur B. Shelton. Assistant Clerk, Charles M. Ayer. Assistant Attorney-General, Bert Hanson. Marshal, Frank H. Briggs. Reporter, Alex. H. Clark.

Jurisdiction. — This court was established by act of Congress of August 5, 1909. By the act the court was given exclusive appellate jurisdiction to review by appeal, as provided by the act, final decisions by a board of general appraisers in all cases as to construction of the law and the facts respecting the classification of merchandise and the rate of duty imposed thereon under such classification, and the fees and charges connected therewith, and all appealable questions as to the jurisdiction of said board, and all appealable questions as to the laws and regulations governing the collection of customs revenues, such judgment to be final in all cases. Provided, however, That in any case in which the judgment or decree of the court of customs appeals is made final by the provisions of this title, it shall be competent for the supreme court, upon the petition of either party, filed within sixty days next after the issue by the court of customs appeals of its mandate upon decision, in any case in which there is drawn in question the construction of the Constitution of the United States, or any part thereof, or of any treaty made pursuant thereto, or in any other case when the attorney-general of the United States shall, before the decision of the court of customs appeals is rendered, file with the court a certificate to the effect that the case is of such importance as to render expedient its review by the supreme court, to require, by certiorari or otherwise, such case to be certified to the supreme court for its review and determination, with the same power and authority in the case as if it had been carried by appeal or writ of error to the supreme court.

The court was organized April 22, 1910, and holds sessions at the court rooms, 719 Fifteenth Street, Washington, D. C. The court is open for business on each business day of the year for the purpose of receiving applications for appeal, and on such days writs directed to the board of general appraisers may issue as of course. The court convenes at appointed times and continues its sessions until all cases on its calendar in readiness for hearing are disposed of.

Its decisions are published in "Treasury Decisions," issued weekly by the Treasury Department and are reported in bound volumes issued by the Treasury Department once a year.

There are a presiding judge and four associate judges. Three constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of three members is necessary to a decision. In case of vacancy or temporary inability or disqualification for any reason of one or two judges, the President is empowered, on request of the presiding judge, to designate any qualified United States circuit or district judge or judges to act in his or their place. A copy of the rules or other information pertaining to the court may be had on application to the clerk.

CIRCUIT COURTS.

All circuit courts are open for the transaction of any and all business from the first Monday in January to and including the last Saturday of June, and from the first Monday after the fourth of July to and including the last Saturday before Christmas day of every year.

COUNTY COURT.

There is a county court held monthly in most of the counties for the trial of misdemeanors, of which court the probate judge is ex-officio judge. Time of holding fixed by the judge.

PROBATE COURTS.

The judge of probate for each county is required by law to hold monthly terms of his court on the 2d Monday of each month.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Justices of the peace have original jurisdiction within their respective counties of all actions founded on any contract where the sum claimed does not exceed one hundred dollars; of all actions founded on any wrong or injury, except slander, where the damages claimed do not exceed fifty dollars; of all actions of forcible entry and unlawful detainer; of all actions brought to recover specific property, where the value does not exceed one hundred dollars; also, exclusive power to issue attachments returnable before themselves when the amount claimed does not exceed one hundred dollars, in the following cases only: 1. To enforce the collection of a debt, whether due or not at the time the attachment is sued out. 2. To recover damages for the breach of a contract, where the damages are uncertain or unliquidated. Justices are required by law to hold terms of their courts at least once every month. The names of all parties plaintiff must be given in writs, and the individual names of copartners.

Security must be given by non-residents in all the courts. Non-residents are required to give security for court costs when they bring suit.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Judge of Probate Court — is ex-officio judge of the county court, and also presiding officer of the board of county commissioners. His duty is to keep all records of county conveyances and wills. Has jurisdiction of probate of wills, settlements of estates of decedents, and all orphans' business.

Tax Collector — Receives taxes.

Tax Assessor — Assesses taxes.

Board of County Commissioners — Control finances of the county and public roads.

Treasurer — Receives, keeps, and disburses money of the county.

Sheriff — Executes legal processes.

In many counties there are established County Boards of Revenue with the same powers and jurisdiction as the Board of County Commissioners.

COURT CALENDAR FOR ALASKA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. A. R. & R. W. Heilig, of Fairbanks.

DISTRICT COURTS.

The district court has the jurisdiction of circuit and district courts of the United States, and general jurisdiction in civil, criminal, equity, and admiralty causes. To it appeals lie from judgments in the commissioners' courts in civil actions when the sum in dispute is not less than fifty dollars, exclusive of costs, in criminal cases, except when the plea of guilty is entered, and from orders and decrees of commissioners sitting as judges in probate. It may also review any judgment of a commissioner's court for error of law appearing upon the face of the judgment or proceedings. From final judgments of the district court, or any division thereof, appeals and writs of error may be taken and prosecuted (1) direct to the supreme court of the United States in prize causes and in all cases which involve the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States, or in which the constitutionality of any law of the United States, or the validity or construction of any treaty made under its authority is drawn in question, or in which the constitution or law of a State is claimed to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States; and (2) to the United States circuit court of appeals for the ninth circuit in all criminal cases, and in all other civil actions where the matter in dispute exceeds five hundred dollars. In such cases the judgments of the circuit court of appeals are final except that the judges thereof may certify any question or proposition of law to the supreme court, and thereupon the supreme court shall give its instruction, which shall be binding upon the circuit court of appeals. Appeals and writs of error from final orders and judgments must be taken or sued out within one year from the entry of the judgment or order sought to be reviewed. An appeal to said circuit court of appeals may also be taken from any interlocutory order granting or dissolving, or refusing to grant or dissolve, an injunction, within thirty days after the entry of such interlocutory order. (45 C. C. A. 615.) There is no appeal from judgments in divorce cases.

The district court consists of four divisions, and a judge is appointed to preside over each division, but the jurisdiction of each division of the court extends over the whole district.

The official residence of the judges and officers of the First Division, is Juneau; of the Second Division, Nome; of the Third Division, Valdez; and of the Fourth Division, Fairbanks.

First Division: Judge, Robert W. Jennings; clerk, Jay Wm. Bell; district attorney, James A. Smyser; marshal, Josias M. Tanner.

Second Division: Judge, William A. Holsheimer; clerk, Lawrence E. Kerr; district attorney, George B. Mundy; marshal, Emmet R. Jordan.

Third Division: Judge, Frederick M. Brown; clerk, Arthur Lang; district attorney, William A. Munly; marshal, F. R. Brenneman.

Fourth Division: Judge, Charles E. Bunnell; clerk, J. E. Clark; district attorney, R. F. Roth; marshal, L. T. Erwin.

The terms fixed by statute are: —

One general term of court is held each year at Juneau, Nome, Valdez, and Fairbanks at a time fixed by the resident judge and such additional terms at other places as the attorney-general may direct, and such special terms as any of the judges may deem expedient or the attorney-general may direct.

COMMISSIONERS' COURTS.

The judge of each judicial division may appoint commissioners in his division, defining the boundaries of their respective precincts and recording districts. Commissioners are ex-officio justices of the peace, recorders, probate judges, and coroners, unless their powers are restricted in the order of appointment. They also have the powers and jurisdiction of United States commissioners, and may grant writs of habeas corpus returnable before the district judge. They have jurisdiction in civil actions where the amount claimed or the value of the property in dispute does not exceed one thousand dollars, and in actions for forcible entry and unlawful detainer. They have no jurisdiction in actions in which the title to real estate shall come in question, nor in actions for false imprisonment, libel, slander, malicious prosecution, criminal conversation, seduction upon a promise to marry, in actions of an equitable nature, or in admiralty. They acquire no jurisdiction of a defendant unless he resides in the precinct where the action is commenced or personal service can be had on him in such precinct. Criminal jurisdiction extends to misdemeanors punishable by imprisonment in the county jail not more than one year and by fine not more than five hundred dollars. In other criminal cases they act as committing magistrates.

MUNICIPAL COURTS.

In incorporated towns a municipal magistrate may be elected with power to hear and determine causes arising under the municipal ordinances, and to punish violations of such ordinances. The laws relating to appeals from the judgments of commissioners acting as justices of the peace govern appeals from judgments of municipal magistrates. (Acts of March 2, 1903, and April 28, 1904.)

COURT CALENDAR FOR ARIZONA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1918-1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by Walter Bennett, Esq., of Phoenix.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

The State of Arizona constitutes one United States judicial district, and is attached to and becomes a part of the Ninth Judicial Circuit.

By act of Congress of May 5, 1913, the terms of the district court are to be held in Tucson on the 1st Mondays in May and November; at Phoenix on the 1st Mondays in April and October; at Prescott on the 1st Mondays in March and September; and in Globe on the 1st Mondays in June and December.

The United States district court for the District of Arizona has the same jurisdiction as all other district courts of the United States.

The officers of said court are: Judge, Hon. Wm. H. Sawtelle, of Tucson. United States District Attorney, Thomas A. Flynn, of Flagstaff. United States Marshal, Joseph P. Dillon, of Phoenix.

STATE SUPREME COURT.

The supreme court of the State of Arizona consists of a chief justice and two associate justices.

The supreme court has jurisdiction to review upon appeal and other proceedings the judgments of the superior courts: 1. When the matter in dispute exceeds two hundred dollars. 2. When the legality of any tax, toll, or impost, or municipal fine, or the validity of any statute is in question.

An appeal may also be taken to the supreme court from a superior court in the following cases: 1. From a final judgment entered in an action or special proceeding commenced in a superior court, or brought into a superior court from any other court. 2. From an order granting or refusing a new trial, or granting a motion in arrest of judgment; granting or dissolving an injunction, or refusing to grant or dissolve an injunction, or appointing a receiver, or dissolving or refusing to dissolve an attachment or garnishment; from any special order made after final judgment; from any interlocutory judgment, order, or decree made or entered in actions to redeem real or personal property from a mortgage thereof, or lien thereon, determining such right to redeem and directing an accounting; from an interlocutory judgment in any action for partition which determines the rights and interests of the respective parties and directs partition to be made, and from any interlocutory judgment which determines the rights of the parties and directs an accounting or other proceeding to determine the amount of the recovery. 3. From a judgment or order granting or refusing to grant, revoking or refusing to revoke, letters testamentary, or of administration, or of guardianship; or admitting or refusing to admit a will to probate, or against or in favor of the validity of a will, or revoking or refusing to revoke the probate thereof; or against or in favor of setting apart property, or making allowance for a widow or child, or against or in favor of directing the partition, sale, or conveyance of real property or settling an account of an executor, administrator, or guardian; or refusing, allowing, or directing the distribution or partition of an estate, or any part thereof, or payment of a debt, claim, legacy, or distributive share; or confirming or refusing to confirm a report of an appraiser or appraisers setting apart a homestead, or determining heirship. 4. From an order or judgment adjudging a person to be insane or incompetent, or committing a person to the state asylum for the insane; or revoking or refusing to revoke an order or judgment determining any person to be insane or incompetent; or restoring or refusing to restore any person who has been declared to be insane or incompetent, to competency. 5. From any order affecting a substantial right, made in any action when such order in effect determines the action and prevents judgment from which an appeal might be taken. 6. From a final order affecting a substantial right made in special proceedings or upon a summary application in an action after judgment.

The court has the power to hear and determine on appeal writs of mandamus, certiorari, and quo warranto, and also the power to issue writs of mandamus, review, prohibition, habeas corpus, certiorari, and all other writs necessary and proper to the complete exercise of its appellate and revisory jurisdiction.

The judges of the supreme court are: Chief Justice, Henry D. Ross, of Phoenix. Associate Justices, D. L. Cunningham, of Tombstone, and Alfred Franklin, of Phoenix.

There are no terms of the supreme court, but the court is always open for the transaction of business.

STATE SUPERIOR COURTS.

These courts have original jurisdiction in all civil cases where the amount in controversy exceeds two hundred dollars exclusive of interest, and in all criminal cases amounting to a felony, or a misdemeanor the punishment for which may be a fine of more than three hundred dollars or imprisonment for more than six months; and also concurrent jurisdiction with justices of the peace in all other criminal cases amounting to a misdemeanor. They have exclusive jurisdiction in all cases involving the title to real property; in the foreclosure of all mortgages and liens; and also all the jurisdiction formerly exercised by the probate courts of the Territory, including all matters pertaining to the administration of estates, guardianship, and insanity cases. They also have appellate jurisdiction from justices' courts, and may issue writs of certiorari to inferior courts, boards, and officers.

By the Constitution of the State of Arizona there are no stated terms of the superior courts, but these courts are open at all times for the transaction of business. Each county in the State has its own superior court, which is held at the county seat of the county. The names of the counties of the State, the county seats, and of the judges of the superior courts for each of the counties are as follows:—

COUNTY	COUNTY SEAT.	JUDGE.
Apache	St. John.	Geo. Crosby.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

The justices' courts have jurisdiction of all civil cases involving amounts less than two hundred dollars, and of certain criminal cases. They are always open.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Clerk of the Superior Court — Has charge of the records of the superior court, issues all process, etc. His office is elective.

County Recorder — Has charge of record of deeds, mortgages, and all miscellaneous records of the county. He records any proper instruments presented to him for that purpose.

County Treasurer. — He is ex-officio tax collector. He is custodian of the county funds and pays them out on proper warrants.

County Assessor. — He lists for the purpose of taxation all the property in the county.

County Attorney. — He is the law officer of the county.

Sheriff. — He is the peace officer of the county and serves all process, criminal and civil.

Board of Supervisors. — This board constitutes the governing body of the county. It has general charge of county affairs, and audits all claims against the county.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the district and criminal courts in cases of misdemeanor, and with the district court in all civil actions where the debt, damage, or claim does not exceed two thousand dollars, and appellate jurisdiction from justices' and police magistrates' courts. They also have exclusive original jurisdiction of the estates of deceased persons and persons non compos mentis, with no limit of value, and jurisdiction of "juvenile delinquents," except in counties of 100,000 population, in which the latter jurisdiction is vested exclusively in a "Juvenile Court."

Terms. — Six terms of the county court are held annually in each of the following counties, beginning on the dates stated: In Chaffee, Denver, El Paso, Jackson, Lake, Ouray, Park, Rio Grande, Saguache, Summit, Teller, and Weld, on the 1st Mondays in January, March, May, July, September, and November; in Adams and Arapahoe, on the 2d Mondays in the same months; in Mineral on the 1st Mondays in January, March, May, July, September, and October. Four terms are held annually as follows in the following named counties: in Alamosa, Cheyenne, Kit Carson, Lincoln, Logan, and Las Animas on the 1st Mondays in January, April, July, and October; in Baca, Phillips, and Sedgwick, on the 3d Mondays of the same months; in Costilla on the 2d Mondays of March, June, September, and December; in Conejos, on the 3d Mondays of the last-named months; in all other counties, on the 1st Mondays of the last-named months.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE

Each county is divided into precincts by the county commissioners, and in each precinct is elected a justice of the peace (in precincts having more than twenty thousand inhabitants not less than two justices, who has jurisdiction in civil causes where the amount in controversy or damage does not exceed the sum of three hundred dollars, and where the title to real property is not called in question. Also jurisdiction of misdemeanors under the state law, and the power to hold preliminary examinations and to bind over in all other criminal cases. These courts are always in session.

POLICE MAGISTRATE COURTS.

Every city of a population of twenty-five thousand inhabitants or more has a police magistrate court (in Denver called the "Municipal Court") having exclusive original jurisdiction of all cases arising under the ordinances of the city under which it is organized. These courts are continually in session.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT.

Each county is governed by a board of county commissioners, consisting of three members, two of whom constitute a quorum; but any county having a population exceeding one hundred thousand may have a board of county commissioners, consisting of five members, three of whom constitute a quorum. Each county has also a county judge, county clerk and recorder, sheriff, coroner, treasurer, surveyor, justices of the peace, constables, and a county attorney. Their duties are of the same character as usually pertain to such offices.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF ERRORS.

The supreme court of errors is the highest court in the State, and sits for revision of errors in law of the superior court, courts of common pleas, district court, and city courts.

Chief Justice, Samuel O. Prentice, of Hartford. Associate Justices, Alberto T. Roraback, of North Canaan; George W. Wheeler, of Bridgeport; John K. Beach, of New Haven; and Edwin B. Gager, of Derby. Clerks of the superior courts act as clerks of the supreme court of errors. Reporter, James P. Andrews, of Hartford.

The judges of the supreme court of errors are by law also judges of the superior court, but judges of the superior court are not judges of the supreme court of errors. If, however, by reason of sickness or otherwise, a quorum of the supreme court cannot be had, the chief justice may call to the bench for the time being a judge of the superior court.

Terms. — First District, Hartford, Tolland, Middlesex, Windham, and Litchfield counties, at Hartford on the 1st Tuesdays in October, January, March, and May. Second District, New London County, at Norwich, last Tuesday in April and 3d Tuesday in October. Third District, New Haven and Fairfield counties, at New Haven on the 3d Tuesday in January and the 1st Tuesday in June; at Bridgeport, on the 2d Tuesday in April and the 4th Tuesday in October.

SUPERIOR COURT.

Jurisdiction. — The superior court has jurisdiction in all cases at law or in equity exceeding in amount the sum of five hundred dollars; also exclusive jurisdiction of divorce causes, appeals from probate, and criminal proceedings, except for petty offenses cognizable by a justice of the peace, and in New Haven, Fairfield, and New London counties, where certain criminal proceedings are in the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas.

Judges. — William S. Case, of Hartford; Joel H. Reed, of Stafford; Howard J. Curtis, of Stratford; Lucien F. Burpee, of Hartford; Gardiner Greene, of Norwich; James H. Webb, of Hamden; Donald T. Warner, of Salisbury; John P. Kellogg, of Waterbury; William M. Maltbie, of Granby; John E. Keeler, of Stamford; and Frank D. Haines, of Middletown.

The superior court in each county shall be deemed to be open daily, between ten o'clock in the forenoon and four o'clock in the afternoon (Saturdays ten to one), except on Sundays and legal holidays, and except during July and August, whether any judge is in attendance or not, for the purpose of entering appearances or judgment of nonsuit or default for want of appearance, filing pleas or amendments to pleadings and written motions.

No clerk of any court shall enter any judgment of default, or nonsuit, unless directed by the court, except where the parties fail to appear. (Acts 1909, ch. 148.) Or except where notice of intention to default has been filed. (Laws 1903, ch. 175.)

Writs may be made returnable on the first Tuesday in every month except July and August.

In the absence of special order, the short calendar is taken up every Friday, during the sessions of the court.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

This court is established only in Hartford, New Haven, New London, Fairfield, and Litchfield counties.

Jurisdiction. — In all counties where established, except Fairfield and Litchfield, and except within the territorial limits of the district of Waterbury, this court has exclusive jurisdiction in all cases in equity wherein the matter in demand does not exceed five hundred dollars, and in all cases at law wherein the matter in demand exceeds one hundred dollars and does not exceed five hundred dollars, and has concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court up to one thousand dollars, and said court has jurisdiction of all civil cases brought to it, according to law, by appeal from judgments of justices of the peace or other inferior courts, and of writs of error from such judgments. (General Statutes, 1902, §§ 534, 535.)

In Fairfield County and Litchfield County this court has concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court in law and equity wherein the matter in demand exceeds five hundred and does not exceed two thousand dollars, and exclusive jurisdiction at law where matter exceeds one hundred and does not exceed five hundred dollars. It has also jurisdiction concurrently with superior court on appeals from doings of commissioners on insolvent estates where matter in demand does not exceed two thousand dollars. (Public Acts 1917, ch. 315.)

The courts of common pleas within and for the counties of New Haven, Fairfield, and New London, in addition to their civil jurisdiction, have criminal jurisdiction in all appeals from the judgment of any city, borough, police, or town court, or justice of the peace, in said counties respectively, except such as are now by law required to be taken to the district court at Waterbury, in the county of New Haven. (§ 1469.)

Judges. — Hartford County, Edward L. Smith (associate judge, Daniel A. Markham); New Haven County, Isaac Wolfe and Ernest C. Simpson; New London County, Charles B. Waller; Fairfield County, John R. Booth, civil side, and John J. Walsh, criminal side; Litchfield County, James P. Woodruff.

Terms. — In Hartford County, on the 1st Tuesday in September. (Public Acts 1915, ch. 50.)

In New Haven County, on the 4th Tuesday in September. In New Haven County there are two judges of the court, who hold the respective civil and criminal terms as they allot, and either judge may hold a session of court, and proceed with the transaction of any business not being heard by the other judge. (§ 444.)

In New London County, for civil business, at Norwich on the 1st Tuesdays in February and October, and at New London on the 1st Tuesdays in April and August, but may be adjourned from one of said places to the other.

In the County of Fairfield, at Bridgeport, for civil business, on the 1st Tuesdays in January, March, May, June, September, October, and November, and at Danbury on the 1st Tuesdays in February, April, and December, and the court may, at its discretion, adjourn from or to Bridgeport, Danbury, Norwalk, and Stamford, as the business of said court may require (§ 446); for criminal business, at Bridgeport, on the 1st Tuesday in each month, except July and August. The criminal court may adjourn to Danbury, Norwalk, or Stamford, in the discretion of the judge. (§ 1459.)

Jurisdiction. — In all counties where established, except Fairfield and Litchfield, and except within the territorial limits of the district of Waterbury, this court has exclusive jurisdiction in all cases in equity wherein the matter in demand does not exceed five hundred dollars, and in all cases at law wherein the matter in demand exceeds one hundred dollars and does not exceed five hundred dollars, and has concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court up to one thousand dollars, and said court has jurisdiction of all civil cases brought to it, according to law, by appeal from judgments of justices of the peace or other inferior courts, and of writs of error from such judgments. (General Statutes, 1902, §§ 534, 535.)

In Fairfield County and Litchfield County this court has concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court in law and equity wherein the matter in demand exceeds five hundred and does not exceed two thousand dollars, and exclusive jurisdiction at law where matter exceeds one hundred and does not exceed five hundred dollars. It has also jurisdiction concurrently with superior court on appeals from doings of commissioners on insolvent estates where matter in demand does not exceed two thousand dollars. (Public Acts 1917, ch. 315.)

The courts of common pleas within and for the counties of New Haven, Fairfield, and New London, in addition to their civil jurisdiction, have criminal jurisdiction in all appeals from the judgment of any city, borough, police, or town court, or justice of the peace, in said counties respectively, except such as are now by law required to be taken to the district court at Waterbury, in the county of New Haven. (§ 1469.)

Judges. — Hartford County, Edward L. Smith (associate judge, Daniel A. Markham); New Haven County, Isaac Wolfe and Ernest C. Simpson; New London County, Charles B. Waller; Fairfield County, John R. Booth, civil side, and John J. Walsh, criminal side; Litchfield County, James P. Woodruff.

Terms. — In Hartford County, on the 1st Tuesday in September. (Public Acts 1915, ch. 50.)

In New Haven County, on the 4th Tuesday in September. In New Haven County there are two judges of the court, who hold the respective civil and criminal terms as they allot, and either judge may hold a session of court, and proceed with the transaction of any business not being heard by the other judge. (§ 444.)

In New London County, for civil business, at Norwich on the 1st Tuesdays in February and October, and at New London on the 1st Tuesdays in April and August, but may be adjourned from one of said places to the other.

In the County of Fairfield, at Bridgeport, for civil business, on the 1st Tuesdays in January, March, May, June, September, October, and November, and at Danbury on the 1st Tuesdays in February, April, and December, and the court may, at its discretion, adjourn from or to Bridgeport, Danbury, Norwalk, and Stamford, as the business of said court may require (§ 446); for criminal business, at Bridgeport, on the 1st Tuesday in each month, except July and August. The criminal court may adjourn to Danbury, Norwalk, or Stamford, in the discretion of the judge. (§ 1459.)

In Litchfield County, at Litchfield on the 1st Tuesday in March; at Winsted on the 1st Tuesday in September; at North Canaan on the 1st Tuesday in May, and at New Milford on the 1st Tuesday in December, and the judge may adjourn any term to any of the places designated.

Messrs. Gross, Hyde & Shipman, of Hartford.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF ERRORS.

The supreme court of errors is the highest court in the State, and sits for revision of errors in law of the superior court, courts of common pleas, district court, and city courts.

Chief Justice, Samuel O. Prentice, of Hartford. Associate Justices, Alberto T. Roraback, of North Canaan; George W. Wheeler, of Bridgeport; John K. Beach, of New Haven; and Edwin B. Gager, of Derby. Clerks of the superior courts act as clerks of the supreme court of errors. Reporter, James P. Andrews, of Hartford.

The judges of the supreme court of errors are by law also judges of the superior court, but judges of the superior court are not judges of the supreme court of errors. If, however, by reason of sickness or otherwise, a quorum of the supreme court cannot be had, the chief justice may call to the bench for the time being a judge of the superior court.

Terms. — First District, Hartford, Tolland, Middlesex, Windham, and Litchfield counties, at Hartford on the 1st Tuesdays in October, January, March, and May. Second District, New London County, at Norwich, last Tuesday in April and 3d Tuesday in October. Third District, New Haven and Fairfield counties, at New Haven on the 3d Tuesday in January and the 1st Tuesday in June; at Bridgeport, on the 2d Tuesday in April and the 4th Tuesday in October.

SUPERIOR COURT.

Jurisdiction. — The superior court has jurisdiction in all cases at law or in equity exceeding in amount the sum of five hundred dollars; also exclusive jurisdiction of divorce causes, appeals from probate, and criminal proceedings, except for petty offenses cognizable by a justice of the peace, and in New Haven, Fairfield, and New London counties, where certain criminal proceedings are in the jurisdiction of the court of common pleas.

Judges. — William S. Case, of Hartford; Joel H. Reed, of Stafford; Howard J. Curtis, of Stratford; Lucien F. Burpee, of Hartford; Gardiner Greene, of Norwich; James H. Webb, of Hamden; Donald T. Warner, of Salisbury; John P. Kellogg, of Waterbury; William M. Maltbie, of Granby; John E. Keeler, of Stamford; and Frank D. Haines, of Middletown.

The superior court in each county shall be deemed to be open daily, between ten o'clock in the forenoon and four o'clock in the afternoon (Saturdays ten to one), except on Sundays and legal holidays, and except during July and August, whether any judge is in attendance or not, for the purpose of entering appearances or judgment of nonsuit or default for want of appearance, filing pleas or amendments to pleadings and written motions.

No clerk of any court shall enter any judgment of default, or nonsuit, unless directed by the court, except where the parties fail to appear. (Acts 1909, ch. 148.) Or except where notice of intention to default has been filed. (Laws 1903, ch. 175.)

Writs may be made returnable on the first Tuesday in every month except July and August.

In the absence of special order, the short calendar is taken up every Friday, during the sessions of the court.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

This court is established only in Hartford, New Haven, New London, Fairfield, and Litchfield counties.

Jurisdiction. — In all counties where established, except Fairfield and Litchfield, and except within the territorial limits of the district of Waterbury, this court has exclusive jurisdiction in all cases in equity wherein the matter in demand does not exceed five hundred dollars, and in all cases at law wherein the matter in demand exceeds one hundred dollars and does not exceed five hundred dollars, and has concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court up to one thousand dollars, and said court has jurisdiction of all civil cases brought to it, according to law, by appeal from judgments of justices of the peace or other inferior courts, and of writs of error from such judgments. (General Statutes, 1902, §§ 534, 535.)

In Fairfield County and Litchfield County this court has concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court in law and equity wherein the matter in demand exceeds five hundred and does not exceed two thousand dollars, and exclusive jurisdiction at law where matter exceeds one hundred and does not exceed five hundred dollars. It has also jurisdiction concurrently with superior court on appeals from doings of commissioners on insolvent estates where matter in demand does not exceed two thousand dollars. (Public Acts 1917, ch. 315.)

The courts of common pleas within and for the counties of New Haven, Fairfield, and New London, in addition to their civil jurisdiction, have criminal jurisdiction in all appeals from the judgment of any city, borough, police, or town court, or justice of the peace, in said counties respectively, except such as are now by law required to be taken to the district court at Waterbury, in the county of New Haven. (§ 1469.)

Judges. — Hartford County, Edward L. Smith (associate judge, Daniel A. Markham); New Haven County, Isaac Wolfe and Ernest C. Simpson; New London County, Charles B. Waller; Fairfield County, John R. Booth, civil side, and John J. Walsh, criminal side; Litchfield County, James P. Woodruff.

Terms. — In Hartford County, on the 1st Tuesday in September. (Public Acts 1915, ch. 50.)

In New Haven County, on the 4th Tuesday in September. In New Haven County there are two judges of the court, who hold the respective civil and criminal terms as they allot, and either judge may hold a session of court, and proceed with the transaction of any business not being heard by the other judge. (§ 444.)

In New London County, for civil business, at Norwich on the 1st Tuesdays in February and October, and at New London on the 1st Tuesdays in April and August, but may be adjourned from one of said places to the other.

In the County of Fairfield, at Bridgeport, for civil business, on the 1st Tuesdays in January, March, May, June, September, October, and November, and at Danbury on the 1st Tuesdays in February, April, and December, and the court may, at its discretion, adjourn from or to Bridgeport, Danbury, Norwalk, and Stamford, as the business of said court may require (§ 446); for criminal business, at Bridgeport, on the 1st Tuesday in each month, except July and August. The criminal court may adjourn to Danbury, Norwalk, or Stamford, in the discretion of the judge. (§ 1459.)

In Litchfield County, at Litchfield on the 1st Tuesday in March; at Winsted on the 1st Tuesday in September; at North Canaan on the 1st Tuesday in May, and at New Milford on the 1st Tuesday in December, and the judge may adjourn any term to any of the places designated.

The plaintiff or appellant in appeals from justices of the peace may designate in which of the places above named the matter shall be tried.

In all counties except New Haven and New London, the return day of the writ is the first Tuesday in any month except July and August; provided, that service be completed at least twelve days before such return day, and every process shall be made returnable to the next return day or the next but one to which it can be made so returnable.

In New Haven and New London Counties the return day is the first Tuesday in any month of the year. (Public Acts 1915, ch. 74.)

On every week day, except in July and August and on legal holidays, the court of common pleas in the counties of Hartford, Fairfield, New Haven, and Litchfield shall be deemed to be open for the purpose of entering appearances, judgments of nonsuit, defaults for want of appearance or where notice to suffer a default has been filed, and filing pleadings, amendments, and written motions, between the hours of ten and four (Saturdays ten to one). (Acts 1903, ch. 175; Acts 1909, ch. 148.)

NOTE. — In the counties of Windham, Tolland, and Middlesex, where there are no courts of common pleas, the superior court has jurisdiction in all cases not within the jurisdiction of a justice of the peace.

DISTRICT COURT.

The judicial district of Waterbury comprises the town of Waterbury and certain other towns in the counties of Litchfield and New Haven. The district court has concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court in certain cases, and also jurisdiction of all civil actions wherein the matter in demand exceeds one hundred dollars, provided that in every cause one of the parties resides within the limits of the district. (§§ 435, 538.) But every such case in which the matter in demand exceeds five hundred dollars may be removed to the superior court by either party. (Acts 1905, ch. 33.)

CITY COURTS.

Each of the cities of New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Meriden, Waterbury, New London, Middletown, New Britain, Rockville, Danbury, Putnam, Norwich, Ansonia, Derby, Stamford, and Bristol has a city court having limited civil and (in most cases) criminal jurisdiction. City court civil terms are generally held every month; for criminal business they sit daily. There are also a number of town courts and borough courts.

PROBATE COURTS.

Probate courts have jurisdiction in all matters of probate of wills and settlement of estates of deceased persons and insolvent debtors, and commitment of insane. Appeals lie to the superior court. They have no stated terms for holding their courts, but sit daily, weekly, or whenever occasion requires, at the discretion of the judge. There are over one hundred probate districts in the State.

JUSTICE COURTS.

Justices of the peace have jurisdiction in all matters at law to the amount of one hundred dollars; but appeals may be taken from decisions of justices to the courts of common pleas, or superior court, as the case may be, in all cases except summary process. They also have criminal jurisdiction over petty offenses, a right of appeal being generally given to the superior court. In some instances their jurisdiction has been taken away by act creating a minor court.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

County Commissioners. — A board of three members in each county, appointed by the General Assembly for four years. They have the management of county property, and also grant licenses to sell intoxicating liquors in such towns as vote "license."

County Treasurer. — Appointed by the county commissioners.

State's Attorney. — One in each county, appointed by the judges of the superior court, for a term of two years. He acts as attorney in behalf of the State at criminal terms. (This is a distinct office from that of attorney-general of the State.)

Clerks of the Courts. — Appointed by the judges. They receive the files, processes, and documents returnable to their respective courts; make and keep the court records, keep the docket; issue executions on judgments, etc.

Prosecuting Agents. — Appointed by the county commissioners to prosecute violations of the liquor laws.

Sheriff. — One in each county, elected every four years. He appoints his deputies and jailers. He executes all lawful process directed to him, and is the conservator of the peace, with power to suppress all tumults and breaches of the peace.

Coroner. — One in each county, appointed by the judges, with the duties incident to such office. He must be an attorney at law. He has under him in each town a medical examiner.

Special terms of the supreme court may be called by the chancellor whenever a majority of the members of the court deem it expedient.

THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS FOR NEW CASTLE COUNTY.

Jurisdiction. — This court has concurrent jurisdiction in New Castle County with the superior court in civil actions arising ex contractu where the value of the matter in controversy, exclusive of interest, is between the sums of two hundred and five hundred dollars, and in all actions ex delictu where the value of the matter in controversy, exclusive of interest, does not exceed five hundred dollars. It also has authority to receive pleas of guilty from persons charged with crimes and misdemeanors and to impose sentence concurrent with the court of general sessions. Appeals from the court of common pleas may be taken to the superior court.

The court is presided over by one of the judges of the superior court and is in session continuously, excepting on Saturdays and during the months of July and August, during which months it may not be in session.

JUSTICES' COURT.

Justices of the peace have jurisdiction of causes of action arising from obligations, express or implied promise or contract for the payment of money, or render of rent or delivery of goods or for personal labor, and for statute penalties where the amount in demand shall not exceed two hundred dollars; also for trespass for direct injury to goods or to real estate when the damages claimed shall not exceed one hundred dollars. In New Castle County, the jurisdiction is limited to the hundred in which the justice resides and the adjoining hundreds, but to non-residents of Delaware through the county. (24 Del. Laws (1907), 644.) In Kent and Sussex counties, the jurisdiction extends through the county.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Prothonotary. — Clerk of the superior court, being the court of law, has charge of all its records, and attends court in person or by deputy. Prothonotary of Kent County is ex-officio clerk of the supreme court of the State.

Recorder in Chancery and Clerk of the Orphans' Court. — These two offices are always held by the same person. He has charge of all records of each of said courts, and issues all process and attends court in person or by deputy.

Register of Wills — Has charge of all wills and the records thereof, and of their probate and allowance, and issues all letters of, and passes upon all accounts of, executors and administrators and the recording of all releases of legacies and distributive shares of personal estate. He collects the collateral inheritance tax.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Cooper, Cooper & Osborne, of Jacksonville.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF FLORIDA.

Jurisdiction. — The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in all cases at law and in equity originating in circuit courts, and of appeals from the circuit courts in cases arising before county judges in matters pertaining to their probate jurisdiction, and in the management of the estates of infants, and in cases of convictions of felony in the criminal courts, and in all criminal cases originating in the circuit courts. The court has power to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, quo warranto, habeas corpus, and also all writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its jurisdiction. Each of the justices has power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the State upon petition by or on behalf of any person held in actual custody, and may make such writs returnable before himself or the supreme court, or any justice thereof, or before any circuit judge.

Chief Justice, Jefferson B. Browne. Associate Justices, W. H. Ellis, J. B. Whitfield, R. F. Taylor, and T. F. West.

Regular Terms. — At Tallahassee, 2d Tuesdays in January and June.

CIRCUIT COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — Circuit courts have exclusive original jurisdiction in all cases in equity; also in all cases at law not cognizable by inferior courts; in all cases involving the legality of any tax, assessment, or toll; of the action of ejectment and of all actions involving the titles or boundaries of real estate; of all criminal cases not cognizable by inferior courts; and original jurisdiction of actions of forcible entry and unlawful detainer, and of such other matters as the legislature may provide. They have final appellate jurisdiction in all civil and criminal cases arising in the county court, or before the county judge; of all misdemeanors tried in the criminal courts; of judgments or sentences of any mayor's court; of all cases arising before justices of the peace in counties in which there is no county court; and supervision and appellate jurisdiction of matters arising before county judges pertaining to their probate jurisdiction, or to the estates and interests of minors, and of such other matters as the legislature may provide. The circuit courts and judges have power to issue writs of mandamus, injunction, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, habeas corpus, and all writs proper and necessary to the complete exercise of their jurisdiction.

NOTE: The legislature created a 12th circuit court, but the supreme court has recently held, in the cases of State ex rel. v. Butler and State ex rel. v. Hilburn, that the act creating such 12th circuit was unconstitutional and void.

CIVIL COURT OF RECORD.

From and after June 14, 1915, each county having a population of seventy thousand or over, shall have a civil court of record, with exclusive original jurisdiction in all cases at law, including writs of attachments and garnishment when the matter in controversy does not exceed fifteen hundred dollars and does exceed one hundred dollars. Civil courts of record shall not have jurisdiction of cases in equity, or involving the legality of any tax, assessment, or toll, or of the action of ejectment or of actions involving the title of boundaries of real estate. Civil courts of record have concurrent jurisdiction with circuit courts in proceedings relating to forcible entry or unlawful detention of lands and tenements.

Circuit courts have appellate jurisdiction by writ of error in all cases decided by civil courts of record, and certiorari will lie from such appellate decisions of circuit courts to the supreme court.

COUNTY JUDGE.

The county judge has original jurisdiction in all cases at law in which the demand or value of property involved shall not exceed one hundred dollars; of proceedings relating to the forcible entry or unlawful detention of lands and tenements; and of such criminal cases as the legislature may prescribe. He has jurisdiction of the settlement of estates of decedents and minors, to order the sale of real estate of decedents and minors, to take probate of wills, to grant letters testamentary and of administration and guardianship, and to discharge the duties usually pertaining to courts of probate. He has the power of a committing magistrate, and issues all licenses required by law to be issued in the county.

COUNTY COURTS.

The legislature may organize, in such counties as it may think proper, county courts, which shall have jurisdiction of all cases at law in which the demand or value of the property involved shall not exceed five hundred dollars; of proceedings relating to the forcible entry or unlawful detention of lands and tenements, and of misdemeanors, and final appellate jurisdiction in civil cases arising in the courts of justices of the peace. The trial of such appeals may be de novo at the option of appellant. The county judge shall be judge of said court. Several such courts have been organized under acts of the legislature. County courts do not exist in counties having civil courts of record.

COUNTY CRIMINAL COURT.

The Constitution provides that there shall be established in the county of Escambia, and upon application of a majority of the registered voters in such other counties as the legislature may deem expedient, a criminal court of record, which court shall have jurisdiction of all criminal cases not capital which shall arise in said counties respectively.

There shall be six terms of said court each year.

In addition to such court in Escambia County, several such courts have been established.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

Justices of the peace shall have jurisdiction in civil cases at law in which the demand or value of the property involved does not exceed one hundred dollars, and in which the cause of action accrued, or the defendant resides in his district; and in such criminal cases except felonies as may be prescribed by law, and he shall have power to issue process for the arrest of persons charged with crime, and to make the same returnable before himself or the county judge for examination, discharge, commitment, or bail of the accused. Justices of the peace shall have power to hold inquests of the dead. Appeal from justice of the peace courts in criminal cases may be tried de novo under such regulations as the legislature may prescribe.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Commissioners. — Five county commissioners are elected in each county. Every county is divided into five county commissioners' districts, and one commissioner is elected from each district. The duties of county commissioners are, in general, the management of the taxation, finances, property, roads, and business of the county.

Clerk of the Circuit Court. — He is the clerk of the circuit court, with the usual duties of a clerk of a court of general jurisdiction. He is the recorder of deeds, mortgages, and all instruments required by law to be recorded in the county. He is clerk and auditor of the board of county commissioners.

Sheriff — Exercises the usual duties of this office.

County Assessor of Taxes. — He lists, values, and assesses for state and county taxes all the property in the county.

Tax Collector. — His duty is to collect the taxes due to the state and to the county in each county.

County Treasurer — Has custody of all funds belonging to the county. (This office has been abolished to take effect January 1, 1917.)

Superintendent of Public Instruction. — He has supervision of the public schools of the county.

Board of Public Instruction — Consists of three members, and has general management of the public schools in the county.

County Judge — Is judge of probate. Issues licenses. Has civil jurisdiction to one hundred dollars. Same criminal jurisdiction as justice of the peace. In counties in which county courts are organized he is judge of said court.

Judge of Criminal Court of Record. — In counties in which a criminal court of record is organized, he is judge of said court. There is a prosecuting attorney for said court and a clerk.

County Surveyor — Shall make all surveys within the county that he may be called upon to make. Statute fixes the amount of fees to be charged.

COURT CALENDAR FOR GEORGIA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised December 1, 1918, by Messrs. King & Spalding, of Atlanta.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF GEORGIA.

The supreme court has no original jurisdiction, but is a court alone for the trial and correction of errors in law and equity from the superior courts in all civil cases, and in all cases of conviction of a capital felony, and for the determination of questions certified to it by the court of appeals.

Chief Justice, Wm. H. Fish, of Americus. Presiding Justice, Marcus W. Beck, of Griffin. Associate Justices, Samuel C. Atkinson, of Brunswick; Hiram Warner Hill, of Greenville; S. Price Gilbert, of Columbus; Walter F. George, of Vienna. Reporter, George W. Stevens, of Atlanta. Clerk, Z. D. Harrison, of Atlanta.

Regular Terms. — At Atlanta, 1st Monday in March and 1st Monday in October.

COURT OF APPEALS.

The court of appeals has jurisdiction for the trial and correction of errors in law and equity from the superior courts in all cases in which such jurisdiction is not conferred by the Constitution on the supreme court, and from certain city courts. If in a case pending in the court of appeals a constitutional question is raised and a decision of the question is necessary to the determination of the case, the question shall be certified to the supreme court, which shall instruct the court of appeals on the question so certified. The court of appeals may at any time certify to the supreme court for proper decision any question of law on which it desires the instruction of the supreme court.

Chief Judge, Peyton L. Wade, of Dublin. Presiding Judge, Nash R. Broyles, of Atlanta. Judges, W. F. Jenkins, of Eatonton; Roscoe Luke, of Thomasville; O. H. B. Bloodworth, of Forsythe; and Alexander W. Stephens, of Atlanta. Clerk, Logan Bleckley, of Atlanta.

Terms. — Same as supreme court.

SUPERIOR COURTS.

The superior court, which sits in each county, has original jurisdiction in all civil cases, both at law and in equity, except in matters relating to the grant of administration, probate of wills, etc., where its jurisdiction is appellate only. The judgments of the superior court are subject to review by the supreme court, which sits twice a year at the capital of the State.

COURTS OF ORDINARY.

Courts of ordinary (or probate courts) have jurisdiction in matters pertaining to the grant of administration, the probate of wills, the sale of property belonging to, and the distribution of deceased persons' estates, the appointment and removal of guardians for minors and persons of unsound mind, the auditing and passing returns of executors, administrators, and guardians, etc., the binding out of orphans and apprentices, and of homestead and exemption applications. The judgments of the courts of ordinary are subject to be brought before the superior court, either by appeal or certiorari.

Terms are held the first Monday in every month.

COUNTY COURTS.

County courts have been established in several counties in Georgia. The jurisdiction extends in the town district of the county when the principal sum claimed on contract, or in tort, does not exceed five hundred dollars, and over the remainder of the county when the principal sum does not exceed five hundred, and not less than fifty dollars.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Justices' courts, which sit in each militia district once a month, have jurisdiction of all debts, where the principal sum does not exceed one hundred dollars, and in all cases an appeal may be had to a jury in said court, and errors complained of therein may be reviewed in the superior court by certiorari. In cases where the sum claimed is more than fifty dollars, an appeal is allowed to the superior court, which appeal carries the case to that court for trial, de novo, before a jury. Trials may be had at the first term.

MUNICIPAL COURTS.

The general assembly may abolish justices' courts in certain cities and in lieu thereof establish such courts with such jurisdiction as it may deem necessary. The following municipal courts have been established by acts of the general assembly:

Atlanta. — Municipal court of Atlanta.

Macon. — Municipal court of Macon.

Savannah. — Municipal court of Savannah.

Columbus. — Municipal court of Columbus.

Augusta. — Municipal court of Augusta.

CITY COURTS.

In the cities of Albany, Americus, Ashburn, Athens, Atlanta, Augusta, Bainbridge, Bazley, Blakely, Boston, Brunswick, Buford, Cairo, Camilla, Cartersville, Cedartown, Columbus, Darien, Dawson, Douglas, Dublin, Eastman, Elberton, Ellaville, Fort Gaines, Franklin, Gainesville, Gray, Greenville, Greensboro, Griffin, Haslehurst, Hinesville, Jackson, Jefferson, Jesup, La Grange, Leesburg, Lexington, Louisville, Macon, Madison, McRae, Millen, Monroe, Newnan, Oglethorpe, Pelham, Perry, Quitman, Reidsville, Rome, Sandersville, Savannah, Sparta, Springfield, Statesboro, Swainsboro, Sylvania, Sylvester, Thomasville, Tifton, Valdosta, Waycross, Waynesboro, Wrightsville, and Zebulon, there are city courts holding every three months, or oftener, and with the same jurisdiction over the county in which the court is held, and the same extent of jurisdiction as to collection of debts, as the superior court. Also a city court in Alma with criminal jurisdiction only.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Clerk of the Superior Court — Has charge of the records of the superior court of the county, issues all processes, attends in person or by deputy on said court, and is a component part of the same; has charge also of the record of deeds, mortgages, executions, and all miscellaneous records of the county. He records any proper instrument presented to him for that purpose for a lawful fee provided therefor. In Fulton County the clerk of the superior court is also ex-officio clerk of the city court of Atlanta. And the clerks of superior courts throughout the State are generally also ex-officio clerks of the city courts of their respective counties.

Sheriff of the County — Executes and returns the processes and orders of the courts of the State, attends upon and serves the courts of record of his county, levies executions and sells property thereunder, and performs such other duties as may be imposed by law or which necessarily pertain to his office. The sheriff can also serve all summons, executions, or other processes issued by justice courts.

Ordinary of the County — Presides over the court of ordinary, which has exclusive jurisdiction of the probate of wills, the granting of letters testamentary, the appointing of guardians, the issuing of commissions of lunacy, and all such other matters and things that appertain or relate to the estates of deceased persons, idiots, lunatics, or insane persons. He also issues marriage licenses, and is vested with power over roads, bridges, ferries, public buildings, paupers, county officers, county funds, county taxes, and other county matters as may be conferred by law when such matters are not specially in charge of a board of county commissioners of his county.

Justices of the Peace. — There is one justice of the peace elected by the people, and a notary public and ex-officio justice of the peace elected by the grand jury in every military district of the State. They have jurisdiction in all civil cases arising ex contractu, and in cases of injury or damage to personal property when the principal sum does not exceed one hundred dollars, and sit monthly at fixed times and places.

County Tax Receiver — Receives all property for taxation by the State and county, and makes up a digest and delivers it to the tax collector.

County Tax Collector — Collects all moneys due for taxes for both State and county, and has power to issue executions for taxation and to levy and sell property to satisfy such executions.

COURT CALENDAR FOR HAWAII.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Thompson & Cathcart, of Honolulu.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Regular terms are held at Honolulu on the second Monday in April and October; and special terms, at such times and places as the court may deem expedient.

Judges. — Joseph B. Poindexter and Horace W. Vaughn, both residing at Honolulu.

Jurisdiction. — This court has, in addition to the ordinary jurisdiction of district courts of the United States, jurisdiction of all cases cognisable in a circuit court of the United States.

SUPREME COURT OF HAWAII.

This court consists of three judges appointed by the President for a term of four years. Chief Justice, James L. Coke. Associate Justices, S. B. Kemp and Ralph P. Quarles, all of Honolulu.

Terms. — One term annually at Honolulu, commencing on the first Monday in October, and such adjourned or special terms as may be necessary. (Revised Laws, § 1631.)

Jurisdiction. — It has appellate jurisdiction in questions of law, or of mixed law and fact, brought before it on exceptions, error, or appeal from any other court, judge, magistrate, or tribunal, according to law, or by reservation of any circuit court or judge; and original jurisdiction in all questions arising under writs of error, certiorari, mandamus, prohibition, and injunction directed to circuit courts, or to circuit judges, or to magistrates, or to other tribunals, and returnable before the supreme court. The supreme court and the several justices thereof, in aid of their appellate jurisdiction, may issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, habeas corpus, and all other writs necessary or proper to complete exercise of said appellate jurisdiction. (Revised Laws, § 1628.)

CIRCUIT COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — The Territory is divided into five judicial circuits, in each of which there is one judge, except in the first circuit, where there are three judges holding court separately. The several circuit courts have jurisdiction: 1. Of all criminal offenses under the territorial laws, committed in the respective circuits or transferred by change of venue from another circuit. 2. Of all suits for penalties and forfeitures under the territorial laws. 3. Of all causes, civil or criminal, properly brought before them by appeal. 4. Of all civil causes at law except as otherwise provided. (See District Courts, below.) 5. Of all causes transferred by order of court on proof that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the court from which transferred, and of all causes transferred by agreement of parties and consent of court. (Revised Laws, § 1647.) The circuit judges have power at chambers within their respective jurisdiction: 1. To hear and determine all matters in equity. 2. To hear and determine all matters of divorce, separation, and annulment of marriage. 3. To grant probate of wills, to appoint administrators and guardians, to compel executors, administrators, and guardians to perform their trusts, to remove any executor, administrator, or guardian, to determine heirship, and to decree distribution of intestate estates. 4. To admeasure dower and partition real estate. 5. To legalize adoption and to decree affiliation of bastards. 6. To impanel a special jury of inquiry of idiocy, lunacy, or de mente insipiendo, or any other matter to be tried before any said judge at chambers. 7. To issue writs of habeas corpus. 8. To issue writs of error, certiorari, mandamus, prohibition, and quo warranto, and all other writs and processes according to law, to courts of inferior jurisdiction, corporations, and individuals. 9. To enlarge on bail persons confined, in all bailable cases. 10. To require either plaintiff or defendant to give security for costs in any civil cause. 11. To issue warrants for the apprehension in any part of the Territory of any person accused under oath of a crime or misdemeanor committed in the Territory, and to examine and commit such person for trial according to law. (Revised Laws, § 1648.) Provided, however, that the jurisdiction of circuit courts and judges is limited as follows: 1. Suits for penalty as aforesaid are triable only in the circuit where the alleged penalty or forfeiture was incurred. 2. Actions of ejectment, to quiet title, and of trespass quare clausum frangit are triable only in the circuit where the real property in question is situate. 3. Cause of divorce, separation, and nullity of marriage are triable only in the circuit where the parties last lived together as man and wife, or if they have not last so lived together in the Territory, then in the circuit where the applicant resides. 4. COUNTY OFFICERS.

Clerk of the Superior Court — Has charge of the records of the superior court of the county, issues all processes, attends in person or by deputy on said court, and is a component part of the same; has charge also of the record of deeds, mortgages, executions, and all miscellaneous records of the county. He records any proper instrument presented to him for that purpose for a lawful fee provided therefor. In Fulton County the clerk of the superior court is also ex-officio clerk of the city court of Atlanta. And the clerks of superior courts throughout the State are generally also ex-officio clerks of the city courts of their respective counties.

Sheriff of the County — Executes and returns the processes and orders of the courts of the State, attends upon and serves the courts of record of his county, levies executions and sells property thereunder, and performs such other duties as may be imposed by law or which necessarily pertain to his office. The sheriff can also serve all summons, executions, or other processes issued by justice courts.

Ordinary of the County — Presides over the court of ordinary, which has exclusive jurisdiction of the probate of wills, the granting of letters testamentary, the appointing of guardians, the issuing of commissions of lunacy, and all such other matters and things that appertain or relate to the estates of deceased persons, idiots, lunatics, or insane persons. He also issues marriage licenses, and is vested with power over roads, bridges, ferries, public buildings, paupers, county officers, county funds, county taxes, and other county matters as may be conferred by law when such matters are not specially in charge of a board of county commissioners of his county.

Justices of the Peace. — There is one justice of the peace elected by the people, and a notary public and ex-officio justice of the peace elected by the grand jury in every military district of the State. They have jurisdiction in all civil cases arising ex contractu, and in cases of injury or damage to personal property when the principal sum does not exceed one hundred dollars, and sit monthly at fixed times and places.

County Tax Receiver — Receives all property for taxation by the State and county, and makes up a digest and delivers it to the tax collector.

County Tax Collector — Collects all moneys due for taxes for both State and county, and has power to issue executions for taxation and to levy and sell property to satisfy such executions.

COURT CALENDAR FOR HAWAII.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Thompson & Cathcart, of Honolulu.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Regular terms are held at Honolulu on the second Monday in April and October; and special terms, at such times and places as the court may deem expedient.

Judges. — Joseph B. Poindexter and Horace W. Vaughn, both residing at Honolulu.

Jurisdiction. — This court has, in addition to the ordinary jurisdiction of district courts of the United States, jurisdiction of all cases cognizable in a circuit court of the United States.

SUPREME COURT OF HAWAII.

This court consists of three judges appointed by the President for a term of four years. Chief Justice, James L. Coke. Associate Justices, S. B. Kemp and Ralph P. Quarles, all of Honolulu.

Terms. — One term annually at Honolulu, commencing on the first Monday in October, and such adjourned or special terms as may be necessary. (Revised Laws, § 1631.)

Jurisdiction. — It has appellate jurisdiction in questions of law, or of mixed law and fact, brought before it on exceptions, error, or appeal from any other court, judge, magistrate, or tribunal, according to law, or by reservation of any circuit court or judge; and original jurisdiction in all questions arising under writs of error, certiorari, mandamus, prohibition, and injunction directed to circuit courts, or to circuit judges, or to magistrates, or to other tribunals, and returnable before the supreme court. The supreme court and the several justices thereof, in aid of their appellate jurisdiction, may issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, habeas corpus, and all other writs necessary or proper to complete exercise of said appellate jurisdiction. (Revised Laws, § 1628.)

CIRCUIT COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — The Territory is divided into five judicial circuits, in each of which there is one judge, except in the first circuit, where there are three judges holding court separately. The several circuit courts have jurisdiction: 1. Of all criminal offenses under the territorial laws, committed in the respective circuits or transferred by change of venue from another circuit. 2. Of all suits for penalties and forfeitures under the territorial laws. 3. Of all causes, civil or criminal, properly brought before them by appeal. 4. Of all civil causes at law except as otherwise provided. (See District Courts, below.) 5. Of all causes transferred by order of court on proof that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the court from which transferred, and of all causes transferred by agreement of parties and consent of court. (Revised Laws, § 1647.) The circuit judges have power at chambers within their respective jurisdiction: 1. To hear and determine all matters in equity. 2. To hear and determine all matters of divorce, separation, and annulment of marriage. 3. To grant probate of wills, to appoint administrators and guardians, to compel executors, administrators, and guardians to perform their trusts, to remove any executor, administrator, or guardian, to determine heirship, and to decree distribution of intestate estates. 4. To admeasure dower and partition real estate. 5. To legalize adoption and to decree affiliation of bastards. 6. To impanel a special jury of inquiry of idiocy, lunacy, or de ventre inspicendo, or any other matter to be tried before any said judge at chambers. 7. To issue writs of habeas corpus. 8. To issue writs of error, certiorari, mandamus, prohibition, and quo warranto, and all other writs and processes according to law, to courts of inferior jurisdiction, corporations, and individuals. 9. To enlarge on bail persons confined, in all bailable cases. 10. To require either plaintiff or defendant to give security for costs in any civil cause. 11. To issue warrants for the apprehension in any part of the Territory of any person accused under oath of a crime or misdemeanor committed in the Territory, and to examine and commit such person for trial according to law. (Revised Laws, § 1648.) Provided, however, that the jurisdiction of circuit courts and judges is limited as follows: 1. Suits for penalty as aforesaid are triable only in the circuit where the alleged penalty or forfeiture was incurred. 2. Actions of ejectment, to quiet title, and of trespass quare clausum fregit are triable only in the circuit where the real property in question is situate. 3. Cause of divorce, separation, and nullity of marriage are triable only in the circuit where the parties last lived together as man and wife, or if they have not last so lived together in the Territory, then in the circuit where the applicant resides. 4. Proceedings for probate of wills, appointment of administrators and trustees of estates of decedents, and for admeasurement of dower, and all matters concerning the administration and settlement of estates, may be brought only in the circuit where the deceased had his last domicile, provided that if he was last domiciled without the Territory the proceedings may be brought in any circuit where there is estate to be administered. 5. Proceedings for appointment of guardians and for all matters concerning guardian and ward shall be brought in the circuit of residence of the person, or the majority of the persons, in whose behalf such proceedings are begun, provided that if such person is, or a majority of such persons are, domiciled without the Territory, the proceedings may be brought in any circuit where there is estate of such person or persons. 6. Proceedings for partition may be brought only in the circuit where the real estate is situated, or if it lies in more than one circuit, where some or any part thereof is situated. 7. Proceedings for legalizing adoption and for affiliation of bastards shall be brought in the circuit where the parents or either of them reside, provided that if, in the case of adoption, the parents are deceased, or if either resides within the Territory, the proceedings may be brought in the circuit of residence of the adopting parent. 8 The power of issuing writs of error and other writs specifically named aforesaid shall be in the judge of the circuit where the alleged occasion for relief arises, provided that in case of any cause or proceeding already begun or pending, the power shall exist in the court or judge before whom such cause or proceeding has been begun or is pending, even though the alleged occasion shall have arisen in another circuit. (Revised Laws, § 1649.)

Terms of Circuit Courts.— First Circuit (embracing the Island of Oahu and all other islands not hereinafter mentioned), at Honolulu on the second Monday of January. Second Circuit (embracing the Islands of Maui, Molokai, Lanai, Kahoolawe, and Molokini), at Wailuku on the third Wednesdays of March and October, and at Lahaina, on the third Wednesday of June. Third Circuit (embracing the districts of Kohala, Kona, Kau, of the Island of Hawaii), at Kailua on the fourth Wednesdays of April and October; at North Kohala on the fourth Wednesday of July; and at Waiohinu on the fourth Wednesday of January. Fourth Circuit (embracing the districts of Hamakua, Hilo, and Puna of the Island of Hawaii), at Hilo on the second Wednesday of January. Fifth Circuit (embracing the Islands of Kauai and Niihau), at Lihue on the first Wednesdays of March, July, and November. (Revised Laws, § 1637, am. Law, 1911, p. 186.)

In the first and fourth circuits these terms may be held subject to adjournment from time to time or without day until the time fixed for the commencement of the next term; and in the second, third, and fifth circuits for twenty-four days subject to extension for not more than twelve days: provided that Sundays and legal holidays are accepted; that in the first circuit, unless by consent, no jury trial in any civil case shall be begun in March, June, or November, and no trial in any term case in July or August; and that the terms at North Kohala, Waiohini and Honokaa shall be held only for trial of causes without a jury. (Revised Laws, §§ 1644, 1646, am. Laws, 1907, pp. 58-60.)

DISTRICT COURTS.

These courts have original and exclusive jurisdiction of all civil actions, except as otherwise provided, where the debt, amount of damages, or value of property claimed, does not exceed fifty dollars, and concurrent jurisdiction in all civil actions, except as aforesaid, where the amount involved does not exceed three hundred dollars; but the district court does not have cognizance of real actions, nor actions in which title to real estate is in question, nor actions for libel, slander, defamation of character, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment, breach of promise of marriage, or seduction, nor of any civil matter required by law to be tried by a jury, nor jurisdiction to appoint referees in any cause. (Revised Laws, § 1662.) It also has certain criminal jurisdiction, the district magistrate having among other powers the power to commit for trial in certain cases. See Revised Laws, §§ 1664 et seq.

COURT CALENDAR FOR IDAHO.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1918-1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by Messrs. Hawley & Hawley, of Boise.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT.

The jurisdiction of the supreme court is both original and appellate. Its original jurisdiction extends to the issuance of writs of mandate, review, prohibition, habeas corpus, and all writs necessary to the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction. Its appellate jurisdiction extends to a review of all cases removed to it, under such regulations as are or may be prescribed by law, from the final decisions of the district courts. The court may reverse, affirm, or modify any order or judgment appealed from, and may direct the proper judgment or order to be entered, or direct a new trial or further proceedings to be had.

Terms. — Annually, at Boise, two terms, at Lewiston, one term, at Coeur d'Alene, one term, at Pocatello, one term; time for terms fixed by Court in January of each year.

DISTRICT COURTS.

The jurisdiction of the district court extends to all civil actions for relief formerly given in courts of equity; to all civil actions in which the subject of litigation is not capable of pecuniary estimation; to all civil actions in which the subject of litigation is capable of pecuniary estimation, which involve the title or possession of real estate, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand or the value of the property in controversy exceeds one dollar; to all special proceedings; to the issuance of writs of mandate, review, prohibition, habeas corpus, and all writs necessary to the exercise of its powers and to the trial of all indictments returned by a grand jury or informations filed by a county attorney. Its appellate jurisdiction extends to all cases arising in probate or justice courts, and to all other matters and cases wherein an appeal is allowed by law.

The district court judges, of whom there are fifteen in the State, fix their own terms; and as there are frequent changes it is impossible to give a schedule of dates which could be depended upon. The courts are held at the various county seats, semiannually, and at other times when ordered by the district judge.

PROBATE AND JUSTICES' COURTS.

The jurisdiction of probate courts extends to all probate matters, guardianship, insanity proceedings, and all civil causes in which the damage or debt claimed does not exceed the sum of five hundred dollars, exclusive of interest, and in which the title or possession of real property is not put in issue. The last clause, however, does not include actions of forcible entry, forcible detainer, or unlawful detainer. The jurisdiction of probate courts does not extend to civil actions for foreclosure of mortgages and other liens upon real and personal property.

Justices of the peace have similar civil jurisdiction where the debt or damage does not exceed three hundred dollars, in which the title or possession of real property is not put in issue, with the same exceptions as above relating to proceedings for forcible entry, forcible detainer, and unlawful detainer.

Both of these courts have criminal jurisdiction of misdemeanors punishable by fine not exceeding three hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months, or of both such fine and imprisonment.

Probate courts and courts of justices of the peace are always open for the transaction of business.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Sheriff — Preserves the peace; arrests criminals, and keeps them in charge; suppresses affrays, riots, etc.; attends all terms of court, except justice and probate courts; has charge of county jail; indorses, serves, and returns all process.

Clerk of the District Court — Is ex-officio auditor and recorder and clerk of the board of county commissioners. As auditor he issues all drafts upon the treasury, and as clerk of the county board he keeps a full record of the transactions of the board. As ex-officio recorder he has charge of all official records and the recording of deeds, mortgages, and all miscellaneous records. He has charge of the records of the district court for the county.

County Assessor — Assesses all property subject to taxation.

Probate Judge — Judge of probate, guardianship, and insanity matters, of probate court in civil and criminal matters within that court's jurisdiction; of juvenile court; issues alcohol permits under prohibition law. See Probate and Justice Courts.

Prosecuting Attorney — Prosecutes or defends civil and criminal actions, in all courts in which the State or county is interested or is a party; advises board of county commissioners when requested; attends grand jury; draws bills of indictment, information and accusation.

County Treasurer — Is ex-officio public administrator and tax collector. As treasurer he receives, keeps, and pays out on order of auditor county funds, and keeps account of same. As ex-officio public administrator he takes charge of estates for which no administrator has been appointed, when decedent has no known heirs and when letters of administration have been issued to him by the probate court as provided by law. As tax collector, after equalization by the county board while sitting as a board of equalization, he collects taxes. The taxes thus collected include both state and county taxes, and in most instances special taxes levied for school and municipal purposes.

County Superintendent of Public Instruction — Has general charge of the public schools of the county.

Surveyor — Makes surveys when required by the court or on application of any person; keeps records of official surveys; establishes corners and prepares plats in accordance with United States requirements. Must furnish copies of surveys to persons paying the legal fee.

Coroner — Holds inquests over bodies of suicides or persons murdered, or dying under suspicious circumstances; buries unclaimed bodies; acts as sheriff in all cases in which sheriff is interested or incapacitated. When acting as sheriff he assumes all that official's powers and duties.

County Board. — The affairs of the county are administered by a board of county commissioners, consisting of three commissioners who are elected every two years. This board audits all charges of every description against the county. It also sits as a board of equalization of taxes.

COURT CALENDAR FOR ILLINOIS.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1918-1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Musgrave, Oppenheim & Lee, of Chicago.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

The judicial power is vested in the supreme court, circuit courts, appellate courts, county courts, probate courts, criminal court of Cook County, superior court of Cook County, municipal court of Chicago, justices of the peace, police magistrates, and such courts as now exist, and may hereafter be created by law for cities and towns. (Const. art. 6, sec. 1.)

SUPREME COURT OF ILLINOIS.

The supreme court consists of seven judges, elected by districts for nine years, and has original jurisdiction in cases relating to the revenue, in mandamus and habeas corpus, and appellate jurisdiction in other cases. (Ibid. sec. 2.) Appeals lie directly to the supreme court from the circuit courts, the superior court of Cook County, the criminal court of Cook County, county courts, and city courts, in all criminal cases above the grade of misdemeanor, and cases in which a franchise or freehold, or the validity of a statute, or the construction of the Constitution, is involved, and in all cases relating to revenue, or in which the State is interested as a party or otherwise; and also in condemnation, contested election cases, and in proceedings for confirmation of special assessments and the sale of land for taxes and assessments.

Cases may be taken to the supreme court by writ of certiorari in all cases, except in actions ex contractu wherein the amount involved is less than one thousand dollars, exclusive of costs, and cases sounding in damages wherein the judgment of the court below is less than one thousand dollars, exclusive of costs. The appellate court may grant an appeal to the supreme court in any case, if the judges of the appellate court shall be of the opinion that it involves questions of law of sufficient importance.

Chief Justice, Warren W. Duncan, of Marion. Associate Justices, William M. Farmer, of Vandalia; Frank K. Dunn, of Charleston; George A. Cooke, of Aledo; James H. Cartwright, of Oregon; Clyde E. Stone, of Peoria; Orrin N. Carter, of Chicago. Clerk, Charles W. Vail, of Chicago. Reporter, Samuel Pashley Irwin, Bloomington. Attorney-General, Edward J. Brundage, of Streeter.

Terms. — At Springfield, 1st Tuesdays in October, December, February, April, and June.

APPELLATE COURTS.

There are four appellate courts. They have appellate jurisdiction only. They have jurisdiction of all appeals or writs of error from final judgments, orders, or decrees of the circuit courts, superior court of Cook County, county courts, the criminal court of Cook County, city courts, and municipal court of Chicago, except in those cases where appeals lie direct to the supreme court from the trial courts, as above stated.

Terms. — First District, held at Chicago, on the 1st Tuesdays in March and October.

Justices, William H. McSurley, Jesse Holdom, William E. Dever, all of Chicago. Clerk, James S. McInnery.

In the first district there are also two branch appellate courts held by three judges of circuit courts, designated by supreme court.

Justices Branch B, Albert C. Barnes, David F. Matchett, Chas. A. McDonald, all of Chicago.

Justices Branch C, John M. O'Conner, Charles M. Thomson, Thomas Taylor, of Chicago.

Terms. — Same as original court.

Second District, held at Ottawa on the 1st Tuesdays in April and October.

Justices, Dorrance Dibell, of Joliet; Duane J. Carnes, of Sycamore; John M. Niehaus, of Ottawa. Clerk, C. C. Duffy, of Ottawa.

Third District, held at Springfield on the 1st Tuesdays in April and October.

Justices, George W. Thompson, of Galesburg; Edgar Eldredge, of Ottawa; Emery C. Graves, Geneseo. Clerk, George L. Tipton, Springfield.

Fourth District, held at Mount Vernon on the 4th Tuesdays in March and October.

Justices, James C. McBride, Taylorville; Franklin H. Boggs, Urbana; Harry Higbee, of Pittsfield. Clerk, C. C. Johnson, of Mount Vernon.

COURT OF CLAIMS.

The Court of Claims consists of a Chief Justice and two Judges, appointed by the Governor by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, for a term of four years.

The Court has jurisdiction of all claims against the State of Illinois, and sits at Springfield, Illinois.

CIRCUIT COURTS (Hurd, 783).

Circuit courts have original jurisdiction in all cases at law and equity, and such appellate jurisdiction as is or may be provided by law. They are required to hold two terms each year in every county. The judges are elected for six years. (Const. art. 6, § 12.)

In Cook County there is a special criminal court which has exclusive original jurisdiction of all criminal offenses, except such as is conferred upon justices of the peace or the municipal court of Chicago. This court is presided over by the judges of the circuit court and superior court of Cook county, sitting alternately. (Const. art. 6, sec. 26; Hurd, 797.)

SUPERIOR COURT OF COOK COUNTY.

Jurisdiction. — Concurrent with circuit court. Held at Chicago.

Terms. — First Monday in each month.

The judge or judges of the superior court of Cook County, or of any circuit court, may at a regular term, or in vacation, appoint or call a special term of the court. (Hurd, 634.)

COUNTY COURTS (Hurd, 797).

Law Jurisdiction. — County courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit courts in all that class of cases wherein justices of the peace have jurisdiction, where the amount claimed does not exceed one thousand dollars, and in all cases of appeals from justices of the peace and police magistrates.

Probate Jurisdiction. — Also (except as noted) in all matters of probate, settlements of estates of deceased persons, appointment of guardians and conservators, and settlement of their accounts; all matters relating to apprentices; proceedings for the collection of taxes and assessments; and in proceedings by executors, administrators, guardians and conservators for the sale of real estate for the purposes authorized by law, and such other jurisdiction as may be provided by law.

Terms. — For law terms, see above.

Probate Terms. — First Monday in each month, and all matters cognizable at probate terms are also cognizable at the law terms.

The judges are elected for four years.

PROBATE COURTS (Hurd, 807).

In counties containing a population of seventy thousand or over, special probate courts are organized, and in such counties county courts have no probate jurisdiction, but such jurisdiction (see County Courts) is vested exclusively in the probate courts.

Terms. — First Monday in each month; but the law provides that they shall always be open for the transaction of probate business and other matters of which they have jurisdiction.

CITY COURTS (Hurd, 811).

City courts have concurrent jurisdiction with circuit courts within the city in which the same may be, in all civil cases, both law and chancery, and in all criminal cases arising in said city; also in all appeals from justices of the peace in the city. The practice is the same as that of the circuit courts. There are two or more regular terms of court, each year, at times fixed by the court. Special terms may be called as in circuit courts.

MUNICIPAL COURT IN THE CITY OF CHICAGO (Hurd, 815/).

Jurisdiction. — The municipal court has jurisdiction within the city of Chicago of all those classes of cases of which justices of the peace have jurisdiction outside of the city of Chicago where the amount claimed does not exceed one thousand dollars, and in all suits at law, for the recovery of money only, where the amount claimed does not exceed one thousand dollars. This court also has jurisdiction of all actions on contracts, express or implied, where the amount claimed exceeds one thousand dollars, and of all actions for the recovery of personal property, or for the recovery of damages for the conversion of, and injury to, personal property, the damages or injury exceeds one thousand dollars. It has jurisdiction of criminal cases in which the punishment is by fine or imprisonment otherwise than in the penitentiary.

Terms. — There are no stated terms. The court is always open for the transaction of business.

Note. — The office of justice of the peace for the territory within the city of Chicago has been abolished.

JUSTICES' COURTS (Hurd, 1605).

Justices of the peace have jurisdiction in their respective counties in the following cases when the amount claimed does not exceed three hundred dollars: 1, in actions on contracts, whether under seal or not, express or implied, for the recovery of money only; 2, for damages for injury to real property, or for taking, detaining, or injuring personal property; 3, actions for rent and distress for rent; 4, actions against railroad companies and any person or company controlling, operating, or using any railroad, for killing or injuring live stock, for loss or injury to baggage or freight, and for injury or damage to real or personal property, or for setting fire to the same by their engines or otherwise; 5, actions of replevin where the value of the property claimed does not exceed three hundred dollars; 6, for damages for fraud in the sale, purchase, or exchange of personal property, and in all cases where the action of debt or assumpsit will lie; 7, actions arising under the laws for the incorporation of cities, towns, and villages, or any ordinance passed in pursuance thereof; 8, actions arising under the law in relation to dram shops; 9, actions for the recovery of statutory fines or penalties; 10, actions by and against towns, cities, villages, or other municipal corporations which, if brought by an individual, might be brought before a justice of the peace; 11, to assess damages for sheep killed by dogs; 12, proceedings against vagrants or vagabonds; 13, actions arising under the laws for the preservation of fish and game; 14, actions of forcible entry and detainer; 15, all criminal actions in which the punishment is by fine only, and does not exceed three hundred dollars.

In garnishment by attachment or summons, the amount of the claim of the plaintiff, and not the amount named in the answer of the garnishee, determines the jurisdiction. (157 Ill. 176.)

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Board — Has custody of all real and personal property belonging to the county; manages, except as specifically otherwise provided, county funds and business; provides and maintains county workhouse and insane asylum; levies and collects taxes for county purposes.

County Clerk — Acts as clerk of county board; keeps record of its proceedings, of orders on county treasurer, of official bonds filed in his office, and performs such other duties as may be required by law.

County Treasurer — Receives county revenues and funds; disburses same on orders of county board, or as specifically authorized by law; accounts and reports to the county board, such reports being filed with county clerk and open to inspection.

State's Attorney. — Prosecuting attorney of county, and as such has charge of criminal prosecutions in behalf of State, within his jurisdiction.

County Attorney. — Appointed by county board; has charge of county litigation, tax, insanity, pauper cases, etc.

County Recorder — Keeps records of deeds, mortgages, corporation certificates, and other instruments. In counties of less than sixty thousand inhabitants the clerk of the circuit court acts as recorder.

Each county has also a sheriff, coroner, public administrator, surveyor, architect, agent, and physician, who perform the usual duties of such officers.

COURT CALENDAR FOR INDIANA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Miller, Dalley & Thompson, of Indianapolis.

SUPREME COURT.

Jurisdiction. — It has direct appellate jurisdiction from the circuit, superior, probate, and criminal courts of the State in the following cases: cases in which there is in question, and such question is duly presented, the validity of a franchise, or of an ordinance of a municipal corporation, or the constitutionality of a statute, state or federal, or rights guaranteed by the state or federal constitution; criminal prosecutions; actions to contest elections of public officers; cases of mandate and prohibition and actions or proceedings in quo warranto; cases of habeas corpus; actions to contest wills; proceedings to construe wills, in which no other relief is asked; proceedings to establish drains and to change or improve watercourses; condemnation proceedings for appropriation of lands for public use; proceedings to establish gravel roads and public highways and to vacate public highways; judgments granting or denying licenses to sell intoxicating liquors; prosecutions for contempt of lower courts; applications for admission to bar to practice law and proceedings to disbar an attorney at law; cases wherein amount of money in controversy, exclusive of interest and cost, on judgment of trial court exceeds six thousand dollars; interlocutory orders for payment of money or to compel execution of any instrument of writing or delivery or assignment of any securities, evidences of debt, documents, or things in action; interlocutory orders for delivery of possession of real property or sale thereof; appointing or refusing to appoint receivers, granting or refusing to grant or dissolving or overruling motions to dissolve temporary injunctions; interlocutory orders upon writs of habeas corpus: provided where order involves custody of infant, court from which appeal is taken shall make such order concerning care and custody of such infant during pendency of appeal as shall be for best interest of infant. (Burns, Ann. S. 1914, § 1392; Acts 1915, p. 149.) It has appellate jurisdiction from the appellate court in cases where the appellate court is equally divided, or where two of the judges of either division of the appellate court are of opinion that a ruling precedent of the supreme court is erroneous. Appeals are not allowed to the supreme or appellate courts in civil cases where the amount in controversy, exclusive of interest and costs, does not exceed fifty dollars, except that such cases involving the validity of a franchise, an ordinance of a municipal corporation, or the constitutionality of a statute, state or federal, or the proper construction of a statute, or rights guaranteed by the state or federal constitution, shall be appealable directly to the supreme court, for the purpose of presenting such question only.

Judges. — There is no distinction among the judges; each acts as chief justice in rotation for a single term. The supreme court is composed of the following judges: John W. Spencer, of Evansville; Moses B. Lairy, of Logansport; David A. Myers, of Greensburg; Lawson M. Harvey, of Indianapolis; and Howard L. Townsend, of Fort Wayne. Clerk, J. Fred France, of Huntington. Reporter, Will H. Adams, of Wabash. Attorney-General, Ele Stansbury, of Williamsport.

Regular Terms commence at Indianapolis on the 4th Mondays in May and November of each year. The court sits at chambers during the greater part of the year, and causes can be submitted by agreement, on briefs, at any time.

APPELLATE COURT.

Jurisdiction. — It has jurisdiction of all appealable cases of which the supreme court does not have jurisdiction, from the circuit, superior, probate, and criminal courts. The jurisdiction of the appellate court is final except where two of the judges are of opinion that a ruling precedent of the supreme court is erroneous or where the court is equally divided, in any of which cases the cause may be transferred or appealed to the supreme court.

Judges. — The court is composed of six judges and sits in two divisions. The State is divided into two districts. The judges resident in the first district constitute Appellate Court, Division Number One. The judges resident in the second district constitute Appellate Court, Division Number Two. Appeals from counties in the first district are assigned to Division Number Two; from counties in the second district to Division Number One. At each term one of the judges is elected chief judge. He presides at all meetings of the court and at all meetings of the division of which he is a member. The members of the other district select one of their number as presiding judge of that division. The judges serve as chief judge and as presiding judge in rotation each for a single term.

The judges are: Division No. One — Ira C. Batman, of Bloomington; Edward W. Felt, of Greenfield; Milton B. Hottel, of Salem. Division No. Two — Frederick S. Caldwell, of Winchester; Ethan A. Dausman, of Goshen; Joseph G. Ibach, of Hammond. Clerk and Reporter, same as supreme court. Regular Terms, same as supreme court.

CIRCUIT COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — The circuit court has jurisdiction in all civil cases of every kind, including probate jurisdiction and criminal jurisdiction in all counties where there is no probate or criminal court established by law. Terms in the various counties are from two to fifteen weeks.

SUPERIOR COURTS.

There are superior courts in thirteen counties, possessing concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit courts, except as follows: The Marion superior court has no jurisdiction in actions of slander and in criminal and probate matters; and the Allen, Delaware, Grant, Madison, Tippecanoe, Vanderburg, and Vigo superior courts have no jurisdiction of criminal and probate matters. The superior court of the county of Marion consists of five judges. The superior court of the county of Lake consists of three judges. Each of the superior courts located in the counties of Tippecanoe, Allen, Vigo, Madison, Vanderburg, Elkhart, and Saint Joseph consists of one judge, each court having its own judge. The superior court in Porter and Laporte counties consists of one judge, but the same judge holds court in each county successively. The superior court in Grant and Delaware counties consists of one judge, but the same judge holds court in each county successively. The practice, modes of appeal to supreme court, etc., are in all things similar to circuit courts, in matters where the jurisdictions are concurrent.

Terms. — Allen County, 2d Mondays in January, September, and November, and 1st Monday in April; Vigo County, 1st Mondays in March, June, September, and December; Marion County, 1st Monday in each month except July and August; Tippecanoe County, 1st Monday in January, 4th Monday in September, 2d Mondays in March and May; Vanderburg County, 1st Mondays in March, June, September, and December; Madison County, 1st Mondays in February, April, October, and December; Laporte County, Mondays succeeding terms of court in Porter County, Porter County, 1st Monday in September, 3d Monday in November, 1st Monday in February, 4th Monday in April, each term continuing five weeks; Lake County, 2d Monday in January, March, May, September, and November (the judge of Room 3 of said court holds court at Gary beginning on same dates) eight weeks terms, Grant and Delaware counties, four terms each year alternating five weeks each in Grant County, and six weeks each in Delaware County with a vacation during part of July and all of August; Elkhart County, 1st Monday in February, 4th Monday in April, 2d Monday in September, and 3d Monday in November; Saint Joseph County, 3d Mondays in February, May, and September, and 1st Monday in December.

CRIMINAL COURT.

There is one criminal court having exclusive criminal jurisdiction in its county. This court is located in Marion County.

Terms. — 1st Mondays in January and July, each term six months.

PROBATE COURT.

There is one probate court having original, exclusive jurisdiction in all matters pertaining to the probate of wills, the appointment of guardians, assignees, executors, administrators and trustees, and to the administration and settlement of the estates of minors, insane persons, aged, infirm and improvident persons, habitual drunkards, insolvents, estates of deceased persons, trusts, assignments, adoptions, and surviving partnerships and all other probate matters; concurrent jurisdiction in proceedings in partition, applications for appointment of receivers and actions against corporations by either creditors or stockholders and writs of habeas corpus, proceedings to resist probate, contest or construe wills, and to dissolve trusts, and all suits by and against executors, administrators, guardians, assignees, and trustees.

This court is located in Marion County.

Terms. — 1st Monday in each month except July and August.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

The Constitution provides that "a competent number of justices of the peace shall be elected by the voters in each township in the several counties. They shall continue in office four years, and their powers and duties shall be prescribed by law." The law permits the board of county commissioners to regulate the number of justices of the peace in each township, which cannot, however, exceed five in a township containing an incorporated city, and gives them very considerable powers. These officers have limited jurisdiction within their own township, and their jurisdiction extends throughout the county in many affairs. Justices of the peace have jurisdiction to the amount of two hundred dollars, in collections, within the township where the debtor resides, but may render judgment, in confession, for any sum not exceeding three hundred dollars. They have jurisdiction in suits on joint obligations when one of the joint obligors resides in the township. In cities of the second, third and fourth classes, city courts have jurisdiction in certain limited civil cases up to the amount of five hundred dollars.

TOWN CLERK.

Town clerks have the same powers and jurisdiction as justices of the peace. They are elected for two years.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Clerk — Has charge of the records of all the courts of the county, issues all process, attends in person, or by deputy, all the courts of record, and is a component part of the same.

Auditor of the County — Has charge of all the accounts thereof. He issues all the drafts upon the treasury, and audits all claims thereon. He is the clerk of the county board. He makes the lists of taxes and has charge of the revenues and expenditures of the county.

County Recorder — Has charge of the record of deeds, mortgages, and all the miscellaneous records of the county. He records any proper instrument presented to him for that purpose, for the lawful fee provided therefor.

County Treasurer — Receives the duplicate of taxes filed in his office by the auditor and collects the same. He pays any drafts drawn on him by the county auditor. He collects the state as well as the county revenue, and pays the former to the treasurer of state only. He has charge of tax sales, etc.

COURT CALENDAR FOR IOWA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Coffin & Rippey, of Des Moines.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF IOWA.

The supreme court consists of seven judges elected by the people of the State for a term of six years.

Jurisdiction. — The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction only in cases in chancery, and constitutes a court for the correction of errors at law. It has power to issue all writs and process necessary to secure justice to parties, and to exercise a supervisory control over all inferior judicial tribunals. (Constitution, Art. V. secs. III., IV.)

Chief Justice. H. E. Deemer, of Red Oak. Judges. S. M. Ladd, of Sheldon; W. D. Evans, of Hampton; Byron W. Preston, of Oskaloosa; Frank R. Gaynor, of Le Mars; S. M. Weaver, of Iowa Falls; and B. I. Salinger, of Carroll. Clerk. B. W. Garrett, of Leon. Attorney-General. Horace M. Havner, of Marengo. Reporter. U. G. Whitney, of Sioux City.

Terms. — At Des Moines only, on the 2d Tuesday in January, the 1st Tuesday after the 1st Monday in May, and 1st Tuesday after the 3d Monday in September. (29 L. G. A. ch. 12, § 1.)

DISTRICT COURTS.

Jurisdiction of District Courts. — The State is divided into twenty-one judicial districts, in each of which district judges, from one to five in number, according to the size and population of the district, are elected by the people of the district for a term of four years. The district court is the sole court of general original jurisdiction in the State, and has original and exclusive jurisdiction of all actions, proceedings, and remedies, both civil and criminal, and has general supervision over all inferior tribunals to prevent and correct abuses, where no other remedy is provided. It has also exclusive jurisdiction of all appeals from justices of the peace and other inferior tribunals in civil and criminal cases. It has also original and exclusive jurisdiction of the probate of wills; the appointment and supervision of executors, administrators, and guardians of minors, idiots, and lunatics; the settlement of decedents' estates; the sale of real estate of minors or persons under guardianship; and of all other probate matters.

Times for Holding District Courts. — The district judges of each judicial district, on or before the first day of October in each odd-numbered year, determine the times for holding their courts during the two succeeding calendar years, which are to be entered of record by the clerk, and published for four weeks in a newspaper in each county in the district. If the judges in the district cannot agree on such appointments, the same shall be made by the chief justice of the supreme court. At least four terms a year shall be held in each county.

SUPERIOR COURTS.

Any city in this State containing seven thousand inhabitants may establish a superior court. The mayor, on the petition of one hundred citizens of such city, by and with the consent of the common council, may at any general election submit to the qualified voters the question of establishing such court. If a majority of votes cast at such election be in favor of said court, the same shall be established. A judge therefore is elected every four years. The law provides for a jury to consist of six members, but in all cities which are not county seats, and which now or may hereafter have a population of twenty-five thousand or more, in which superior courts are now or may hereafter be established, all causes triable to a jury shall be tried by a jury of twelve. (Ch. 13, L. 34, G. A.) The court has jurisdiction in all civil matters concurrent with the district court as now and as may hereafter be provided by law, except in probate matters and actions for divorce, alimony, and separate maintenance. It shall have exclusive original jurisdiction to try and determine all actions, civil and criminal, for the violation of city ordinances, and all jurisdiction conferred on police courts as now or as may hereafter be provided by law; and concurrent jurisdiction with justices of the peace, and writs of error and appeals may be taken from justices' courts in the township in which the court is held, and by consent of parties from any other township in the county. For the trial of criminal actions on information and complaint the court shall be open at such times and under such rules as the court shall prescribe. In actions by attachment, where real property is levied on by writs of attachment, the officers levying the writ shall make entry thereof in the incumbrance book in the office of the clerk of the district court, in like manner and with like effect as of levies made in the district court. The superior court has concurrent jurisdiction with the district court as to juvenile courts, detention homes, and schools (ch. 13, L. 33, G. A.); also as to dipsomaniacs, inebriates, and those addicted to the excessive use of narcotics. (Ch. 13, L. 33, G. A.)

It is a court of record, but its judgments, to be liens on real estate, must have transcripts thereof filed in the clerk's office of the district court. One term of court is held each month, except in August, commencing on the first Monday in each month, but as a police court it shall be always open for the dispatch of business.

This court has been established in the cities of Cedar Rapids, Council Bluffs, Keokuk, Oswein, Shenandoah, Perry, and Grinnell.

MUNICIPAL COURTS.

Any city having a population of over twenty thousand may establish a municipal court by popular vote. Upon such establishment the police court, mayor's court, justice of the peace courts, and superior courts, if any, within the city are abolished. Such courts have one judge for every thirty thousand inhabitants or major fraction thereof, and are courts of record having a seal. These courts have concurrent jurisdiction with district courts in all civil matters when amount in controversy does not exceed one thousand dollars except in probate matters, actions for divorce, alimony, separate maintenance, those directly affecting the title to real estate, and juvenile proceedings. Municipal court has no power to grant injunctions auxiliary to other relief demanded of which the court has jurisdiction. Said court has petty criminal prosecution. Provisions are made for jury trials in proper cases. Judgments of municipal courts may be made liens upon real estate in the county by filing transcript in the district court, and upon real estate in other counties by filing transcript in such county. The only municipal court in the State is one recently established in the city of Des Moines, having four judges.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — The jurisdiction of justices of the peace, when not specially restricted, is geographically coextensive with their respective counties, and extend to all civil cases (except cases in chancery, and cases where the question of title to real estate may arise), when the amount in controversy does not exceed one hundred dollars; but by consent of parties it may be extended to any amount not exceeding three hundred dollars.

SUPREME COURT OF KANSAS.

Jurisdiction. — This court has original jurisdiction in proceedings in quo warranto, mandamus, and habeas corpus, and jurisdiction in all cases of appeal from the district courts, where the amount or value in controversy in actions for the recovery of money exceeds the sum of one hundred dollars exclusive of costs, or regardless of amount where the tax or revenue laws, title to realty, damages for defamation, the state constitution, or the federal constitution, laws or treaties, are involved.

Chief Justice, W. A. Johnston, of Minneapolis. Associate Justices, Rousseau A. Burch, of Salina; Henry F. Mason, of Garden City; Silas Porter, of Kansas City; Judson S. West, of Topeka; John Marshall, of Topeka; John S. Dawson, of Hill City. Clerk, D. A. Valentine, of Clay Center. Reporter, O. L. Moore, of Abilene. Attorney-General, S. M. Brewster, of Troy.

Regular Sessions. — At Topeka, on the first Monday of every month except August and September, and on the first Tuesday of January and July.

DISTRICT COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — The district courts are courts of general original jurisdiction in all matters of law or equity, civil and criminal, not otherwise specially provided by law, and have jurisdiction in all cases of appeal from inferior courts and tribunals, and exercise a general supervision and control over all such inferior courts and tribunals to prevent and correct errors and abuses. The judges of the district courts within their respective districts have power in vacation or at chambers to hear and determine motions to grant, vacate or modify injunctions, discharge attachments, vacate orders of arrest, to issue writs of habeas corpus, to hear and determine proceedings under the same, to grant or vacate all necessary interlocutory orders, to hear and determine upon notice all demurrers, motions and questions of pleading, and generally to exercise such power at chambers as judges of courts of general jurisdiction might do at common law. The district judge being absent from the county, some of these powers may be exercised by the probate judge.

TIMES FOR HOLDING PROBATE COURTS.

In each organized county there is a probate court, which is a court of record. It has probate jurisdiction and care of the estates of deceased persons, minors, and persons of unsound mind, and also has jurisdiction in case of habeas corpus. The court consists of one judge elected for two years. He is his own clerk and holds regular terms. An appeal lies to the district court from final decisions of the probate court except in habeas corpus and injunction. The probate judge is also ex officio district judge for certain purposes in the absence of the latter from the county. Regular terms of the probate court commence on the first Monday of each month and continue until the first Monday of the next month. The probate judge may in vacation, however, perform all of the acts authorized to be performed in term time, except the making of settlements, allowing demands against estates, and hearing petitions for the sale of real estate. The probate judge is also the judge of the juvenile court, established in each county. The juvenile courts' jurisdiction extends to the care of dependent, neglected, and delinquent children. (L. 1905, ch. 190.)

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — Justices of the peace have original jurisdiction in all civil actions for the recovery of money only where the amount claimed does not exceed three hundred dollars; also to try the action of forcible entry and detainer, or detention only, of real property; to issue orders of attachment and garnishment in certain cases, and jurisdiction of actions for the recovery of specific personal property when the value of the property does not exceed three hundred dollars.

There are two justices of the peace in each civil township, whose term of office is two years. The county commissioners of any county, upon petition of a majority of all the voters of any township, etc., may make an order for such additional justices in such townships as they may deem proper.

Justices' courts are always open for the transaction of business cognizable before them.

Codefendants, living in adjoining counties, jointly or jointly and severally liable, may be sued in either county in which service may be had on one. (L. 1887, ch. 168.)

CITY COURTS.

In the cities of Atchison, Coffeyville, Leavenworth, Topeka, Wichita, and Kansas City there have been created courts known as "City Courts."

Jurisdiction. — Their jurisdiction is practically the same as the jurisdiction of the justice courts, except that in civil cases the City Courts in Coffeyville and Wichita have jurisdiction up to one thousand dollars, and in Leavenworth up to five hundred dollars. In the cities where "city courts" have been created, the jurisdiction of the justice courts has been restricted to civil suits involving one dollar or less.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Commissioners. — Three members; have general supervision over affairs of the county.

County Clerk — Has charge of county records and proceedings of the board of county commissioners, supervises assessments for taxes, and prepares and extends tax roll for county treasurer.

County Auditor — Has charge of the accounts and audits claims thereon. Great majority of counties have no auditor.

County Treasurer — Receives the tax rolls from the county clerk and collects the same, has charge of all moneys belonging to the county, and pays the same out on orders of the board of county commissioners; has charge of tax sales, etc.

Register of Deeds — Has charge of the records of deeds, mortgages, and all miscellaneous records of the county.

Sheriff — Performs the usual duties of such officer.

County Surveyor — Performs usual duties of such officer.

Superintendent of Public Instruction. — General supervision over schools, school districts, and school affairs.

Coroner. — Usual duties of such officer, and acts as sheriff in certain cases.

County Attorney. — Prosecuting officer of county — advises county officers.

Clerk District Court. — Duties such as title implies.

County Engineer — May be appointed by county commissioners to supervise roads and bridge work.

COURT CALENDAR FOR KENTUCKY.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by Messrs. Trabue, Doolan, Helm & Helm, of Louisville.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

JUDICIAL SYSTEM OF STATE.

The judicial power of the State (excepting as to impeachment cases alone, which are tried by the senate, sitting as a court of impeachment) is vested in one supreme court, styled the court of appeals; the circuit courts, one for each of thirty-six circuits now in existence; quarterly courts, one for each of 120 counties; county courts and fiscal courts, one for each county; justices' courts (and police courts in certain municipalities), the jurisdiction of justices' courts being coextensive with the county. (Ky. Const. §§ 109, 144.)

COURT OF APPEALS.

Appellate Jurisdiction. — By ch. 23, Acts 1914, p. 94, appeals to the court of appeals are allowed: —

1. As a matter of right. A. Where the title to land, or an easement therein, or the enforcement of a statutory lien thereon is directly involved. B. In all other civil cases where the value or amount in controversy, exclusive of costs, equals or exceeds five hundred dollars, provided that no appeal to the court of appeals is allowed. (a) To reverse a judgment granting a divorce or punishing for contempt. (b) From any order or judgment of the county court except for division of land or allotment of dower. (c) From any order or judgment of quarterly, police, fiscal, or justice's court. (d) From any bond having the force of a judgment.

2. As a matter of discretion the court of appeals may grant an appeal, upon motion therefor, where the value or amount in controversy is shown by the record to be less than five hundred dollars but to equal or exceed two hundred dollars, and (a) the ends of justice require the reversal of the judgment, or (b) the construction or validity of a statute, or the construction of a section of the constitution is necessarily and directly put in issue and is essential to a correct decision of the case. Provision is made by the act of 1914 for the ascertainment by the circuit court of the value or amount in controversy for purposes of appeal.

3. In the exceptional cases of proceedings by telegraph or telephone companies to condemn land a direct appeal from the county court to the court of appeals was allowed by ch. 49, Acts 1898, and by ch. 71, Acts 1904. Quære, Are these acts repealed by the act of 1914?

Original Jurisdiction. — The court of appeals has also original jurisdiction to issue such writs as may be necessary to give it control of inferior courts (Ky. Const. § 110), but this power is exercised only when the inferior court is proceeding outside of its jurisdiction or refuses to act within its jurisdiction and the case would otherwise be without remedy. See I. C. R. R. v. Baker, 154 Ky. 198.

*Organization of Court.*¹ — Chief Justice, W. E. Settle. Associate Judges, Shackelford Miller, John D. Carroll, Rollin Hurt, Gus Thomas, Ernest Clarke, and Flem D. Sampson. Clerk, Rodman W. Keenon. Attorney-General, Charles H. Morris. Reporter, R. G. Higdon.

By an act approved February 26, 1906 (ch. 6, Acts 1906), the court was authorized to appoint a commissioner of appeals to assist in the work of the court, and to continue in office at the pleasure of the court. Judge Wm. Rogers Clay is the commissioner under this act.

Regular Terms. — At Frankfort, 1st Monday in January, 2d Monday in April, and 3d Monday in September.

Limitation upon Appeals. — Appeals to court of appeals must be taken within two years, except in will contests, where the limitation is one year (Ky. Stat. § 4850), and some few special proceedings, election contests, etc.

CIRCUIT COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — Circuit courts have original jurisdiction of all actions and proceedings for the enforcement of civil rights, or redress of civil wrongs, except where exclusive jurisdiction is given to other courts; also in all cases of inquests upon idiots and lunatics.

They have appellate jurisdiction of the judgments and final orders of the quarterly courts where the matter in controversy is of the value of over twenty-five dollars, and from county courts where amount is over fifty dollars, exclusive of costs, and of judgments and final orders of county courts, on the probate of wills; the granting, refusing, or revoking of letters testamentary and of administration; the appointment and removal of guardians; the settlements of accounts of fiduciaries; in cases of bastardy; division and condemnation of land (except in the case of condemnation by telephone or telegraph companies, where the appeal is taken directly from the county court to the court of appeals; but see on this point, Court of Appeals, supra); allotment of dower, etc. This appellate jurisdiction extends to errors of fact as well as of law. (Ky. Stat. ch. 35, art. II.)

Provision is made by act approved March 10, 1906 (ch. 23, Acts of 1906), for calling special terms of the circuit court in any county (in case of congestion of business at the regular terms) for the trial of specially designated cases, and by ch. 119, Acts of 1912, for the designation of a special judge in the event the regular judge cannot attend.

COURTS OF LOUISVILLE. — JEFFERSON COUNTY.

Jefferson Circuit Court, Criminal Branch. — This court has exclusively criminal or penal jurisdiction. It alone can impanel a grand jury for Jefferson County. No grand jury in months of July, August, and September. Inquests upon idiots and lunatics may be held in this branch, but when no branch of the circuit court is in session the county court has jurisdiction to hold an inquest upon lunatics (not upon idiots).

Jefferson Circuit Court, Chancery Branch, First and Second Divisions. — The jurisdiction of these courts is confined to the City of Louisville and county of Jefferson. They have no other than chancery or equitable jurisdiction, and no action of exclusively common law jurisdiction should be commenced or prosecuted in said courts.

Jefferson Circuit Court, Common Pleas Branch, First, Second, Third, and Fourth Divisions. The jurisdiction of these courts is confined to the city of Louisville and county of Jefferson. They are courts of general common law jurisdiction created to exercise concurrently the civil common law jurisdiction of the circuit court for Jefferson County. They have no equity jurisdiction.

Terms. — In contemplation of law, they are always in session. Regular meeting in joint session on each Saturday, except during the summer months, to call dockets, assign cases for hearing, etc.

Courts of Covington, Kenton County. — By acts approved March 2, 1906, chs. 11, 12, and 13, Acts of 1906, the Kenton circuit court is divided into two branches, designated respectively as the "Criminal Common Law and Equity Division," and the "Common Law and Equity Division." Both divisions hold continuous sessions as separate courts, excepting that no dockets are made up during the customary summer vacation.

QUARTERLY COURTS.

These courts have jurisdiction where the matter in controversy, exclusive of interest, does not exceed two hundred dollars in value (Act June 10, 1893), and of all other actions and proceedings of which justices of the peace have jurisdiction. They have appellate jurisdiction from judgments of justices of the peace in all cases under recent act of legislature (ch. 73, Acts of 1904), and in like manner from judgments of police courts (within the county) in civil cases. Penal jurisdiction in certain cases is conferred by an act approved March 21, 1906 (ch. 97, Acts 1906), and likewise in certain tax matters jurisdiction by appeal from the county board of supervisors is conferred upon the quarterly court (Ky. Stat. § 4128).

COUNTY COURTS.

County courts have jurisdiction for probate of wills, granting and revoking letters testamentary and of administration; appointment and removal of guardians; settlement of accounts of fiduciaries; in cases of bastardy, division of lands, assignment of dower; establishment, alteration or discontinuance of ferries, roads, and passways; condemnation cases, e.g. railroads, etc.; concerning mills and dams built across water-courses, and also to hold inquests upon lunatics, when no circuit court in session in the county.

By an act approved March 21, 1906 (ch. 64, Acts 1906), as amended by Acts 1908, 1910, and 1912, the powers of a "juvenile court" are conferred upon the county court, which is invested with special jurisdiction for the protection, care, and custody of neglected, dependent, or delinquent children (males under seventeen, females under eighteen years of age).

JUSTICES' COURTS.

These courts have jurisdiction exclusive of the circuit court, but concurrent with the quarterly court, of all actions and proceedings for the recovery of money or personal property, where the matter in controversy, exclusive of interest and costs, does not exceed one hundred dollars in value. (Act June 10, 1903.) They have authority to issue distress warrants and attachments for rent, regardless of amount involved, but an attachment must be returned before and acted upon by a court having jurisdiction of amount involved, and likewise a distress warrant, if contested. (Ky. Stat. §§ 2301, 2303; Civil Code, § 652, etc.)

POLICE COURTS.

In cities and towns of the fourth, fifth, and sixth classes (that is, having a population of less than eight thousand) the police courts have jurisdiction in civil actions concurrent with the justices' courts of the county. (Ky. Const. § 143; Ky. Stat. §§ 3510, 3651, and 3710.)

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Judge — Presides over quarterly, county, and fiscal courts, the county court being the court of probate.

County Attorney — Represents Commonwealth and the county in all matters arising in the county court, and other matters of county business. An assistant county attorney is provided for Jefferson County (ch. 121, Acts 1906).

County Clerk. — Clerk of county court, recorder of deeds, wills, mortgages, etc., receiver of certain delinquent state taxes, collector of state license taxes, grants marriage license.

The Clerk of the Quarterly Court — May be the judge of the court or a clerk of his own appointment, except in Jefferson County, where the judge is required to appoint a clerk and a deputy clerk for a term of four years (ch. 80, Acts of 1906).

Sheriff. — Collector of current state, county, and district revenues. Chief ministerial officer of the courts, having usual duties of such officer.

COURT CALENDAR FOR LOUISIANA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1918-1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Merrick, Gensler & Schwarz, of New Orleans.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF LOUISIANA.

Jurisdiction. — The supreme court, except in cases hereinafter provided, has appellate jurisdiction only, extending to all cases where the amount in dispute, or fund to be distributed, whatever may be the amount therein claimed, exceeds two thousand dollars, exclusive of interest, and suits of divorce and separation from bed and board, and all matters arising therein. Suits involving alimony, for nullity of marriage, or for interdiction, or matters of adoption, emancipation, legitimacy, and custody of children. Suits involving the rights to homesteads, and all cases where the constitutionality or legality of any tax, toll, or impost whatever, or of any fine, forfeiture, or penalty imposed by a municipal corporation, shall be in contestation, whatever may be the amount thereof, and to all cases wherein an ordinance of a municipal corporation or a law of this State has been declared unconstitutional, and in such cases the appeal on the law and facts shall be directly from the court where the case originated to the supreme court; and to criminal cases on questions of law alone, whenever the punishment of death or at hard labor may be inflicted, or a fine exceeding three hundred dollars or imprisonment exceeding six months is actually imposed. It shall have such original jurisdiction as may be necessary to enable it to determine questions of fact affecting its own jurisdiction, in any case pending before it; it has exclusive jurisdiction in all matters touching professional misconduct of members of the bar, to disbar. The supreme court and each of the judges thereof with power has power to issue writs of habeas corpus in all cases where it may have appellate jurisdiction. It has control and general supervision over all inferior courts, and power to issue writs of certiorari, mandamus, quo warranto, and other remedial writs.

Chief Justice, Frank A. Monroe, of New Orleans. Associate Justices, Walter B. Sommerville, of New Orleans; Charles A. O'Neill, of Franklin; O. O. Provosty, of Pointe Coupée; and Paul Leche, of Donaldsonville. Reporter, Charles G. Gill, of New Orleans. Clerk, Paul E. Mortimer, of New Orleans. Attorney-General, A. V. Coco.

Regular Terms. — At New Orleans, from 1st Monday in October to end of June.

Appeals returnable to the supreme court: —

By act 106 of 1908, p. 163, the judge a quo fixes the return day of appeals to supreme court, fixing same in the order granting the appeal at a date not less than fifteen nor more than sixty days from date of said order.

Appeals tried by preference summarily: Cases for divorce, interdiction, and separation, recovery of wages, salary or compensation for personal or professional services, for payment of any bill, note, or other written unconditional obligation to pay money, all criminal cases, civil cases in which State is a party, constitutionality or legality of any tax, or where its collection is delayed, also where right to public office is involved, involving distribution of money or property in hands of executors and other representatives of successions, or in hands of sheriff, public officers, receivers, and garnishees, involving validity of wills, or where heirs claim to be put in possession of property, for expulsion of tenants, for payment of alimony, and from judgments upon awards of arbitrators, amicable compounders, or referees, and from judgments against sureties upon judicial bonds and injunction cases.

Cases triable during vacation: Writs of certiorari, prohibition, mandamus, quo warranto, and questions from courts of appeal.

DISTRICT COURTS.

The district courts, outside of the Parish of Orleans, have original jurisdiction in all civil matters where the amount in dispute shall exceed fifty dollars, exclusive of interest, and in all cases where the title to real estate is involved, or to office, or other public position, or civil or political rights, and all other cases where no other specific amount is in contest, except as otherwise provided. They have unlimited and exclusive jurisdiction in all criminal cases, except as otherwise vested, and in all probate and succession matters, and where a succession is a party defendant, and in all cases where the State, parish, or municipality or other political corporation is a party defendant, regardless of the amount in dispute; to all proceedings for the appointment of receivers and liquidators of corporations or partnerships. They have, outside of the parish of Orleans, jurisdiction of appeals from justices of the peace in all civil matters, regardless of the amount in dispute, and from all orders requiring a peace bond. Persons sentenced by mayors or recorders shall be entitled to an appeal to the district court. District judges have power to issue writs of habeas corpus to all persons in actual custody, in their respective districts. Cases in which punishment may not be at hard labor shall be tried by judge without jury. Cases where punishment may be at hard labor may be tried by a jury of five. Cases in which punishment is necessarily at hard labor, by jury of twelve, nine of whom must concur. Cases in which punishment may be capital, by a jury of twelve, all of whom must concur.

TIMES FOR HOLDING DISTRICT COURTS IN 1918-1919, FIXED BY RULE OF COURT.

Under the Constitution of 1913, these courts are required to hold continuous sessions during ten months of the year.

SESSIONS OF COURTS OF APPEALS IN COUNTRY PARISHES.

Until otherwise provided by the General Assembly, the court of appeals of the first circuit shall hold sessions of court at Baton Rouge, Amite, New Iberia, Houma, Franklin, Opelousa, Crowley, Lake Charles, Thibodeaux, and Donaldsonville, and such other places as may be designated by said court of appeals, and the court of appeals for the second circuit shall hold sessions of court at Monroe, Shreveport, Alexandria, Natchitoches, Vidalia, Tallulah, and Ruston, and such other places as may be designated by said court of appeals. The sessions of said courts of appeals shall continue in each circuit for a period of ten months, beginning on the first Monday in September of each year and ending on the last day of June of the following year; and said courts shall convene at the several places named as the public business may require, and shall keep their courts in session at such places until the cases before them are heard and finally determined. Until otherwise provided by law, the time and place for the return of appeals shall be fixed by said court.

JURISDICTION OF COURT OF APPEALS FROM CONSTITUTION OF 1913.

Until otherwise provided by law, the parishes of East Baton Rouge, West Baton Rouge, Livingston, Tangipahoa, Washington, St. Helena, Pointe Coupée, Iberville, St. Mary, Terre Bonne, Assumption, La Fourche, Ascension, Calcasieu, Allen, Beauregard, Jefferson Davis, Cameron, Vermillion, Lafayette, Iberia, St. Martin, St. Tammany, Acadia, East Feliciana, West Feliciana, St. Landry, Evangeline, and Vernon shall compose the first circuit and be known as the "Court of Appeal, First Circuit, State of Louisiana," and the parishes of Caddo, Bossier, Webster, Bienville, Claiborne, Union, Lincoln, Jackson, Caldwell, Winn, Natchitoches, Sabine, De Soto, Red River, Ouachita, Richland, Franklin, Catahoula, La Salle, Concordia, Tensas, Madison, East Carroll, West Carroll, Morehouse, Avoyelles, Rapides, and Grant shall compose the second circuit, and be known as the "Court of Appeal, Second Circuit, State of Louisiana."

The circuits above provided for, until otherwise provided by law, shall be divided in three districts each, as follows:—

The parishes of Calcasieu, Allen, Beauregard, Jefferson Davis, Cameron, Vermillion, Lafayette, St. Martin, Acadia, St. Landry, Evangeline, Vernon, and Iberia shall compose the first district of the first circuit.

The parishes of West Baton Rouge, Ascension, Pointe Coupée, Iberville, St. Mary, Terre Bonne, Assumption, and La Fourche shall compose the second district of the first circuit.

The parishes of East Baton Rouge, Livingston, Tangipahoa, St. Helena, St. Tammany, East Feliciana, West Feliciana, and Washington shall compose the third district of the first circuit.

The parishes of Richland, Concordia, East Carroll, West Carroll, Franklin, Catahoula, La Salle, Tensas, Ouachita, Madison, and Morehouse shall compose the first district of the second circuit.

The parishes of Bienville, Claiborne, Jackson, Lincoln, Caldwell, Union, Bossier, Winn, Webster, and Grant shall compose the second district of the second circuit.

The parishes of Caddo, De Soto, Natchitoches, Rapides, Sabine, Avoyelles, and Red River shall compose the third district of the second circuit.

For each of the circuits there shall be elected three judges, as herein provided for, one judge to be elected by the qualified electors of each district as above designated.

The courts of appeal as now organized and established are hereby recognized and confirmed, and the successors of the several judges now composing the said courts shall be elected at the expiration of their several terms for a term of eight years by the qualified electors of each respective district, the election to take place at the same time and place as the congressional election, next preceding the expiration of their terms. In case of death, removal, or resignation from office of any judge, the vacancy shall be filled by appointment by the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, until the next congressional election, at which time his successor shall be elected. The courts of appeal may arrange for an interchange of judges from one circuit to the other when a member of the court is unable to attend from sickness or other cause. Until otherwise provided by the general assembly, the court of appeal of the first circuit shall hold sessions of court at Baton Rouge, Amite, New Iberia, Houma, Franklin, Opelousas, Crowley, Lake Charles, Thibodeaux, and Donaldsonville, and such other places as may be designated by said court of appeal; and the court of appeal for the second circuit shall hold sessions of court at Monroe, Shreveport, Alexander, Natchitoches, Vidalia, Tallulah, and Ruston, and such other places as may be designated by said court of appeal. The sessions of said courts of appeal shall continue in each circuit for a period of ten months, beginning on first Monday of September of each year, and ending on the last of each June in the following year; and said courts shall convene at the several places named as the public business may require, and shall keep their courts in session at such places until the cases before them are heard and finally determined. Until otherwise provided by law, the time and place for the return of appeals shall be fixed by said courts.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE IN COUNTRY PARISHES.

In each parish (except Orleans) justices of the peace shall have exclusive original jurisdiction in all civil matters, when the amount in dispute does not exceed fifty dollars, exclusive of interest, and original concurrent jurisdiction with the district court when the amount in dispute shall exceed fifty dollars, exclusive of interest, and shall not exceed one hundred dollars, exclusive of interest. It shall have jurisdiction over all suits for the ownership or possession of movable property, not exceeding said amounts in value, and suits by landlords for possession of premises, when the monthly or yearly rent, or the rent for the unexpired term of the lease does not exceed said amounts. They have criminal jurisdiction as committing magistrates, and shall have power to bail in cases not capital nor necessarily punishable with hard labor.

DISTRICT COURTS IN NEW ORLEANS.

The civil district court in the Parish of Orleans is composed of five judges, and has original probate and civil jurisdiction in all cases where the amount in dispute, or the fund to be distributed, exceeds one hundred dollars, exclusive of interest, and in suits by married women for separation of property; in suits for divorce or separation from bed and board, the nullity of marriage, or for interdiction, and in suits involving the title to immovable property, or to office or other public position of civil or political rights, and in all other cases, except as otherwise provided, where no specific amount is in contest, and appointment of receivers or liquidators of corporations or partnerships; and appellate jurisdiction from the city courts in the Parish of Orleans. The civil district court is open for all purposes from the second Monday in October to June 30 in each year, except holidays, and open all the year for probate, partition, and insolvency proceedings, granting of writs, orders, etc. District judges have authority to grant, at chambers, interlocutory orders, and conservatory writs, and executory process, homologating accounts, when not opposed; to order family meetings and homologate the proceedings, to issue probate orders, etc., and generally all orders relating to the settlement of successions and the administration of tutors.

The criminal district court in the Parish of Orleans is composed of two judges, and has criminal jurisdiction only. The criminal court is open during the whole year.

COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE PARISH OF ORLEANS.

The court has exclusive appellate jurisdiction in all matters, civil or probate, arising in said parish, when the amount in dispute, or fund to be distributed, does not exceed two thousand dollars, exclusive of interest. It has authority to issue writs of mandamus, prohibition, certiorari, and habeas corpus in aid of its appellate jurisdiction. It is open from the 2d Monday in October to the last of June. All appeals are returnable not less than fifteen days nor more than thirty days from the date of the order, unless by consent of the parties. Act. 22 of 1914.

CITY CIVIL COURTS OF NEW ORLEANS.

There are two city civil courts in New Orleans. They have exclusive original jurisdiction if the amount in dispute does not exceed one hundred dollars, exclusive of interest, including suits for the ownership of immovable property, not exceeding that amount in value; suits by landlords for possession of leased premises, or for rent for the unexpired term of the lease when it does not exceed that amount, subject to appeal in all cases to the court of appeals, New Orleans. All appeals are tried de novo. The judges of said court shall have authority to issue marriage licenses and celebrate marriages, and execute commissions to take testimony. They are open the whole year.

PROBATE COURT.

The district courts exercise the functions of the probate court.

CITY CRIMINAL COURTS.

There are two criminal city courts in New Orleans. They have jurisdiction for the trial and punishment, subject to appeal to the criminal district court, of all offenses against the State, where the penalty does not exceed six months imprisonment, or a fine of three hundred dollars, or both. The judges of these courts have jurisdiction as committing magistrates, with authority to bail and discharge.

SUPERIOR COURTS.

These courts are established only in Androscoggin, Cumberland and Kennebec counties with one judge for each. Clerks of the supreme judicial courts in those counties are clerks also of the superior courts.

Jurisdiction within the respective counties is: —

In Cumberland exclusive appellate jurisdiction of civil appeals from municipal courts and trial justices; exclusive original jurisdiction of scire facias on judgments and recognizances not over five hundred dollars, of all bastardy trials, libels for divorce, annulment of marriage, modification of decrees in divorce cases, and all other civil actions at law not exclusively cognizable by municipal and police courts and trial justices, where the damages demanded do not exceed five hundred dollars, except for flowage, real actions, and trespass quare clausum, and concurrent original jurisdiction of trespass quare clausum, and habeas corpus, and of all other civil actions at law except flowage and real actions; exclusive appellate jurisdiction of all criminal appeals and exclusive original jurisdiction of all other criminal cases in the county.

In Kennebec, exclusive appellate jurisdiction of civil appeals from municipal and police courts and trial justices, exclusive original jurisdiction of scire facias on judgments and recognizances not over five hundred dollars, of bastardy trials, of all other civil actions at law not exclusively cognizable by municipal and police courts and trial justices where damages demanded are not over five hundred dollars, except flowage, real actions, and trespass quare clausum; concurrent original jurisdiction of habeas corpus, libels for divorce; exclusive appellate jurisdiction of criminal appeals from municipal and police courts and trial justices, and exclusive original jurisdiction of all other criminal matters except indictments for murder. Venue of actions determined by general law. See Actions.

Both Cumberland and Kennebec superior courts have jurisdiction to decide citizenship of petitioner alleging citizenship in Maine.

Judges. — Cumberland, Lauren M. Sanborn, of South Portland; Kennebec, Fred Emery Bean, of Hallowell.

Terms. — Cumberland at Portland, 1st Tuesday in each month, except June, July, and August. Criminal business at January, May, and September terms. Kennebec, at Augusta, 2d Tuesday in January and 1st Tuesdays in April and September, and at Waterville, 2d Tuesdays in June and November. Criminal business at January, April, and September terms, together with civil business.

A Superior Court was established by Act taking effect early in July, 1917, for Androscoggin County. The Court is located at Auburn in said county, and has exclusive jurisdiction of civil appeals from municipal and police courts, and trial justices; exclusive original jurisdiction of actions of scire facias on judgments and recognizances not exceeding $500; of bastardy trials and all other civil actions at law not exclusively cognizable by municipal and police courts and trial justices, where the damages demanded do not exceed $500, except complaints for flowage and real actions and actions of trespass quare clausum; and concurrent original jurisdiction of actions of trespass quare clausum, libels for divorce, and proceedings in habeas corpus, and all other civil actions at law where the damages exceed $500, except complaints for flowage and real actions.

The original and appellate jurisdiction in all criminal matters now vested in the Supreme Judicial Court in said county was transferred to and conferred upon the Superior Court.

The presiding justice is Henry W. Oakes of Auburn, salary $3500. The court is held for civil business on the first Tuesday of every month except July, August and September, and criminal business on first Tuesdays of February, May and October.

COURTS OF PROBATE.

The probate courts have one judge in each county, and have exclusive original jurisdiction of probate of wills, granting administration, and appointments of guardians of minors and others incapable of managing their affairs, when the deceased resided in the county or died out of the State leaving property in the county, and where minors or others requiring guardians reside in or have property in the county. Cases originally within two counties are retained in the one where proceedings are first begun. They also have jurisdiction of all matters in insolvency as courts of insolvency and of adoption of children; also concurrent jurisdiction in equity in matters relating to administration of estates of deceased persons, wills, and trusts created by will or other written instrument. Stated times for holding courts are fixed by the judges in and for each county. If probate judge unreasonably refuses or delays appointment of administrator, the supreme court or any judge in vacation may appoint. As to jurisdiction over desertion by husband or wife, see Married Women.

MUNICIPAL COURTS

Are established in some of the larger places and have generally the jurisdiction of trial justices, civil and criminal. In a few cases this is enlarged by the statute creating them. Open for civil business at stated periods, and always for criminal business.

TRIAL JUSTICES

Have jurisdiction within their respective counties of civil suits to twenty dollars, of minor criminal matters, with power to fine and imprison varying in different cases; to examine, commit, and bind over in criminal cases beyond their jurisdiction to try, and in bastardy cases. (For appeals, see that head and Superior and Supreme Judicial Courts.) They also have jurisdiction of actions of forcible entry and detainer. If, however, title is set up in defense, the case is removed to supreme judicial court or superior court in the country. Always open for all business.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Sheriff. — In addition to his statutory duties in criminal and civil matters he is keeper of the jail in his county, and has charge of the prisoners therein. Has numerous duties respecting the detection of criminals and enforcement of the criminal laws. Also serves writs and precepts in civil matters. May appoint deputies, for whose official misconduct and neglect he is answerable.

County Attorney — Attends all criminal terms held in the county, and acts for the State in all cases in which the State or county is party or interested.

Clerk of Courts — Acts as clerk of the supreme judicial court in his county and as clerk of the county commissioners in his county, and performs various other duties prescribed by statute.

Register of Deeds — Keeps the records of deeds, mortgages, etc., relating to real estate in his county.

County Commissioners — Among other duties have the care of the property and management of the business of the county, procure all necessary supplies for the prisoners in the county jail, examine, allow, and settle accounts of the receipts and expenditures of the moneys of the county, make the county estimates and cause the county taxes to be assessed.

County Treasurer — Receives and disburses the moneys of the county in the manner provided by law.

Judge of Probate — Presides over the probate court, — for jurisdiction, etc., see above.

Register of Probate — Has the care and custody of all files and papers and books in the probate office, and records all wills proved, letters of administration or guardianship granted, bonds approved, accounts allowed, and such orders and decrees of the judge, and other matters, as he directs.

COURT CALENDAR FOR MARYLAND.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Brown, Marshall, Brune & Thomas, of Baltimore.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

STATE COURTS OF MARYLAND.

The judicial power of the State is vested in a court of appeals, circuit courts, orphans' courts, and for the city of Baltimore in the supreme bench of Baltimore city, composed of the superior court of Baltimore city, the court of common pleas, the Baltimore city court, the circuit court of Baltimore city, the circuit court number two of Baltimore city, the criminal court of Baltimore, four additional judges of the supreme bench, and the people's court hereafter referred to. Limited judicial powers are also vested in justices of the peace for the several counties of the State, and in some of the justices of the peace for Baltimore city as hereafter explained. All of these tribunals, excepting the justices of the peace and the people's court, are courts of record, and each of them has its seal, to be used in the authentication of all process issuing therefrom. The official character of justices of the peace is authenticated by certificate of the clerk of the circuit court of the county in which they exercise jurisdiction, under seal of said court; and if in the city of Baltimore, by the certificate of the clerk of the superior court, under seal of that court; or, in either of said cases the authentication may be by the certificate of the governor under the great seal of the State. All judges are, by virtue of their office, conservators of the peace throughout the State.

COURT OF APPEALS.

This court has appellate jurisdiction only, and its decisions are final, except in cases where an appeal lies to the supreme court of the United States under the Constitution of the United States and acts of Congress. Its jurisdiction is coextensive with the limits of the State. The court is composed of the chief judges of the first seven circuits and one from the city of Baltimore, one of whom is designated as chief judge of the court by the governor, by and with the consent of the State senate.

Chief Judge, Hon. A. Hunter Boyd, Cumberland. Associate Judges, Hon. John P. Briscoe, Prince Frederick, Calvert County; Albert Constable, Elkton, Cecil County; Hon. Henry Stockbridge, Baltimore City; Hon. N. Charles Burke, Towson, Baltimore County; Hon. William H. Thomas, Westminster, Carroll County; Hon. Hammond Urner, Frederick, Frederick County; Hon. John R. Pattison, Cambridge, Talbot County. Clerk, C. C. Magruder. State Reporter, Wm. H. Perkins, Jr. Attorney-General, Albert C. Ritchie, Baltimore.

Regular Terms. — At Annapolis, on the 2d Monday in January and the 1st Mondays in April and October, and continue throughout the year, excepting a short vacation at Christmas of a few weeks, and another from midsummer to the 1st Monday in October.

CIRCUIT COURTS.

The circuit courts for the several counties are the highest common law courts of record and original jurisdiction within the State, and each has common law powers and jurisdiction in all civil and criminal cases, and equity jurisdiction, and an appellate jurisdiction in all cases of appeals from judgments of justices of the peace, or from decisions of the county commissioners or officers of registration of voters. Their terms as courts of equity commence on the 1st Monday in January, March, May, July, September, and November, lasting two months each, and they are regarded as always open for the transaction of equity business. Process to compel appearances is returnable on 1st Monday of the ensuing month.

BALTIMORE CITY COURTS.

The judges of the supreme bench of Baltimore city (who are assigned every term to the superior court of Baltimore city, the court of common pleas, the Baltimore city court, the circuit court of Baltimore city, the circuit court number two of Baltimore city, and the criminal court of Baltimore, as the supreme bench may determine), are as follows: Morris A. Soper, Chief Judge. James P. Gorter, John J. Dobler, Carroll T. Bond, Walter I. Dawkins, James M. Ambler, Charles W. Heuveler, Henry Duffy, H. Arthur Stump, and Robert F. Stanton, Associate Judges. The supreme bench sits in banc to hear motions for new trials in the criminal court, for the examination of applicants for admission as attorneys, and for the supervision of the courts. It has power to make all needful rules and regulations for the conduct of business in the several courts.

The superior court of Baltimore city, the court of common pleas, and the Baltimore city court have concurrent jurisdiction in all civil common law cases, excepting as follows: That the court of common pleas has exclusive jurisdiction in all applications for the benefit of the insolvent laws, and the supervision and control of the trustees in insolvency; and that the Baltimore city court has exclusive jurisdiction in cases of appeal from judgments of justices of the peace in said city. (But see People's Court Law.) . . . By statute it is provided that plaintiff in actions ex contractu who swears to the correctness of his claim and files his cause of action, is entitled to final judgment at any time after fifteen days from the return day to which defendant is summoned unless defendant puts in a plea under oath. (See Local Laws of Md. art. 4, §§ 312, etc.)

The circuit court and the circuit court number two have exclusive jurisdiction in equity within the limits of the city, but have no jurisdiction in applications for the writ of habeas corpus, in cases of persons charged with criminal offenses.

The criminal court has jurisdiction in all cases of felony, and other crimes, offenses, and misdemeanors within the city.

Regular Terms of the Baltimore city court, superior court, and common pleas court are held on the 2d Mondays in January, May, and September. Suits may also be brought in said courts to a rule day. The rule days are the 2d Monday in every month. The regular terms of the circuit courts are on the 2d Mondays in January, March, May, July, September, and November, and the writ of summons may be issued, returnable on the 2d Monday of the ensuing month. The criminal court has the same terms as the law courts.

ORPHANS' COURTS.

These courts have jurisdiction to take probate of wills, grant letters testamentary and of administration, direct the conduct and settlement of the accounts of executors and administrators, and to examine, hear, and decide upon all accounts, claims, and demands existing between guardians and wards. By act 1896, ch. 246, they have jurisdiction over estates of persons absent and unheard from over seven years. They have seals for the respective courts, which are also used for the office of register of wills. This officer bears to the court the joint relation of clerk and auditor.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

The civil jurisdiction of justices of the peace extends to all cases for breach of contracts, and to obtain redress for wrongs (excepting suits on official bonds, 41 Md. 238), where the debt or damages claimed shall not exceed one hundred dollars. But no justice of the peace shall have any jurisdiction in actions where the title of lands is involved, nor in actions for slander, for breach of promise to marry, nor to enforce any lien for work done or materials furnished. In all cases where the amount claimed, or the thing in action, exceeds the sum or value of fifty dollars, and justices of the peace have jurisdiction, the several circuit courts of the State for the counties have concurrent jurisdiction with them.

By Code, art. 52, sec. 12, except in Baltimore city and Talbot, Harford, Frederick, and Montgomery counties, they are given concurrent criminal jurisdiction with the circuit courts in cases of assault, misdemeanors not penitentiary offenses, and prosecutions for penalties, reserving a right to a jury trial. Additional powers have been conferred on justices of the peace by Acts 1916, ch. 357.

PEOPLE'S COURT LAW.

By Act of 1912, ch. 823, the People's Court Law was enacted for Baltimore city. It provides that the governor shall designate five justices of the peace out of the number appointed by him for said city who shall be known as Justices of the Peace of the People's Court and one of whom shall act as presiding justice. They shall sit for trial of magistrate cases as assigned by the presiding justice and particularly take over all the trial work heretofore delegated to the justices of the peace throughout the city. The law provides for a designated number of constables who shall act as constables, bailiffs, and clerks for the said court, keeping the dockets, preparing the writs and all other papers. They also have authority to take acknowledgments and affidavits.

The other justices of the peace appointed by the governor for said city are to receive the salary of ten dollars as compensation for all duties of a civil nature, and shall also be entitled to charge fees for acknowledgments and affidavits.

The jurisdiction of all justices of the peace remains as heretofore.

This act was upheld by the court of appeals in Levin v. Hewes, 118 Md. 624.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Boards of County Commissioners (outside of Baltimore city) are the executive officers of the counties, manage the local affairs, and levy the county tax rate.

County Treasurer is general financial officer under direction of the county commissioners, collects all taxes and makes all county payments.

Clerk of the Circuit Court for each of the counties has the custody of all the court records, and is the recorder of deeds, mortgages, etc.

In Baltimore city the clerk of the superior court is recorder of deeds, and all taxes are collected by the city collector.

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

The court has original and exclusive jurisdiction of some special proceedings, and may on petition hear and determine all questions arising under wills. The court has appellate jurisdiction of matters determined by the probate court, except where, by special provisions, appeals lie to the superior court; and over decisions in review by the Industrial Accident Board. The court has original jurisdiction in equity of all matters cognizable under the general principles of equity, and may exercise equity powers in various special cases provided for by statute. The supreme judicial court sitting in banc has appellate jurisdiction of questions of law arising in any civil or criminal proceeding before a single justice of the court, or in the superior and land courts, or in the appellate division of the municipal court of the city of Boston, and may review certain orders or rulings of the Public Service Commission. A justice of the supreme judicial or superior court may, after verdict or after a finding of facts, report the case for determination by the full court; and may so report an interlocutory finding or order and stay all proceedings. The court has general superintendence over courts of inferior jurisdiction and may issue writs of error, certiorari, mandamus, prohibition, quo warranto, habeas corpus, and all other writs and processes necessary.

The first Monday of every month is a return day for writs and other processes; the court is always open in every county, and business may be transacted at any time; and in any county the court may make orders, render judgments or decrees, and transact business in cases pending in any other county.

Cases at law are tried before a jury if either party so requires, otherwise before a justice of the court alone; equity and probate cases are tried before a single justice of the court, but the court may direct issues to be framed for trial by a jury. A justice of the court sits in Boston every week to hear cases in equity and interlocutory matters.

Chief Justice, Arthur P. Rugg, of Worcester. Associate Justices, William Caleb Loring, of Boston; Henry K. Braley, of Boston; Charles A. DeCourcy, of Lawrence; John C. Crosby, of Pittsfield; Edward P. Pierce, of Brookline; James B. Carroll, of Springfield. Reporter, Henry W. Swift, of Boston. Clerk, for Suffolk County, John F. Cronin, of Boston. Clerk, for the Commonwealth, Clarence H. Cooper, of Boston. Attorney-General, Henry C. Attwill, of Lynn.

Jury Sitings are held for the several counties as follows:—

The full court sitting in any county has jurisdiction of all matters arising in and that might be heard by it in any other county, and it may upon application and in its discretion, direct a case to be heard in any county or at Boston.

SUPERIOR COURT.

This court has original exclusive jurisdiction of capital crimes, divorce and nullity of marriage, claims against the Commonwealth, actions of contract, tort, and replevin not within the jurisdiction of inferior courts, complaints for flowing land, petitions for partition not within the jurisdiction of the probate court, writs of entry for the foreclosure of mortgages, and other real actions not within the exclusive jurisdiction of the land court. It has original jurisdiction of petitions to enforce mechanics' liens (exclusive where the amount involved is not less than one thousand dollars, or in Suffolk County two thousand dollars) and of all other civil actions (exclusive in actions not within the jurisdiction of inferior courts or of the supreme judicial court) in which the sum demanded or value of the property claimed exceeds one hundred dollars (determined by the ad damnum of the writ), except replevin of beasts distrained for the recovery of a penalty or forfeiture or for damages, and summary process to recover land. It has original jurisdiction, concurrent with the supreme judicial court, of all suits in which discovery or relief is sought in equity. It has appellate jurisdiction of all actions begun in municipal courts (except that of Boston), police, or district courts (except cases heard by agreement of the parties before three justices), or before trial justices, of decisions upon claims against estates of deceased persons declared insolvent, of decrees of the probate court in proceedings by married women for separate support and custody of children, and other matters as to which an appeal is allowed, of certain decisions by arbitration committees of the Industrial Accident Board, and of decisions of the land court for a jury trial on the facts. It has original jurisdiction of all criminal offenses and misdemeanors, and appellate jurisdiction of all offenses tried and determined before inferior courts. It is always open in every county. Civil cases at law are tried before a jury if either party so requires, otherwise before a justice of the court alone. All criminal trials are with a jury. Civil sittings are held as follows: —

COURTS OF PROBATE AND INSOLVENCY.

There is a court of probate in every county, consisting in Suffolk, Middlesex, Essex, and Worcester counties of two judges, who sit separately, and elsewhere of one. The probate court has jurisdiction of probate of wills, granting administration, appointment of guardians for minors, insane persons, and spendthrifts, appointment of trustees under wills and other written instruments, and administration of such trusts (concurrently with courts of equity where such courts have jurisdiction); of changes of names by individuals; of petitions by married women concerning their separate estate, and for protection and support; of matters relating to the adoption, custody, care, and protection of minor children; and of partition of real estate held in common where the shares are not in dispute. If more than one probate court might have jurisdiction the court in which proceedings are first begun retains exclusive jurisdiction. The supreme judicial court and superior court have jurisdiction of appeals from the probate court as stated above.

The judge of the probate court is also judge of the court of insolvency, which is, however, separately organized, although with the same officials. The courts of insolvency are inactive, the state insolvency laws having been superseded by the Federal Bankrupt Law.

TRIAL JUSTICES, DISTRICT, POLICE, AND MUNICIPAL COURTS.

Trial justices within their territorial limits have exclusive original jurisdiction of summary process to recover possession of land, of replevin for distraint of beasts, and of actions of contract, tort, or replevin in which the debt or damage, or property sought to be recovered, is less than one hundred dollars (determined by the ad damnum of the writ), and concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court of such actions where such amount exceeds one hundred and is less than three hundred dollars.

Police and district courts, within their territorial limits, have substantially the same jurisdiction as trial justices, but the pecuniary limit in actions of contract, tort, and replevin is one thousand dollars; they also have jurisdiction of petitions to enforce mechanics' liens where the amount of the claim does not exceed one thousand dollars.

There are municipal courts established for different parts of the city of Boston. Within their territorial limits these courts have the same jurisdiction as police and district courts, except that the municipal court for the city of Boston (existing primarily for certain wards of the city proper) has jurisdiction up to two thousand dollars, and more extensive territorial jurisdiction.

All of these courts have a limited criminal jurisdiction. Their territorial jurisdiction, both civil and criminal, is restricted, but executions issued by them can be served and must be obeyed in every county to which they are directed. They have as a rule weekly sittings for civil business, and, except trial justices, usually sit daily for criminal business. All cases are heard by a single justice without a jury; but by agreement of parties cases in police, district, and municipal courts, except that of the city of Boston, may be heard before the regular judge and special justices of the court, sitting together, right of appeal being waived. The proceedings in all police, district and municipal, courts are governed by uniform rules, except the municipal court of the city of Boston, which has independent rules of its own. All cases, except those in the municipal court of Boston, may be taken to the superior court on appeal upon furnishing security in the sum of one hundred dollars. In the municipal court of Boston an appeal may be taken on questions of law to an appellate division of the court consisting of three judges, and thence to the supreme judicial court. A party against whom an action is brought in the municipal court of Boston may, if he desires a jury trial, remove the case to the superior court by filing a bond and affidavit; otherwise he waives a jury trial; as does the plaintiff when he begins his action in the municipal court of Boston, unless the defendant subsequently files a declaration in set-off.

LAND COURT.

The land court, for registering title to real estate substantially according to the so-called Torrens System, is composed of a judge and associate judge. The court has exclusive original jurisdiction of all applications for registration of title to land within the Commonwealth, and power to hear and determine all questions arising upon such applications; it also has exclusive original jurisdiction of writs of entry and various petitions for clearing title to real estate. All causes are tried and questions of fact finally determined by the court unless an interested party within a time limited claims a trial by jury. In case of such claim issues of fact are framed and tried by a jury in the superior court. The land court may enforce its orders or decrees in the same manner as decrees are enforced in equity. Questions of law arising in the land court or on such trial in the superior court may be taken to the supreme judicial court. The court sits in Boston, but may adjourn to other places.

COUNTY OFFICERS

County Commissioners. — There are three county commissioners, one elected annually, and two associate commissioners elected triennially, in each county except Suffolk and Nantucket, where the duties of commissioners are performed by municipal officers of the cities of Boston and Chelsea and by the selectmen of the town of Nantucket, respectively. The commissioners provide, to the extent of payments authorized by the legislature, for erecting and repairing court-houses, jails, and other necessary public buildings for the use of the county; they represent the county in all matters not otherwise expressly provided for, and establish and keep in the custody of their clerk their county seal; they lay out and construct county highways, and exercise judicial powers in respect to abatement of taxes, awarding damages for taking property by eminent domain, and in some other matters.

County Treasurer. — There is a treasurer elected every three years in each county except Suffolk and Nantucket, where his duties are performed by the treasurer of the city of Boston and of the town of Nantucket, respectively. The county treasurer collects, receives, and disburses all money belonging to the county.

Clerk of the Courts. — A clerk of the courts is elected for five years in each county except Suffolk, who acts as clerk of the supreme judicial court, superior court, and county commissioners. In Suffolk County a clerk of the supreme judicial court and two clerks of the superior court, one for criminal and one for civil business, are so chosen.

Register of Deeds. — A register of deeds is elected for five years in each county, or district where the county is subdivided into districts. The register of deeds receives for record and records instruments affecting title to real estate.

Register of Probate and Insolvency. — A register of probate and insolvency is elected for five years in each county. It is his duty to keep all records and all original papers in the custody of the courts of probate and insolvency.

Sheriff. — A sheriff is elected for five years in each county. The sheriff personally or by his deputies serves process and performs various other duties.

SUPREME COURT OF MICHIGAN.

Jurisdiction. — It has a general superintending control over all inferior courts. It has power to issue writs of error, habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, procedendo, and other original and remedial writs, and to hear and determine the same. In all other cases it has appellate jurisdiction only.

Act 250, Laws of 1903, provides that after January 1, 1905, the supreme court shall consist of a chief justice and seven associate justices. Three additional justices were elected at the November election, 1904, and assumed their offices January 1, 1905.

The justices are: Joseph B. Moore, Grant Fellows, Russell C. Ostrander, Flavius L. Brooke, John W. Stone, John E. Bird, Joseph H. Steere, and F. C. Kuhn. The chief justice changes January 1, each year; the senior justice acting as chief justice one year. (In some years the junior justice so acts.)

The clerk is Jay Mertz, of Lansing; the acting reporter of decisions is Richard W. Cooper.

Regular Terms. — At Lansing, 1st Tuesdays after the 1st Mondays in January, April, June, and October. (Ch. 1, Act 314, Laws 1915.)

CIRCUIT COURTS.

The circuit courts are courts of common law and equity. They have original exclusive jurisdiction of all actions for the recovery of damages where the amount claimed is, in actions of tort, more than one hundred dollars, and in actions on contract three hundred dollars, and concurrent jurisdiction with justices' courts in actions on contract where the demand is more than one hundred dollars and not more than three hundred dollars, and exclusive jurisdiction of actions involving title to real estate, for libel, slander, and malicious prosecution, and municipal corporations. They have also criminal jurisdiction and appellate jurisdiction over inferior courts (justice, probate, etc.). They are courts of record. (Const. of 1909, art. VII. §§ 8-12; ch. 2, Act 314, Laws 1915.)

The State of Michigan is at present divided into forty judicial circuits, some of which comprise two or more counties. One or more circuit judge is elected for each circuit, and he presides in the circuit court for each county. The terms of said courts are fixed by the circuit judges for their respective circuits, but at least three months' notice must be given of any change. (Act 314, chap. 7, Laws 1915.)

JUSTICES' COURTS.

There are four justices of the peace elected for each township, and such number in cities as is provided by the charters. They have original jurisdiction in all civil actions wherein the debt or damages do not exceed the sum of one hundred dollars, and concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit court in all civil actions upon contract, express or implied, wherein the debt or damages do not exceed three hundred dollars (usually), except that they have no cognizance of actions for libel or slander, or malicious prosecutions, and actions against executors or administrators, nor where the title of real estate comes in question.

The legislature has passed a law commonly known as the "New Judicature Act," same being Act No. 314, Public Acts of 1915. This law went into operation the 1st day of January, 1916, and changes the old procedure in force in this State in several more or less important particulars.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Each county has a sheriff, treasurer, register of deeds, county clerk, one or two circuit court commissioners, and one or more judges of probate, according to its population.

The sheriff is the executive officer of the courts, and performs such other duties as usually devolve on that officer.

The county treasurer takes charge of the county funds and discharges various statutory duties. Among other things he conducts the sale of lands for non-payment of taxes.

The judge of probate is the judge of the probate court.

The register of deeds has control of the records of deeds, mortgages, and all such other papers as are required or proper to be recorded in the county. It is his duty to see that all such records are properly made and indexed and kept ready for the inspection of all persons. To furnish certified copies when required by any party paying the legal rate therefor, and to perform certain other duties according to statutory requirements.

The circuit court commissioners in their respective counties have in general the judicial powers of circuit judges at chambers, and are authorized and required to perform all the duties and execute every act which a judge of the circuit court may perform and execute out of court except as otherwise provided by law. They have very many other duties to perform, some of which are entirely different from those of the circuit judge, and all of which are pointed out by the laws of the State. They execute the duties formerly belonging to masters in chancery.

The county clerk is the clerk of the circuit court. His duties are such as usually pertain to that office in other States. He is also clerk of the board of supervisors of the county.

DISTRICT COURT FOR RAMSEY COUNTY.

Judges. — Hascal R. Brill, William Louis Kelly, Olin B. Lewis, Grier M. Orr, Frederick N. Dickson, Hugo O. Hanft, James C. Michael, and Charles C. Haupt.

Terms. — General, 1st Monday in October, at St. Paul. Special for motions, every Saturday, except in July and August.

DISTRICT COURT FOR HENNEPIN COUNTY.

Judges. — Horace D. Dickinson, William E. Hale, Edward F. Waite, Charles S. Jelley, William C. Leary, John H. Steele, Joseph W. Molyneaux, Daniel Fish, and Chelsea J. Rockwood.

Terms. — General, 2d Monday in September, at Minneapolis. Special, for motions, every Saturday.

PROBATE COURTS.

Probate courts have exclusive jurisdiction of matters connected with settlement of estates of deceased persons, minors, insane persons, and probate of wills. No pleadings required.

Terms are held at the county seat of each organized county on the 1st Monday of each month.

MUNICIPAL COURTS.

These courts exist in the following cities, viz.: St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Stillwater, Winona, Mankato, Moorhead, Owatonna, Anoka, Brainerd, Waseca, Sauk Centre, Tower, Little Falls, and Ely. These courts have limited jurisdiction in civil and criminal actions. They are created by special acts, and vary in the extent of their jurisdiction. Provision is made for municipal courts in cities and in villages which are county seats or have one thousand inhabitants or more.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Justices have jurisdiction of all amounts under one hundred dollars, in civil actions, except cases involving title to real estate, false imprisonment, libel, slander, malicious prosecution, crim. con., seduction, or on promise to marry, or for an action against an executor, administrator, or guardian as such.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Exclusive of sheriffs, the titles and duties in brief, of county officers, are as follows:

Board of County Commissioners. — Composed of five members, except where county has an area exceeding five thousand square miles and population exceeding seventy-five thousand, then seven, with power to examine and settle all accounts of receipts and expenditures for county, and has general care of county property and management of county funds and business.

Auditor — Is clerk of board of county commissioners and keeps record of their proceedings, has custody of books relating to assessment of taxes, furnishes statements of delinquent taxes, and has charge of sales of land to enforce payment of such taxes.

Treasurer — Collects taxes, and receives, pays out, and has custody of all moneys belonging to county.

Register of Deeds — Has custody of books containing records of deeds and other papers authorized to be recorded, records all such instruments, and furnishes abstracts of title and certified copies of records in his custody. He is also registrar of titles.

Attorney — Appears in all cases where county is a party, prosecutes criminals, and upon request gives legal opinions to other county officers with reference to their duties.

Judge of Probate — Presides over probate court.

Court Commissioner — Exercises judicial powers of a district judge at chambers.

Clerk of District Court — Duties same as usually belong to clerks of courts of record.

Coroner — Acts for sheriff in case of vacancy or disqualification, and performs such other duties as usually appertain to the office of coroner.

Surveyor — Executes any survey ordered by any court, public board, or officer, or required by any person.

CHANCERY COURTS.

By the present Constitution and laws of the State, Mississippi is divided into ten chancery court districts, with a chancellor presiding in each. These courts are vested with full jurisdiction in all matters in equity, divorce, and alimony; testamentary and administration; of minor's business; cases of idiocy, lunacy, and persons of unsound mind, and all cases of which the said court had jurisdiction under the laws in force when this Constitution was put into operation.

Among the more important equitable jurisdictions exercised, are:

(1) Attachment issuing upon all demands founded upon any indebtedness whether legal or equitable, or for the recovery of damages for the breach of any contract, express or implied, or arising ex delicto against any non-resident, absent, or absconding debtor who has lands within this State, or against any such debtor and person in this state who have in their hands effects of, or are indebted to such non-resident, absent, or absconding debtor, and this jurisdiction has become very much used.

(2) Bills to cancel clouds upon title and confirm title to real estate, and substantially assuming the jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the courts of common law in ejectment.

(3) The equity jurisdiction covers all of the common heads of indebtedness, receivers, sequestration, etc., etc.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Justices of the peace have jurisdiction for the collection of debts of every kind, where the principal of the amount sued for does not exceed two hundred dollars.

Terms. — Their time for holding court is not definitely fixed by law; but they are required to hold a court once (or twice) a month within their respective districts, at such place therein as they may fix.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Board of Supervisors — Has jurisdiction over elections and registration of voters, roads, ferries, bridges, jails, and paupers, the levy of taxes and revision of tax lists, and general jurisdiction over matters of county police.

Chancery Clerk — Is clerk of the chancery court, and custodian of registry of deeds, mortgages, etc.; can take acknowledgments of deeds, etc.; is ex-officio notary public and clerk of board of supervisors.

Circuit Clerk — Is clerk of the circuit court; can take acknowledgments of deeds, etc., and is ex-officio notary public.

Coroner. — In addition to the ordinary duties of coroner, he acts as sheriff when the latter is disqualified; also performs the duties of ranger.

Tax Assessor — Makes all tax assessments. The sheriff of the county is ex-officio tax collector.

County Surveyor. — Duty to make all surveys directed by any court or requested by any landowner.

Justices of the Peace. — Conservators of the peace. Have jurisdiction of petty crimes and misdemeanors; and jurisdiction in civil suits where the principal amount, or value of the personal property in controversy, does not exceed two hundred dollars. They can take depositions, administer oaths, take acknowledgments of deeds, etc., and are ex-officio notaries public.

COURT CALENDAR FOR MISSOURI.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1918-1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Abbott & Edwards, of St. Louis.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF MISSOURI.

Jurisdiction. — The supreme court has appellate and superintending jurisdiction over circuit and other courts, and has power to issue writs of habeas corpus, quo warranto, mandamus, certiorari, and other remedial writs.

There are two divisions of this court, Division I. and Division II., and the court also sits en banc to hear certain causes assigned to be heard before all judges, either by the court en banc or by either division in which a cause is first pending.

The judges of the supreme court also meet as a court en banc with Waller W. Graves, of Butler, as Chief Justice. There are also commissioners of the supreme court to which it may refer any case or cases for preparation by the commissioners of a statement of facts and an opinion upon the legal question involved, and it shall, by order, provide for oral arguments before them and the submission of briefs in the cases referred to them. The commissioners, under the direction of the supreme court, may prepare and publish dockets from time to time and hear oral arguments. The commissioners or any of them may, upon order of the supreme court, sit with the court en banc or with either division. All statements of fact and opinions of said commissioners are to be promptly reported to the supreme court en banc or to such division as the court en banc may order, and the supreme court or the division thereof may approve, modify, or reject the same, and whenever it shall approve a report as submitted or modified, the same shall be promulgated as the opinion of the supreme court or division thereof, and shall have the same effect as an opinion of the supreme court.

Division I. — Presiding Judge, Henry W. Bond, of St. Louis. Associate Judges, Waller W. Graves, of Butler; James T. Blair, of Maysville; and Archelaus M. Woodson, of St. Joseph. Commissioners: Stephen S. Brown, of St. Joseph, and Robert T. Railey, of University City.

Division II. — Presiding Judge, Robert F. Walker, of St. Louis. Associate Judges, Fred L. Williams, of Joplin, and Charles B. Farris, of Caruthersville. Commissioners: Reuben F. Roy, of New London, and John Turner White, of Springfield.

Clerk, J. D. Allen, of Jefferson City. Reporter, Perry S. Rader, of Brunswick. Attorney-General, Frank W. McAllister, of Paris.

Regular Terms. — At Jefferson City, 2d Tuesdays of April and October.

COURTS OF APPEALS.

By § 12 of art. VI. of the Constitution of Missouri (of 1875), as modified by the constitutional amendment adopted at the general election held in November, 1884, and by legislation thereunder, the following intermediate appellate courts are established: —

1. The St. Louis Court of Appeals, sitting at St. Louis, and whose jurisdiction extends over the City of St. Louis and the counties of Audrain, Cape Girardeau, Clark, Franklin, Jefferson, Knox, Lewis, Lincoln, Madison, Marion, Monroe, Montgomery, Perry Pike, Ralls, St. Charles, St. Francois, Ste. Genevieve, St. Louis, Scotland, Shelby, Warren, Washington. The judges of this court are George D. Reynolds, of St. Louis (Presiding Judge), Wm. Dee Becker, and Wm. H. Allen, of St. Louis. Joseph Flory, Clerk. Alphonso Howe, Reporter.

2. Springfield Court of Appeals, sitting at Springfield and Poplar Bluff, Missouri, and whose jurisdiction extends over the following counties, to wit: Barry, Barton, Butler, Camden, Cedar, Carter, Christian, Dade, Dallas, Douglas, Greene, Hickory, Howell, Jasper, Laclede, Lawrence, McDonald, Newton, Ozark, Oregon, Polk, Pulaski, Phelps, Ripley, St. Clair, Shannon, Stone, Texas, Taney, Webster, Wright, Dent, Crawford, Maries, Reynolds, Iron, Wayne, Bollinger, Scott, Stoddard, Dunklin, Pemiscot, New Madrid, and Mississippi.

Cases from Butler, Carter, Ripley, Reynolds, Iron, Wayne, Bollinger, Scott, Stoddard, Dunklin, Pemiscot, New Madrid, and Mississippi are heard at Poplar Bluff, all others at Springfield.

The judges of the Springfield Court of Appeals are John T. Sturgis, of Neosho, John S. Farrington, of Springfield, and Wm. R. Robertson, of Joplin. Ben M. Neale, Clerk. J. L. Fort, Reporter.

3. The Kansas City Court of Appeals, established at Kansas City, whose jurisdiction embraces all the counties in the State other than those above named. The judges of this court are James Ellison, of Kansas City, Francis H. Trimble, of Liberty, and Ewing C. Bland, of Kansas City. L. F. McCoy, Clerk. John M. Cleary, Reporter.

Each of the said courts holds two terms annually, beginning respectively on the 1st Mondays of March and October.

Each of said appellate courts has, within its own territorial district, appellate jurisdiction as follows: Final appellate jurisdiction over the circuit and other inferior courts of record, except in the cases below specified; also, superintending control over inferior courts of record, and power to issue writs of habeas corpus, quo warranto, mandamus, certiorari, and other original remedial writs, and to hear and determine the same.

In the following cases, writs of error and appeals lie from the circuit courts throughout the State directly to the supreme court, namely: All cases where the amount in dispute, exclusive of costs, exceeds the sum of seventy-five hundred dollars; or involving the construction of the Constitution of the United States or of Missouri; or where the validity of a treaty or statute of or authority exercised under, the United States is drawn in question; or involving the construction of the revenue laws of Missouri, or the title to an office under the State; or involving title to real estate; or where a country or other political subdivision of the State or any State officer is a party; and all cases of felony.

In all these cases the supreme court has exclusive appellate jurisdiction and superintending control over the trial courts.

In any case decided by either of said courts of appeals, where any one of the judges thereof shall deem such decision contrary to any previous decision of either of said courts or of the supreme court, and requests that the cause be certified to the supreme court, such case must be forthwith certified to the supreme court, which must rehear and determine said cause. The last previous rulings of the supreme court are to control said courts of appeals on all questions of law and equity, and the supreme court has superintending control over said courts of appeals by mandamus, prohibition, and certiorari.

CIRCUIT COURTS.

The circuit courts have jurisdiction in all civil cases not given to probate courts or justices of the peace or county courts exclusively, and also in all criminal cases, except in the city of St. Louis and a few counties having criminal courts, and they have appellate jurisdiction in all cases determined by justices of the peace and courts of probate.

COURTS IN THE CITY OF ST. LOUIS.

Note. — Under a provision of the present Constitution of this State, the city of St. Louis has been separated from the county of St. Louis, and is not now subject to any county jurisdiction.

Terms. — Circuit court (which now includes the criminal and juvenile courts), 1st Mondays of February, April, June, October, and December. Judges, John W. Calhoun, J. Hugo Grimm, Charles B. Davis, Victor H. Falkenhainer, Wilson A. Taylor, Sam'l Rosenfeld, William T. Jones, Kent Koerner, George H. Shields, Karl Kimmel, Vital W. Garesché, Benjamin J. Klene, Thomas Bond, and Fred L. English.

Court of criminal correction, held daily. Calvin N. Miller, Judge of Division No. 1; Chauncey J. Krueger, Judge of Division No. 2.

Probate court 1st Mondays of March, June, and December, and 2d Monday of September. Charles W. Holtcamp, Judge.

OTHER CIVIL COURTS.

Besides the circuit courts, there have been established courts of common pleas at the following cities: —

At Hannibal, 2d Monday of January and April, and 3d Monday of September, held by the circuit judge; at Cape Girardeau, 4th Mondays of February, May, July, and November, John A. Snider, Judge; at Louisiana, 2d Monday of March, and 1st Mondays of September and December, held by the circuit judge; at Sturgeon, 4th Monday of May and 3d Monday of November, held by the circuit judge.

PROBATE COURTS.

In all the counties of this State, and in the city of St. Louis, probate courts have been established. Their jurisdiction is exclusively original of all matters concerning the granting of letters testamentary and of administration upon the estates of deceased persons; of the probating of wills; of the settlement of estates of decedents and of minors and imbeciles. From all final judgments and orders in such matters an appeal may be taken to the circuit court of the county by either of the parties to the controversy in the probate court.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Justices of the peace have a limited jurisdiction. They have original jurisdiction of the following actions: In all civil actions on contract, or in any statute, or in tort, where the debt or balance due or damages claimed, exclusive of interest, shall not exceed two hundred and fifty dollars.

In counties and cities having over fifty thousand inhabitants they have original jurisdiction in all civil actions to the amount of three hundred dollars.

In cities having three hundred thousand or more inhabitants justices of the peace have original jurisdiction of all civil actions where the amount in dispute, exclusive of interest and costs, does not exceed the sum of five hundred dollars.

In such cities every justice of the peace has jurisdiction coextensive with the city, except in landlord and tenant cases and in cases of forcible entry and detainer and unlawful detainer, which must be brought in the district in which the property to be affected is situated.

In all cases and regardless of number of inhabitants of the county or city, they have jurisdiction in any sum in any actions against railroads for damages for killing animals in the township.

Summary proceedings are provided by statute for recovery of possession of lands for non-payment of rent; also for recovery of possession of lands unlawfully detained, with or without force. But the merits of the title cannot be inquired into in such proceedings.

Justices of the peace have no cognizance of actions against any rightful executor or administrator; nor of actions for slander, libel, malicious prosecution, or false imprisonment; nor of any proceeding in equity or any action where the title to any lands or tenements is involved. In all such cases the jurisdiction is vested either in the probate or circuit courts.

The foregoing specification of civil actions in which justices have jurisdiction includes replevin, when the property does not exceed in value the sums stated above, except in cities and counties of over fifty thousand, where the limit is three hundred and fifty dollars (§ 7758).

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

The prominent county officials are —

County Judges, who sit as a court and administer the property and financial affairs of the county, and have jurisdiction and supervision of the county institutions.

County Treasurer, whose title indicates his duties.

County Assessor, who makes the valuations and assessments of property for taxation.

County Collector, who collects the revenues of the county; but in some counties the sheriff is also ex-officio collector.

County Recorder, whose duties are to register deeds and other instruments; but the circuit clerk is in some counties ex-officio recorder.

County Clerk, whose duties are to attend the county judges, keep their record and docket, and issue their process.

County or Prosecuting Attorney, who is the legal adviser of the county officials and also the public prosecutor.

County Sheriff, who executes the process of the circuit, county, and probate courts.

Public Administrator, who administers estates of deceased persons where there is no one having a prior right to do so, and acts as guardian for insane persons and minors having property and not having persons entitled to be their guardians; and Probate Judge, who is judge of probate court.

He receives and collects all taxes and sells all property that is delinquent for taxes; collects all licenses; pays all bonds of the county or legal subdivisions thereof and interest coupons thereof. He collects the state taxes as well as the county revenue.

District Court Clerk — Has charge of all records in the county; issues all processes; attends in person, or by deputy, all the courts of record; all papers in civil, criminal, and probate actions are filed in his office.

County Auditor — Audits and passes upon all claims against the county; has charge of furnishing of supplies for the county; has the disposition of necessities to indigent persons and county charges.

COURT CALENDAR FOR NEBRASKA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Francis A. Brogan, Esq., of Omaha.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF NEBRASKA.

Sec. 1. The judicial power of this State shall be vested in a supreme court, district courts, county courts, justices of the peace, police magistrates, and in such other courts inferior to the district courts as may be created by law for cities and incorporated towns. Sec. 2. The supreme court shall consist of seven judges; and a majority of all elected and qualified judges shall be necessary to constitute a quorum or pronounce a decision. The supreme court shall have jurisdiction in all cases relating to the revenue, civil cases in which the State is a party, mandamus, quo warranto, habeas corpus, and such appellate jurisdiction as may be provided by law. Sec. 3. At least two terms of the supreme court shall be held each year at the seat of government. (Constitution, title "Judiciary.")

Chief Justice, A. M. Morrissey. Judges, C. B. Letton, S. H. Sedgwick, W. B. Rose, A. J. Cornish, J. R. Dean (one vacancy). All of judges reside at Lincoln, the capital.

Terms. — At Lincoln, 1st Tuesday in January and 3d Tuesday in September in each year.

DISTRICT COURTS.

The district courts shall have both chancery and common law jurisdiction, and such other jurisdiction as the legislature may provide, and the judges thereof may admit persons charged with felony to a plea of guilty, and pass such sentence as may be prescribed by law.

TIMES FOR HOLDING DISTRICT COURTS.

There are no times fixed by statute for holding courts, but on the first day of January of each year the terms of courts are fixed by appointment of presiding judge.

COUNTY COURTS.

Sec. 15. There shall be elected in and for each organized county one judge, who shall be judge of the county court of such county, and whose term of office shall be two years. Sec. 16. County courts shall be courts of record, and shall have original jurisdiction in all matters of probate, settlements of estates of deceased persons, appointments of guardians, and settlement of their accounts, in all matters relating to apprentices; and such other jurisdiction as may be given by general law. But they shall not have jurisdiction in criminal cases in which the punishment may exceed six months' imprisonment, or a fine of over five hundred dollars; nor in actions in which title to real estate is sought to be recovered, or may be drawn in question; nor in actions on mortgages or contracts for the conveyance of real estate; nor in civil actions, where the debt or sum claimed shall exceed one thousand dollars. Sec. 17. Appeals to the district courts from the judgments of county courts shall be allowed in all criminal cases, on application of the defendant; and in all civil cases, on application of either party, and in such other cases as may be provided by law. (Constitution, title "Judiciary.")

§. A county court is established in each organized county, and is a court of record. The judge is ex-officio justice of the peace. Besides the probate jurisdiction proper, the judges have concurrent jurisdiction with district courts in civil actions in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, exclusive of costs, except, 1st. In any action for malicious prosecution. 2d. In any action against officers for misconduct in office, except when like proceedings can be had before justices of the peace. 3d. In actions for slander or libel. 4th. In actions on contract for sale of land. 5th. In any action wherein the title or boundary of land may be in dispute, or to order or decree the sale or partition of real estate. They hold terms beginning on the first Monday in each month for trial of civil actions.

MUNICIPAL COURT.

In the city of Omaha, there is a municipal court consisting of three judges having the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, and also jurisdiction concurrent with the county court in all civil cases, but no probate jurisdiction.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

Justices of the peace have jurisdiction coextensive with the justice of the peace district within which they are elected and where they reside, and extending to all cases wherein the sum in question does not exceed two hundred dollars, except in actions to recover for assault, assault and battery, malicious prosecution; against justices of the peace and other officers for misconduct in office, slander, verbal or written; on contracts for real estate, and actions in which the title to real estate is sought to be recovered or may be brought in question.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Attorney — Represents the State in all criminal prosecutions; appears on behalf of county when it is interested; gives opinions and advice to county officers and performs certain duties formerly exercised by the coroner. The office of coroner has been abolished.

County Board — Has charge and care of all county property; manages county funds and county business; lays out, alters, or discontinues county roads; examines and settles all accounts against the county; causes to be levied and collected the taxes authorized by law.

County Clerk — Acts as clerk of the county board; keeps the seal, records, and papers of the board; issues and countersigns all county warrants, and files all accounts acted upon by the board. In counties having less than eighteen thousand and three inhabitants, and until a register of deeds shall be appointed or elected and qualified therein, the county clerk shall be ex-officio register of deeds.

Clerk District Court — Issues all proper writs and orders; preserves all papers filed in his office; keeps the records and papers appertaining to the court.

County Judge. (See County Courts.)

COURT CALENDAR FOR NEVADA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by Cole L. Harwood, Esq., of Reno.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF NEVADA.

The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction in all cases in equity; also in all cases at law in which is involved the title or right of possession to, or possession of, real estate or mining claims, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine, or in which the demand (exclusive of interest), or the value of the property in controversy, exceeds three hundred dollars; also in all other civil cases not included in the general subdivision of law and equity, and also on questions of law alone, in all criminal cases in which the offense charged amounts to felony.

It consists of three judges, the oldest in commission acting as chief justice.

Regular Terms. — 1st Mondays in January, April, July, and October.

DISTRICT COURTS.

There are ten judicial districts, with one judge each, except the Second Judicial District, which has two, with concurrent and coextensive jurisdiction.

First Judicial District embraces the following counties: Storey, Douglas, and Ormsby. Frank B. Langan, Judge, Virginia City, Nevada.

Second Judicial District. — Washoe County. T. F. Moran and George Bartlett, Judges, Reno, Nevada.

Third Judicial District. — Eureka and Lander counties. Peter Breen, Judge, Eureka, Nevada.

Fourth Judicial District. — Elko County. E. J. L. Taber, Judge, Elko, Nevada.

Fifth Judicial District. — Nye County. Mark Averill, Judge, Tonopah, Nevada.

Sixth Judicial District. — Humboldt County. Edward A. Ducker, Judge, Winnemucca, Nevada.

Seventh Judicial District. — Esmeralda and Mineral counties. J. Emmett Walsh, Judge, Goldfield, Nevada.

Eighth Judicial District. — Churchill and Lyon counties. T. C. Hart, Judge, Fallon, Nevada.

Ninth Judicial District. — White Pine County. C. J. McFadden, Judge, Ely, Nevada.

Tenth Judicial District. — Lincoln and Clark counties. Charles Lee Horsey, Judge, Pioche, Nevada.

There are no district court terms. The district courts are always open for the transaction of business.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Justices of the peace have jurisdiction in civil cases when the demand (exclusive of interest) does not exceed three hundred dollars, except in suits relating to real estate or mining claims. They are always open. Service must be made from one to ten days before return day.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Clerk. — He has charge of the records of all the courts of record of the county, issues all the processes, attends in person, or by deputy, all sessions of the district court, and is a component part of the same; also acts as clerk of the county board. He is in several counties ex-officio county treasurer of the county. The County Treasurer receives the original tax roll, and collects the taxes upon property assessed upon said roll; he pays any drafts drawn upon him by the county auditor. He collects the State as well as the county revenue and pays the former to the state treasurer. He has charge of all tax sales.

County Recorder. — He has charge of the records of the county, also of all deeds, mortgages, etc. He records any proper instrument presented to him for that purpose for the lawful fees provided therefor. He is also ex-officio county auditor of the county; he has charge of all the accounts thereof; he issues all drafts upon the treasury, and audits all claims thereon; he makes a list of the taxes and has charge of the revenues and expenditures of the county.

Sheriff — Must attend sessions of district court, either by himself or deputy, serve all processes issued out of the district court; shall suppress all riots or insurrections in the county, and call upon the power of the county to aid in making any arrest, or in preserving the peace; he shall have custody of the jails in his county, and shall have care and custody of persons committed to said jails. Sheriff is frequently ex-officio assessor.

Assessor. — He assesses all property in the county, collects all poll taxes and taxes upon personal property.

County Commissioners. — They have full charge, control, and management of the county property, county affairs, and have to audit all claims against the county before they will be paid; they have to apportion all the moneys of the county into the different funds; they have to levy the taxes for the county and townships and fix the rate thereof; they fix a license upon and regulate places of business conducted within the county, act as a board of equalization to fix the amount of taxes upon any property, or to reduce or raise the assessment of the county assessor upon the said property; they pass all ordinances, employ all police officers and members of the paid fire departments in unincorporated towns and cities within said county, and do all other things necessary to carry on the county government.

MUNICIPAL COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — By Laws of 1915, ch. 30, the police or district courts were abolished and a municipal court was established in each city or town having not less than two thousand inhabitants, and in any town having less than two thousand inhabitants which so votes. These courts have the powers of a justice of the peace, and have original jurisdiction, subject to the right of appeal, of all crimes and offenses committed within the confines of the city where the court is located, or within any town in the same county which has no municipal court, and which are punishable by a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment in the house of correction or in jail not exceeding one year, or both. In towns having no municipal court, justices of the peace have concurrent jurisdiction with the municipal court of all crimes and offenses described in P. S. ch. 264, entitled "Offenses against the Police of Towns," provided that the governor shall, where a town shall so vote or the selectmen shall so petition, designate a justice of the peace in such town to be known as a trial justice, who shall have exclusive jurisdiction therein over the crimes and offenses described in said P. S. ch. 264.

In cities and towns of less than fifty thousand population, municipal courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court of civil causes in which the damages do not exceed one hundred dollars, where title to real estate is not involved, and where the defendant resides within the county in which said court is located. In cities of not less than fifty thousand population, municipal courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the superior court of civil causes in which the damages do not exceed five hundred dollars, where the title to real estate is not involved, and where the defendant resides within the county; provided, that the defendant may, within such reasonable time as may be prescribed by rule of court, request in writing a trial by jury, and the cause shall be at once transferred to the superior court; otherwise findings of fact in the municipal court to be final without appeal.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — The jurisdiction of justices of the peace is limited to the determination of civil causes in which title to real estate is not involved, and in which the damages claimed do not exceed thirteen dollars and thirty-three cents. Justices of the peace also have jurisdiction in all criminal cases where the punishment is by fine not exceeding ten dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding six months, or by both, and may hold to bail for appearance at the superior court in other criminal cases. Either party in civil causes, and the respondent in criminal cases, may appeal to the superior court (P. S. ch. 210; 69 N. H. 511.)

In towns where there is no police court, a justice of the peace may be appointed as trial justice. Trial justices, wherever appointed, supersede justices of the peace and have the jurisdiction of 1102 COURT CALENDAR FOR NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Justices of the peace, except that in civil actions their jurisdiction includes cases in which the damages demanded do not exceed fifty dollars. (Laws of 1911, ch. 86.)

See, also, Municipal Courts.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Convention — Consists of the representatives to the legislature from the towns within the county. Grants the county taxes, authorizes the purchase of real estate for the county and the sale of its real estate. Authorizes the construction and repair of county buildings and the issue of county bonds.

County Commissioners. — Three for each county. They are the general executive officers of the county, and have charge of all county property and supervision of the almshouse and house of correction. They purchase personal property for the use of the county, and when authorized by the convention purchase and sell real estate, erect county buildings, and issue county bonds. They audit all claims against or in favor of the county, and institute suits for the county.

County Treasurer — Issues warrants to the selectmen of the towns for the assessment and collection of the taxes granted by the county convention, receives all moneys due the county, and pays claims against and sums due from the county on the order of the county commissioners.

County Solicitor — Prosecutes and defends all suits in which the county is interested, and acts as state's attorney in criminal proceedings in the absence of the attorney-general.

Register of Deeds — Has charge of the records of deeds, mortgages, and other conveyances and attachments of real estate. Records any proper instrument presented to him for that purpose, for the fee provided by law.

Register of Probate — Is clerk of the probate court of the county, and has charge of the records thereof.

County Auditors. — Two for each county. They audit the accounts of the county commissioners and treasurer.

Sheriff — Has the usual powers of such officer. A sheriff or his deputy for any county has authority to serve civil or criminal process throughout the State. (Laws of 1911, ch. 147.)

COURT CALENDAR FOR NEW JERSEY.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., and Edward L. Katzenbach, of Trenton.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

COURT OF ERRORS AND APPEALS OF NEW JERSEY

Consists of the chancellor, the chief justice, and eight associate justices of the supreme court and six judges specially appointed, who are: John J. White, Ernest C. Heppenheimer, Henry S. Terhune, Robert Williams, Frank M. Taylor, and Walter Gardner. Has appellate jurisdiction only, and is the court of last resort of all causes.

Regular Terms. — At Trenton, 1st Tuesday in March and 3d Tuesdays in June and November. Clerk, Thomas F. Martin, secretary of state.

COURT OF CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY

Consists of the chancellor, Edwin Robert Walker, of Trenton, New Jersey, and eight vice-chancellors appointed by the chancellor under statutory authority, who are: Frederic W. Stevens, of Morristown; Eugene Stevenson, of Paterson; John Griffin, of Jersey City; Edmund B. Leaming, of Camden; Vivian M. Lewis, of Paterson; John H. Backes, of Trenton; John E. Foster, of Atlantic Highlands; and Meritt Lane, of Jersey City. Clerk, Robert H. McAdams, of Elizabeth. Reporter, Bayard Stockton, of Trenton.

The court of chancery has jurisdiction over all equity cases, and exclusive original jurisdiction in divorce cases.

Regular Terms. — Abolished, P. L. 1913, p. 669. The chancellor and vice-chancellors sit at chambers every Monday in Jersey City and every Monday at Camden, except the 1st Monday in each month, and the 1st Monday in each month at Atlantic City, and every Tuesday in Newark and Trenton, excepting during July and August, when motions are heard every two weeks.

SUPREME COURT OF NEW JERSEY

Consists of a chief justice and eight associate justices, namely Chief Justice, William S. Gummere, of Newark. Associate Justices, Charles G. Garrison, of Merchantville; Francis J. Swayse, of Newark; Thomas W. Trenchard, of Trenton; Charles Wolcott Parker, of Jersey City; James J. Bergen, of Somerville; James F. Minturn, of Hoboken; Samuel Kalisch, of Newark; and Charles C. Black, of Jersey City. Attorney-General, John W. Wescott, of Camden. Clerk, Enoch L. Johnson, of Atlantic City. Office at state capitol at Trenton. Reporter, Charles E. Gummere, of Trenton.

Terms of Court. — At Trenton, 3d Tuesday in February and 1st Tuesdays in June and November.

It has both original and appellate jurisdiction. It has jurisdiction of all suits of a civil nature at law. If judgment be for less than two hundred dollars, prevailing party recovers no costs, unless the title to lands has come in question, or unless the defendant does not reside in the same county with the plaintiff and the amount recovered exceeds one hundred dollars (1884, ch. 20), or unless he obtains the certificate from the judge that the damages were reduced by recoupment or failure of consideration, and that he had reasonable grounds for bringing his action in that court.

CIRCUIT COURTS.

The State is divided into nine judicial districts. The justices of the supreme court assign to each of their number one of the said districts, and thereafter the circuit court in each of the counties of the several districts is held by the justice to whom such district has been so assigned. There are also circuit judges who may be assigned to any circuit, viz.: Frederic Adams, of Newark; Frank T. Lloyd, of Camden; William H. Speer, of Jersey City; Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerville; Howard Carrow, of Camden; Luther A. Campbell, of Hackensack; George S. Silzer, of Metuchen; and Willard W. Cutler, of Morristown.

It has exclusive jurisdiction of lien claims over five hundred dollars and appellate jurisdiction in certain cases from the courts for the trial of small causes. If less than one hundred dollars is recovered, no costs are allowed the prevailing party unless he obtains, in a suit on contract, a certificate of the judge that the damages were reduced below one hundred dollars by recoupment or failure of consideration, and that he had reasonable grounds for bringing the action in the circuit court; and, in a suit for tort, a certificate that the action should have been brought in that court.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

The court of common pleas has concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit court except when the title to land comes in question; appellate jurisdiction from courts for trial of small causes; exclusive jurisdiction in certain cases, — roads, insolvent debtors, and wrecks; also jurisdiction in Employers Liability Act (P. A. 1911, p. 134) as amended P. L. 1912-1915.

PREROGATIVE COURT

Has original as well as appellate jurisdiction over the probate of wills and the granting of letters testamentary and of administration. It hears appeals from the orphans' courts and is subject to appeal to the court of errors and appeals.

The court is held by the chancellor under the name of the ordinary, and he is assisted by the vice-chancellors as vice-ordinaries. The clerk is Thomas F. Martin, secretary of state.

ORPHANS' COURT.

These courts are held in each county by the judge of the court of common pleas or the justice of the supreme court assigned to the county. They have jurisdiction over wills, administrations, guardianships, and assignments for the benefit of creditors.

The surrogate of the county is the clerk of this court. He may grant probate of wills, issue letters testamentary and letters of administration in uncontested cases.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — Court for the trial of small causes held by a justice of the peace has jurisdiction throughout the county over every suit of a civil nature at law where the debt, balance, or other matter in dispute does not exceed, exclusive of costs, the sum of two hundred dollars, except replevin, slander, trespass for assault, battery, or imprisonment, and actions wherein the title to lands may come in question; but justices residing in cities where district courts are established have no civil jurisdiction.

CITY DISTRICT COURTS.

In cities containing over seventeen thousand inhabitants the civil jurisdiction of justices of the peace, in cases where the defendant resides in such city, is vested exclusively in a court called a district court. (Laws 1898, ch. 228; 1900, 299. See Paine v. Mahon, 15 Vroom, 213.) The jurisdiction of these courts extends throughout the county, but is not exclusive beyond the city.

Judicial districts comprising one or more municipalities in the same county with a combined population of not less than seventeen thousand inhabitants may be created by special act of the legislature and a district court established therein. (Laws 1908, ch. 49.) There have been several such created.

Cities having one hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants or over have two such courts. There are district courts in the following cities: Atlantic City, Bayonne, Camden, Elizabeth, Hoboken, Jersey City (1st and 2d), Newark (1st and 2d), New Brunswick, Orange, Passaic, Paterson, Perth Amboy, Plainfield, Trenton. There are also a number of judicial districts in which district courts are established.

The jurisdiction of the district courts extends to every suit of a civil nature at law in which the matter in dispute does not exceed, exclusive of costs, the sum or value of five hundred dollars. (Laws 1900, ch. 110; 1902, ch. 121; 1908, ch. 190; 1910, ch. 134.)

CRIMINAL COURTS.

The criminal courts are the supreme court, the oyer and terminer, the general quarter sessions, the special quarter sessions, the justices of the peace, and police justices.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

The Judge of the Court of Common Pleas is the judge of the oyer and terminer, the quarter sessions, and the orphans' court.

Surrogates — Act as clerks or recording officers of the orphans' courts, and grant letters testamentary and of administration in uncontested cases.

County Clerks — Are the recording officers of the other county courts, and also have the custody of the records of real estate in those counties where there is no register of deeds.

Prosecutors of the Pleas — Are the prosecuting attorneys of the State in their respective counties in the pursuit and trial of criminals.

Register of Deeds — Have charge of the records of all conveyances and mortgages in the counties of Essex, Hudson, Camden, Passaic, and Union, counties having a population of one hundred and forty thousand. (Laws 1911, chs. 76 and 159.)

Boards of Chosen Freeholders — Have control of all the property and financial affairs of their respective counties, and also of county roads and bridges.

Overseers of the Poor — Have charge and disposal of the paupers of the county and the care of the poorhouses.

JURISDICTION AND TERMS OF COURT.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Hughes, Rounds, Schurman and Dwight, of New York.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

STATE COURTS.

The courts of the State were reorganised by the Constitution of 1894, art. VI.

COURT OF APPEALS.

This court, which is composed of a chief judge and eight associate judges, elected by the people to serve fourteen years, is continued as heretofore. It is the court of last resort. The jurisdiction, except in capital cases, is limited to review of questions of law.

Chief Judge, Frank H. Hiscock, of Syracuse. Associate Judges, Frederick Collin, of Elmira; William H. Cuddeback, of Buffalo; John W. Hogan, of Syracuse; Cuthbert W. Pound, of Lockport; Emory A. Chase, of Catskill; Benjamin N. Cardoso, of New York; Chester B. McLaughlin, of Port Henry; Frederick E. Crane, of Brooklyn; William S. Andrews, of Syracuse. Clerk, R. M. Barber. Reporter, J. Newton Fiero.

Terms. — Usually held at Albany. The terms are never specifically named. The court in its discretion takes recesses and orders calendars from time to time, of which due notice is given to each attorney having a return on file, and in the public press. Appeals from orders can be noticed for the first Monday of each session. Original motions may be submitted on any Monday, or heard first Monday of any session.

SUPREME COURT.

The supreme court is a court of record, and has general original jurisdiction in law and equity throughout the State. The State is divided into four judicial departments for the purpose of prescribing the jurisdiction of the appellate division of the supreme court, and into nine judicial districts for the election of its justices. The appellate division of the supreme court consists of seven justices in the first and second, and of five justices in each of the other departments. The appellate division has the jurisdiction formerly exercised by the general terms of the supreme court and of the superior city courts (New York court of common pleas, New York superior court, superior court of Buffalo, and city court of Brooklyn), and such additional jurisdiction as may be conferred by the legislature. (Const. art. VI. sec. 2; C. L. ch. 30; §§ 70-81.) The following are the judicial districts: —

First District. — Counties of New York, and Bronx.

Second District. — Counties of Richmond, Suffolk, Nassau, Queens, and Kings.

Third District. — Counties of Columbia, Sullivan, Ulster, Greene, Albany, Schoharie, and Rensselaer.

Fourth District. — Counties of Warren, Saratoga, Washington, Essex, Franklin, St. Lawrence, Clinton, Montgomery, Hamilton, Fulton, and Schenectady.

Fifth District. — Counties of Onondaga, Oneida, Oswego, Herkimer, Jefferson, and Lewis.

Sixth District. — Counties of Otsego, Delaware, Madison, Chenango, Broome, Tioga, Chemung, Tompkins, Cortland, and Schuyler.

Seventh District. — Counties of Livingston, Wayne, Seneca, Yates, Ontario, Steuben, Monroe, and Cayuga.

Eighth District. — Counties of Erie, Chataqua, Cattaraugus, Orleans, Niagara, Genesee, Allegany, and Wyoming.

Ninth District. — Counties of Westchester, Putnam, Dutchess, Orange, and Rockland.

The first district constitutes the first department; the second and ninth districts constitute the second department; the third department consists of the third, fourth, and sixth districts; the fourth, of the fifth, seventh, and eighth districts.

In the first district thirty-one justices of the supreme court are elected; in the second district twenty justices; in each of the third, fourth, and sixth districts six justices, in the fifth district eight justices, in the seventh district seven justices; in the eighth district twelve justices; and in the ninth district five justices.

The justices constituting the appellate division are as follows: —

First Department. — John Proctor Clarke, Presiding Justice; Frank C. Laughlin, Francis M. Scott, Victor J. Dowling, Walter Lloyd Smith, Alfred R. Page, Vernon M. Davis, Clarence J. Shearn, Associate Justices.

Second Department. — Almet F. Jenks, Presiding Justice; Isaac N. Mills, Edward B. Thomas, Adelbert P. Rich, Luke D. Stapleton, Harrington Putnam, Abel E. Blackmar, Associate Justices.

Third Department. — John M. Kellogg, Presiding Justice; George F. Lyon, John Woodward, Aaron V. S. Cochrane, Associate Justices. A fourth Associate Justice to be designated by Governor January first.

Fourth Department. — Frederick W. Kruse, Presiding Justice; John S. Lambert, Nathaniel Foote, Edgar S. K. Merrell, Pascal C. J. De Angelis, Associate Justices.

In each department four shall constitute a quorum, and the concurrence of three shall be necessary to a decision. No more than five justices shall sit in any case. In every county at least one special term, for the hearing of equity cases, court motions, and issues of law, and two circuit terms, for the trial of issues of fact arising from common law cases exclusively, are held annually by some one of the justices of the supreme court. Its process runs into every county in the State.

The assignment of terms for 1919 cannot be ascertained before going to press.

SUPERIOR CITY COURTS.

These courts were abolished December 31, 1895, and their jurisdiction given to the supreme court, and the justices then in office and their successors were made justices of the supreme court. (Const. art. VI. sec. 5.) This, with the provision for twelve new justices (Const. art. VI. sec. 1), raised the membership of the supreme bench from forty-six to seventy-six.

CRIMINAL COURTS.

The courts of oyer and terminer were abolished December 31, 1895, and their jurisdiction transferred to the supreme court. Other criminal courts are: Court of general sessions of the peace in the city of New York, courts of special sessions of the peace in each town and certain cities and villages and police courts and city magistrates' courts in certain cities and villages. Courts of sessions in other counties except New York are abolished, and their jurisdiction transferred to the county courts. (Const. art. VI. sec. 14.) Courts of special sessions, except in cities of New York and Albany, are held by a justice of the peace of the town or city where located, or by a recorder of such city; in Albany by a recorder of the city, with or without one or more justices of the peace. Police courts are constituted in several cities, and in some of the towns of the State, for the trial of petty criminal offences by single justices, or other officers chosen for the purpose. Warrants for the apprehension of criminals may be issued, and such criminals after examination may be held for trial by any of the following magistrates: justices of the supreme court, judges of any city court, county judges and special county judges, city judge of the city of New York, and judges of the court of general sessions in the city and county of New York, justices of the peace, police, and other justices and magistrates appointed or elected in a city, village, or town, and the mayors and recorders of cities.

COURTS HELD IN NEW YORK CITY (COMPRISING THE BOROUGHS OF MANHATTAN, THE BRONX, BROOKLYN, QUEENS, AND RICHMOND).

Supreme Court — Appellate Division, First Department. — The court holds its sessions in the Appellate Division Court House, corner of 25th Street and Madison Avenue, New York city. There is but one term each year, usually commencing in October and lasting until June with short recesses. The first and third Fridays after the first Monday of the month and the first Friday in August and second Friday in September are motion days. All ex parte applications must be made on motion days except by special permission of the court. Appeals from orders are heard only on motion days immediately after the disposition of the motion calendar. The court opens at two o'clock and continues until six o'clock in the afternoon, unless sooner adjourned.

Second Department. — The court sits in Borough Hall, Borough of Brooklyn. Terms are appointed in the discretion of the court, usually about every six weeks from September to June, motion days the first and third Mondays of the term.

Supreme Court. — Trial Terms will be held in several parts on the first Monday in each month, in the county court-house, except during July, August, and September.

Special Terms (for equity cases and enumerated motions), held in several parts on the first Monday in each month, except during July, August, and September.

Special Term and Chambers (for non-enumerated motions and chambers business), held every court day in the year.

City Court of New York. — The city court of New York has common law jurisdiction, except in actions against an executor or administrator in representative capacity, in all actions where the amount claimed does not exceed two thousand dollars (Snotrowicz v. Queen Aeroplane Co., 207 N.Y. 290) and process is served within the boundaries of the old city of New York. This limitation as to amount does not apply to actions on undertakings given in the same court, or to recover damages for breach of promise of marriage, or in certain specified causes of action known as marine causes. It also has jurisdiction over actions to foreclose mechanics' liens on property in New York city, or liens upon chattels for a sum not exceeding two thousand dollars. This court has special and trial terms held each month except between June and September. It is expressly provided in the Greater New York charter that the territorial extent of the court's jurisdiction shall remain as before. (§ 1345.)

County Courts. — Except in the counties of New York and Bronx there is a county court in each county with a jurisdictional limitation of $2000.

Surrogate's Court. — See Surrogates' Courts. — In the absence or disability of the surrogate, the business of the court is transacted by a justice of the supreme court.

Municipal Court. — This court corresponds to a justice's court elsewhere. The city of New York (i. e. the Greater New York) is divided into twenty-five districts, in each one of which a session of the court is held. The court has general common law jurisdiction over actions where the amount claimed does not exceed one thousand dollars, except in cases where the title to real property comes in question, or where a recovery is sought for certain specified personal torts. (See the Greater New York Charter, § 1364 et seq. See L. 1915, c. 278, for sweeping revision of New York Municipal Practice.)

Court of General Sessions (in New York and Bronx counties). — This is a criminal court divided into five parts, presided over by seven judges in rotation, styled judges of the court of general sessions. These parts have coördinate jurisdiction. Each part may be held each month, commencing on the first Monday, and continuing as long as the public interest may require. In the other counties the county courts take the place of this court.

Inferior Courts of Criminal Jurisdiction (in Greater New York), Laws 1910, ch. 659, as amended, L. 1915, ch. 531. The court of special sessions consists of fifteen justices. It sits in five parts, three judges in each part. Part V. is known as the circuit part and sits in whatever county the press of business requires. Part V. does not sit during July and August. Terms are the first Monday of each month. There is a separate division known as the children's court of the city of New York. The court of special sessions has in the first instance exclusive jurisdiction of all charges of misdemeanors committed within the county except libel. City magistrates, seventeen in number, are divided into two boards, one for the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx, the other for Brooklyn, Queens, and Richmond. They are appointed by the mayor. They have jurisdiction to summarily punish those charged with petty offenses, and to commit others for trial to await the action of the grand jury.

SURROGATE'S COURTS.

In New York, Kings, and some others of the large counties, surrogates are elected. In the remaining counties, the county judge performs the duties of surrogate. The surrogate's court is a court of record. A surrogate has jurisdiction: 1. To take proof of wills, admit them to probate, revoke probate, and take and revoke probate of heirship. 2. To grant and revoke letters testamentary and of administration. 3. To direct and control the conduct and settle the accounts of executors, administrators and testamentary trustees. 4. To enforce payment of debts and legacies, and the distribution of decedents' estates. 5. To direct the disposition of real property of decedents for payment of debts, etc. 6. To administer justice in all matters relating to the affairs of decedents, according to statutory provisions. 7. To appoint and remove guardians for infants, compel payment by them to their wards, and direct and control their conduct and settle their accounts. The jurisdiction of the surrogate's court of each county, in reference to taking proof of wills and granting letters, is exclusive of that of every other surrogate's court: 1. Where the decedent was, at the time of his death, a resident of the county, whether his death happened there or elsewhere. 2. Where the decedent, not a resident of the State, died within the county, leaving personal property within the State, or personalty which has come into the State since his death and remains unadministered. 3. Where decedent, not a resident of the State, died without the State, leaving personalty in the county and no other, or leaving personalty which, since his death, has come into the county, and no other, and remains unadministered. 4. Where decedent was not a resident of the State, and no other surrogate has acquired jurisdiction by the filing of a petition, but real property subject to disposition for payment of debts is situated in the county, and no other. Where personal property of decedent is within or comes into two or more counties under circumstances mentioned in (3) supra, or real property is situated in two or more counties as mentioned in (4) supra, the surrogates' courts of those counties have concurrent jurisdiction; but if the petition for probate of a will or for letters of administration has been duly filed in either of these courts, the jurisdiction of that court excludes that of the other.

For jurisdictional purposes a debt owing to a decedent, not evidenced by an instrument for the payment of money only, is considered as personalty situated in the county where the debtor resides. The proceedings in surrogates' courts are minutely regulated by C. P. §§ 2472-2771, amended in many respects by ch. 686, L. 1893, ch. 735, L. 1894, and chs. 234, 358, 578, 578, 581, 584, 705, L. 1910, and ch. 443, L. 1914.

County Courts. — These courts, held by a county judge, have jurisdiction over actions for partition, dower, foreclosure, or redemption of mortgages, or for specific performance, where the real property to which such actions relate is situated within the county, or to foreclose a lien upon a chattel found within the county, where the lien does not exceed one thousand dollars, and over actions for other causes where all the defendants reside within the county and the amount claimed does not exceed two thousand dollars; for other cases specially enumerated, see C. P. § 340. The process of the court runs throughout the State.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Justices of the peace have civil jurisdiction in the following actions, in which the sum claimed does not exceed two hundred dollars: 1. To recover damages for breach of contract other than to marry. 2. For damages for a personal injury or an injury to property. 3. For a penalty. 4. Upon a bond conditioned for the payment of money. 5. In an action upon a surety bond taken by them, though the penalty or amount claimed exceeds two hundred dollars. 6. In an action upon a judgment rendered in a court of a justice of the peace, or in a district court of the city of New York, or in a justice's court of a city, being a court not of record. 7. In an action to recover the possession of a chattel the value of which stated in the affidavit made on the part of plaintiff does not exceed two hundred dollars. (C. P. § 2862, etc.)

Judgment may be entered by justice of the peace on confession, for a sum not exceeding five hundred dollars (C. P. § 3010); but no justice of the peace has cognisance of a civil action 1. In which the people of this State are a party, except for penalties not exceeding two hundred dollars, or for premiums due the insurance fund under the workmen's compensation law not exceeding two hundred dollars. 2. Nor where the title to real property shall come in question. 3. Nor of a civil action for an assault, battery, false imprisonment, libel, slander, malicious prosecution, criminal conversation, or seduction. Nor of certain special classes of actions, such as writs by creditors of a decedent against heirs or devisees, suits to recover damages for causing the death of a person, etc. 4. Nor of a matter of account, where the sum total of the accounts of both parties, proved to the satisfaction of the justice, exceeds four hundred dollars. 5. Nor of an action against an executor or administrator as such, except of a claim for less than fifty dollars, duly presented and rejected.

COURT CALENDAR FOR NORTH CAROLINA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by
James H. Pou, Esq., of Raleigh.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF NORTH CAROLINA.

Jurisdiction. — The supreme court consists of a chief justice and four associate justices. It has jurisdiction to review upon appeal any decision of the courts below upon any matter of law or legal inference, and to decide upon appeal questions of fact and issues of fact in causes involving questions of a purely equitable nature. It has power to issue any remedial writs necessary to give it a general supervision and control over the proceedings of the inferior courts. It "shall have original jurisdiction to hear claims against the State, but its decisions shall be merely recommendatory; no process in the nature of execution shall issue thereon; they shall be reported to the next session of the general assembly for its action."

Chief Justice, Walter Clark, of Raleigh. Associate Justices, Platt. D. Walker, of Charlotte; George H. Brown, of Washington; Wm. A. Hoke, of Lincolnton; William R. Allen, of Goldsboro. Clerk, Joseph L. Seawell, of Raleigh. Attorney-General, James S. Manning, of Raleigh. Reporter, Robert C. Strong, of Raleigh.

Terms. — At Raleigh, the 1st Monday in February and 4th Monday in August of each year.

SUPERIOR COURTS.

Note: The General Assembly which will convene in January, 1919, will in all probability make some changes in this Calendar.

Jurisdiction. — The superior courts shall have original jurisdiction of all civil actions whereof exclusive original jurisdiction is not given to some other courts, and of all criminal actions in which the punishment may exceed a fine of fifty dollars or imprisonment for one month. The superior courts shall be at all times open for the transaction of business within their jurisdiction, except the trial of issues of fact requiring a jury. For money demands, the superior courts have original jurisdiction whenever the principal sum demanded exceeds two hundred dollars. They have similar jurisdiction whenever the title to real estate is involved.

The State is divided into two circuits, which contain ten districts each. The eastern circuit is composed of the districts numbered one to ten, both inclusive; and the western circuit is composed of the districts numbered eleven to twenty, both inclusive. The act dividing the State into circuits provides that the judge of the first district shall hold the courts of the sixth district during the spring terms 1916; the judge of the second district shall hold the courts of the seventh district, etc. In the western circuit the judge of the seventeenth district will hold the courts of the twelfth district; the judge of the eighteenth district will hold the courts of the thirteenth district, etc.

Each judge holds the courts of a certain district for six months and then goes to the next higher numbered district in his circuit and holds the courts of that district for six months; and moving up every six months until, in the eastern circuit the tenth district, and in the western circuit the twentieth district, be reached; and after holding the courts of the said tenth and twentieth districts the judges go to the first and eleventh districts respectively, and again traverse the circuit, moving up every six months to a higher numbered district. The terms of courts are divided into spring and fall "ridings." January 1 to June 30 constitutes the spring terms or "ridings," and July 1 to December 31 the fall "ridings."

COURT CALENDAR FOR NORTH DAKOTA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by Messrs. Watson, Young & Conmy, of Fargo.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT.

Jurisdiction. — The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction unlimited in amount. It has original jurisdiction over writs of habeas corpus, and all other writs which by law may issue from this court, and all writs necessary to the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction.
Chief Justice, A. A. Bruce, of Grand Forks. Associate Justices, A. M. Christianson, of Towner, L. E. Birdsall of Grand Forks, J. E. Robinson of Fargo, and R. H. Grace, of Mohall.
Terms. — There are four general terms at Bismarck each year, known as the March, June, September, and December terms, each of the terms convening on the first Tuesday of each of the respective months named.

DISTRICT COURTS.

The district courts possess chancery as well as common law jurisdiction. They have exclusive original jurisdiction in all actions or proceedings in chancery, and in all actions at law where the debt or sum claimed exceeds two hundred dollars, and in all cases in which the title to real property or the boundary thereof in any wise comes in question; and in all actions for divorce and to obtain a decree of nullity of marriage; and in all such other cases as now are or may hereafter be provided by law. They have jurisdiction of appeals from all final judgments of justices of the peace, and from all judgments, decrees, or orders of the county court, or other inferior officers or tribunals, in the cases prescribed by statute. They also have jurisdiction over neglected and abandoned children. They have also the power to issue such writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, injunction, quo warranto, certiorari, and all other writs necessary to carry into effect their judgments, decrees, and orders, and to give them a general control over inferior courts, officers, boards, tribunals, and jurisdictions. They are always open for all business except trial of issues of fact.
District Judges. — 1st District, Charles M. Cooley, of Grand Forks; 2d District, C. W. Butta, of Devil's Lake; 3d District, A. T. Cole, of Fargo; 4th District, F. P. Allen, of Lisbon; 5th District, J. A. Coffey, of Jamestown; 6th District, W. L. Nuesale, of Bismarck; 7th District, W. J. Kneeshaw, of Pembina; 8th District, K. E. Leighton, of Minot; 9th District, A. G. Burr, of Bottineau; 10th District, W. C. Crawford, of Dickinson; 11th District, Frank Fisk, of Williston; 12th District, J. M. Hanley, of Mandan.

COUNTY COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — The county courts have jurisdiction of all proceedings for the settlement and distribution of estates of deceased persons, and also of the appointment of guardians of the person and estates of minors, insane, and incompetent persons. By vote of counties, jurisdiction is conferred on county courts concurrent with the district courts in all civil actions where the amount in controversy does not exceed one thousand dollars, and criminal jurisdiction in all cases less than felony. The following counties have given their county courts this increased jurisdiction: Benson, Bowman, Cass, Dickey, La Moure, Ransom, Renville, Stutsman, Ward, and Wells.

Terms of the county court are held at the several county seats on the 1st Monday in each calendar month, and the court is always open for business.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Justices' courts have jurisdiction in actions arising on contract for the recovery of money only, where the sum claimed does not exceed two hundred dollars; for damages for injury to the person; taking, detaining, or injuring personal property; or for an injury to real property, where the title or boundary of such real property does not in any wise come in question, and where the damages claimed do not exceed two hundred dollars; for a fine, penalty, or forfeiture, not exceeding two hundred dollars; and for and in actions to recover the possession of personal property, when the value of such property does not exceed two hundred dollars; upon any bond or undertaking conditioned for the payment of money, not exceeding two hundred dollars; to take and enter judgment on the confession of a defendant, when the amount confessed does not exceed

COUNTY SUPERIOR COURTS.

Every county having a population of thirty-three thousand and not to exceed eighty thousand, and a city therein of eighteen thousand and not to exceed fifty thousand inhabitants, and every county with a city other than the county seat with a population of ten thousand and not to exceed fifty thousand, as shown by preceding federal census, has a superior court with jurisdiction in that county, concurrent with the district court and with the county court except matters of probate, and appellate jurisdiction concurrent with the district court in probate matters.

COUNTY COURTS.

There is a county court in each county in the State presided over by a county judge, elected for a term of two years.

Jurisdiction. — The county court has original jurisdiction in all probate matters, and jurisdiction concurrent with the district court in civil cases in any amount over two hundred dollars and not exceeding one thousand dollars, exclusive of interest, but not in any action for malicious prosecution; nor for divorce or alimony; nor against officers for misconduct in office; nor in actions for slander or libel; nor in actions for specific performance of contracts for sale of real estate, or in any matter where title or boundaries of land may be in dispute or called in question; nor for the partition or sale of real estate except such as arises under its probate jurisdiction. It has jurisdiction as a juvenile court under the act with regard to dependent, neglected, and delinquent children. It also has jurisdiction concurrent with justices of the peace in misdemeanor cases, and exclusive jurisdiction in all misdemeanor cases of which justices of the peace have not jurisdiction; county courts also have the jurisdiction of examining and committing magistrates in all criminal cases. If the district judge be absent from the county or disqualified, the county court or judge has power to issue writs of injunction in matters about to be brought or pending in the district court; and to issue writs of injunction, mandamus, and all writs necessary to enforce the jurisdiction of the county court; and writs of habeas corpus in cases where the offense charged is within the jurisdiction of the county court or any other court or tribunal inferior to said court. It also has, concurrent with the district court, appellate jurisdiction of all cases on appeals from the judgments of justices of the peace, and from judgments of police judges, in all civil and criminal cases.

Appeals. — Appeals and proceedings in error are taken from the judgments of county courts direct to the supreme court in the same manner and by like proceedings as appeals are taken to the supreme court from judgments of the district courts, but in cases arising under the probate jurisdiction of the county court appeals lie and from the judgments of the county court to the district court of that county.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

Jurisdiction. — Justices of the peace have jurisdiction coextensive with the county, as examining and committing magistrates in all felony cases, and concurrent with the county court in all civil cases where the amount involved does not exceed two hundred dollars, exclusive of interest and costs, and concurrent with the county court in all misdemeanor cases in which the punishment does not exceed a fine of two hundred dollars or imprisonment in the county jail for not exceeding thirty days, or both such fine and imprisonment; forcible entry and detainer suits are also brought in the first instance before justices of the peace, but justices of the peace have no jurisdiction in actions for libel and slander.

Appeals are taken from the judgments of justices of the peace in civil and criminal cases, either to the district, superior, or county court, and there tried de novo on questions of both law and fact. In cities of more than twenty-five hundred inhabitants two justices of the peace are elected; and in cities of more than twenty-five thousand inhabitants, three are elected.

Justices of the peace may issue orders of attachment against the goods and effects of debtors in proper cases, and try actions for forcible entry and detention or detention only of real property; may issue subpoenas for witnesses and compel their attendance in causes pending before them; may issue executions on their own judgments; may proceed against security for costs and bail for the stay of execution before them in the manner prescribed by law. They may administer oaths, and solemnize marriages.

SUPREME COURT OF OREGON.

Jurisdiction. — The supreme court has jurisdiction to revise the final decisions of the circuit courts, and may in its own discretion take original jurisdiction in mandamus, quo warranto, and habeas corpus proceedings.

It consists of seven justices chosen by the electors of the State, who hold their terms of office for six years. Appeals taken from any circuit court in any county east of Cascade Mountains, except Wasco, Crook, Sherman, Klamath, and Lake, shall be heard and determined at Pendleton, unless otherwise stipulated by parties or ordered by court; and appeals taken from the circuit courts in all other parts of the State shall be heard and determined at Salem, as now provided by law, unless otherwise stipulated between the parties or ordered by the court. In suits in Wasco, Crook, and Sherman counties, appeals therefrom are taken to the term of court first held after the appeal is perfected, whether at Pendleton or at Salem.

The court now consists of Hon. T. A. McBride, Chief Justice; Hon. F. A. Moore, Hon. H. J. Bean, Hon. G. H. Burnett, Hon. H. L. Benson, Hon. L. T. Harris, and Hon. Chas. A. John. Clerk, Arthur S. Benson, of Salem. Deputy Clerks: At Salem, W. A. Wiest; at Pendleton, Lee Moorhouse.

Regular Terms are held at Salem, the capital, on the 1st Mondays in March and October, and at Pendleton on the first Monday in May and last Monday in October.

CIRCUIT COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — All judicial powers not vested in some other court belong to the circuit courts; they have appellate jurisdiction and supervisory control over the county courts and all other inferior courts, officers, and tribunals.

There are twenty judicial districts in the State, each district presided over by one or more judges elected for the term of six years by the electors in their respective districts.

COUNTY COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — The county court has jurisdiction pertaining to probate, and civil jurisdiction not exceeding the amount of value of five hundred dollars, except in Multnomah County, where the county court hears probate matters and has charge of juvenile court work. Under the state constitution these courts have such criminal jurisdiction, not extending to death or imprisonment, as may by law be prescribed. The legislature has conferred upon the county court jurisdiction over certain misdemeanors, involving failure to support wife or child, or contributing to the delinquency of a child.

In the transactions of county business two commissioners are elected to sit with the county judge.

The county judge may grant preliminary injunctions returnable to the circuit court; and may hear and decide questions arising upon habeas corpus, provided such decisions be not against the authority or proceedings of a court or judge of equal or higher jurisdiction. A county judge is elected in each county for four years.

Terms of the County Courts in the several counties for the transaction of probate and civil business are held on the 1st Monday of each month. Terms of county court for county business occur as indicated post.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

The justices' courts have concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit and county courts of all civil actions not involving a greater sum than two hundred and fifty dollars (in Multnomah County three hundred dollars), except only actions in which the title to real property shall come in question, and except actions for false imprisonment, libel, slander, malicious prosecution, crim. con., seduction, or promises to marry.

These courts have a criminal jurisdiction of misdemeanors generally, and of the crime of larceny where the punishment may be imprisonment in county jail, or by fine, and have also an original and exclusive jurisdiction in the first instances over certain offenses against unincorporated towns and villages.

The justice of the peace is a magisterial officer.

A special jurisdiction is by law given to these courts in several instances.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Sheriff. — The sheriff of each county performs the duties usually appertaining to such office, and is ex-officio tax collector.

County Clerk. — The county clerk has charge of the records of the county and circuit courts, issues all process, and attends in person, or by deputy, all the courts of record.

He is also ex-officio recorder of conveyances, save in the counties of Clackamas, Clatsop, Linn, Benton, Marion, Umatilla, Washington, Baker, and Yamhill, where the office of recorder of conveyances is a separate and distinct office.

As recorder of conveyances he has charge of the records of deeds, mortgages, mechanics' liens, and miscellaneous records. He records any proper instrument presented to him for that purpose, for the lawful fee provided therefor.

County Auditor. — In Multnomah County the county auditor is the accounting officer for the county, and audits all demands, accounts, or claims against the county, reporting the same to the county court.

Recorder of Conveyances. — See County Clerk.

County Treasurer — Has charge of the county moneys, pays out the same upon warrants drawn on him by order of the county court.

County Court. — The county judge, assisted by two commissioners, transacts, under the title of County Court, the county business. The county court has charge, among other things, of county roads and bridges and the county sick and indigent, commitment of the insane to the State Insane Asylum, levy of taxes, and appointment of judges and clerks of election. Terms of court for county business are held as follows: In Baker, Benton, Clackamas, Clatsop, Coos, Deschutes, Douglas, Jackson, Jefferson, Josephine, Lane, Linn, Marion, Multnomah, Polk, Tillamook, Umatilla, Union, Wasco, Washington, and Yamhill counties on the first Wednesday each month; in Columbia, Crook, Gilliam, Grant, Harney, Hood River, Klamath, Lake, Lincoln, Malheur, Sherman, Morrow, Wallowa, and Wheeler counties, on the first Wednesday in January, March, May, July, September, November, and December; in Curry county on the first Wednesday in January, April, July, September, and December.

COURT CALENDAR FOR PENNSYLVANIA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1918-1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

J. Levering Jones, Esq., Dimmer Beeber, Esq., Henry C. Boyer, Esq.,

Harry T. Bauerle, Esq., of Philadelphia.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

CIVIL COURTS OF PENNSYLVANIA.

The civil courts of Pennsylvania are the supreme and superior courts and the common pleas and orphans' courts. Philadelphia County also has a municipal court.

By act of July 12, 1913, a municipal court was created for Philadelphia to have jurisdiction, inter alia, in civil actions in amount up to six hundred dollars, and in addition it has jurisdiction in actions for damages for personal injuries where sum demanded does not exceed fifteen hundred dollars, in desertion cases, in cases of neglected children, certain criminal cases, etc.

SUPREME COURT.

The supreme court has original jurisdiction throughout the State in cases of injunction when a corporation is defendant; habeas corpus, and mandamus and quo warranto in certain cases. (Const. art. v, § 3.)

It has general appellate jurisdiction for the correction of errors in any of the other courts. See Superior Court, below.

The supreme court of Pennsylvania is composed of a chief justice and six associate justices, elected by the people to serve for a term of twenty-one years. The justice having the shortest term to serve is chief justice.

Chief Justice, J. Hay Brown, of Lancaster. Justices, John Stewart, of Chambersburg; Robert Von Moschisler, of Philadelphia; Robert S. Fraser, of Pittsburgh; Emory A. Walling, of Erie; Alexander Simpson, Jr., of Philadelphia; E. J. Fox, of Easton, Pa. Prothonotaries, Eastern District, Wm. A. Stone, of Philadelphia; Middle District, William Pearson, of Harrisburg; Western District, George Pearson, of Pittsburgh.

Terms. — Western District, at Pittsburgh, last Monday in September, probably four weeks.
Eastern District, at Philadelphia, 1st Monday in January, for twenty weeks.
Middle District, at Harrisburg, Monday, May 26, one week.

SUPERIOR COURT.

This court was created by the act of June 24, 1895, amended in 1897 and 1899. It is a court of intermediate appeal, composed of seven judges elected for ten years.

It has no original jurisdiction, except that it, or any judge thereof, may issue writs of habeas corpus. It has exclusive and final appellate jurisdiction of all appeals which are now allowed to the supreme court in the following cases. From all proceedings in the court of quarter sessions except cases involving the right to a public office. Appeals from a sentence upon an indictment must be specially allowed by a judge of the superior court. Also proceedings of any kind in the court of oyer and terminer except in felonious homicide, which go on appeal to the supreme court. Any action, claim, distribution, or dispute of any kind in the common pleas, if the subject of the controversy be either money, chattels, real or personal, or the possession of, or title to, real property, and also if the amount or value thereof be not greater than fifteen hundred dollars, exclusive of costs, and also if the action be not brought, authorized, or defended by the attorney-general in his official capacity. Any single claim, any dispute, distribution, or other proceeding in the orphans' court, if the subject of the controversy be either money, chattels, real or personal, or the possession of, or title to, real property, and also if the amount or value thereof in such single claim, etc., be not greater than fifteen hundred dollars, exclusive of costs, and also be not brought, authorized, or defended by the attorney-general in his official capacity. In ejectment, or where the possession of, or title to, lands or chattels, real or personal, is in dispute, the judge of the common pleas or orphans' court shall certify whether the value is greater than fifteen hundred dollars, and his certificate is final. In suits, etc., in the common pleas or orphans' court, if the plaintiff or claimant recover either for a tort or breach of contract, the amount of the judgment is conclusive of the amount in controversy; if he recovers nothing, the amount is determined by the damages claimed in the statement of claim. Where husband and wife sue jointly for injuries to the wife, or a parent and child sue jointly for injuries to the child, and several judgments are entered, if either is greater than fifteen hundred dollars, the appeal from both is to the supreme court. Appeals in divorce and on certain labor claims are to the superior court. Also all cases, civil or criminal, at law or equity, except for felonious homicide, in which a stipulation is filed in the court below agreeing that the case may be taken on appeal to this court. But there is still an appeal from its judgment to the supreme court in all cases where the jurisdiction of the superior court is in issue, and where the case involves the construction or application of the Constitution of the United States or any statute or treaty thereof, or of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, and when the appeal to the supreme court is especially allowed by the superior court itself or any justice of the supreme court, and when four judges of the superior court certify that the case is so "important or difficult as to make it expedient" that it should be decided by the supreme court. Where it shall be made to appear to the superior court that the same questions, and those only, are raised on an appeal to that court as are raised on an appeal pending in the supreme court, the superior court may stay all proceedings before them until the decision by the supreme court of the appeal there pending, or may certify said cause to the supreme court, with the same effect as if originally properly taken thereto.

"Sec. 11. An appellee is deemed to have waived any objection to the jurisdiction of the court, unless he files his objection with the prothonotary on or prior to the hearing of the appeal by the superior court."

On an appeal a bond must be filed, conditioned to pay the costs of the appeal, including the costs in the supreme court if the case shall reach that tribunal, and conditioned also to pay whatever judgment or decree may be entered against the appellant, either by the superior court or the supreme court. The amount of the bond shall be at least double the amount of the judgment or decree appealed from.

President Judge, George B. Orlady, of Huntingdon. Judges, Hon. Frank M. Trexler, of Allentown; Hon. John W. Kephart, of Ebensburg; William D. Porter, of Pittsburgh; John J. Henderson, of Meadville; John B. Head, of Greensburg; J. Henry Williams, of Philadelphia. Prothonotaries, Hon. Wm. A. Stone, of Philadelphia; William Pearson, of Harrisburg; Samuel S. Stevens, of Scranton.

Terms. — At Philadelphia, 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th weeks in October; 2d and 3d weeks in November; 1st and 2d weeks in December. At Scranton, 1st Monday in March. At Harrisburg, 2d Monday in March. At Pittsburgh, 2d, 3d, 4th weeks in April.

COMMON PLEAS AND ORPHANS' COURTS.

The courts of common pleas in the several counties have original jurisdiction in all civil actions and suits, personal, real, and mixed, and also jurisdiction of cases brought up by appeal or otherwise from the justices of the peace. (See below, Justices' Courts.) In suits commenced in the court of common pleas for demands less than one hundred dollars, the plaintiff cannot recover costs.

The judges of the several courts of common pleas and orphans' courts are chosen by the electors of the district over which they are to preside, for a term of ten years.

The judges of the common pleas also hold the criminal courts, and the orphans' courts in counties where there is not a separate orphans' court.

The jurisdiction over contested wills is in the orphans' courts. In counties having over one hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants, a separate orphans' court is required by the Constitution. By Act of July 19, 1913, judges of orphans' courts are authorized to hear and determine all issues in courts of common pleas, asoyer and terminer, general jail delivery, and of quarter sessions of the place, at the request of the judges of the common pleas. By Act of April 21, 1915, judges of the courts of common pleas, of judicial districts having separate orphans' courts, may hear and determine orphans' court matters upon request of the president judge of the orphans' court.

Separate orphans' courts have been established in Philadelphia County with five judges; in Allegheny County with three judges; in Luzerne, Berks, Lackawanna, Lancaster, Montgomery, Westmoreland, Schuylkill, and Fayette counties, each with one.

JUSTICES' AND OTHER COURTS.

Justices of the peace have concurrent civil jurisdiction with the courts of common pleas in all cases arising on contract, expressed or implied, and of all actions of trespass, where the sum demanded does not exceed three hundred dollars, except cases where the title to real estate is brought into question, and upon promise of marriage. (Act of July 7, 1879.) This act also provides that the plaintiff or his agent cognizant of the facts may file an affidavit of his claim, together with a copy of his book entries or instrument of writing sued on, a copy of which, certified by the justice, is attached to the summons. Judgment is rendered for the amount claimed, unless the defendant or his agent cognizant of the fact files an affidavit of defense setting forth the same fully, on or before the hearing. The proceeding is summary, and the hearing must take place not less than five nor more than eight days from the date of the summons, at which time the justice may render judgment by default, or otherwise determine the case. If the demand is for more than five dollars and thirty-three cents the unsuccessful party may appeal to the court of common pleas. (See Synopsis of Laws under the head of Actions and Appeals.)

The act above mentioned does not apply to Philadelphia, where, instead of justices of the peace, there are twenty-eight magistrates, who have a civil jurisdiction in all cases arising in contract and all actions of trespass where the claim does not exceed one hundred dollar. (being the same as justices of the peace before the above act). Cases involving title to real estate and actions upon promise of marriage are excepted, also actions of ejectment, replevin, or slander, actions on real contracts for the sale or conveyance of lands and tenements, actions for damages in personal assault and battery, wounding or maiming, or actions for false imprisonment. Where the parties voluntarily appear and confess judgment, or submit the case by reference, a judgment for any sum exceeding one hundred dollars may be entered.

The Constitution forbids any special or local law extending the jurisdiction of justices. See Depositions.

COUNTY OFFICERS AND THEIR DUTIES.

Recorder of Deeds — In whose office deeds, mortgages, and other instruments are recorded.

Prothonotary of the Court of Common Pleas (and municipal court in Philadelphia County) whose duty it is to affix the seal of the court to all writs; process and exemplifications, to take bail in civil actions, sign judgments, and generally manage the business of the court office, and take charge of court records.

Clerk of the Court of Quarter Sessions — Who has general powers for the management of the business of the criminal courts and custody of their records.

District Attorney — Who conducts all criminal prosecutions in the name of the Commonwealth.

Clerk of the Orphans' Court — Who has the custody of the records and generally manages the business of the court office.

Register of Wills — In whose office wills are proved and registered and by whom letters testamentary and of administration are granted. In those counties having separate orphans' courts, the register is ex-officio clerk of the orphans' court.

Searches for conveyances, mortgages, judgments, and liens are made by the respective county officers, and certificates thereof given on application. Certain real estate title companies make searches and guarantee them against error.

COURT CALENDAR FOR RHODE ISLAND.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Tillinghast & Collins, of Providence.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

THE SUPREME COURT.

This court consists of a chief justice and four associate justices. It is a court both of equity and law, and has general supervision of all courts of inferior jurisdiction to correct and prevent errors and abuses therein when no other remedy is expressly provided; it may issue writs of habeas corpus, of error, certiorari, mandamus, prohibition, quo warranto, and all other extraordinary and prerogative writs and processes necessary for the furtherance of justice and the due administration of the law; it may entertain informations in the nature of quo warranto and petitions in equity to determine title to any office; it also has jurisdiction of petitions for trials and new trials as provided by law, bills of exceptions, appeals, and certifications to the supreme court, and special cases in which parties having adversary interests concur in stating questions for the opinion of the court as provided by law, and shall by general or special rules regulate the admission of attorneys to practice in all the courts of the State.

Chief Justice, C. Frank Parkhurst, of Providence. Associate Justices, William H. Sweetland, Walter B. Vincent, of Providence; Darius Baker, of Newport, and Charles F. Stearns, of Providence.

Regular Term. — At Providence, from 1st Monday in October to 2d Monday in July in every year, with a recess from the 3d Monday in February to the 1st Monday in March, but the court ceases to hear new matters generally about the last of April.

THE SUPERIOR COURT.

This court consists of a presiding justice and six associate justices. But any one justice is a quorum for all purposes, except as otherwise provided. It has exclusive original jurisdiction, except as otherwise provided by law, of suits and proceedings in equity, and of statutory proceedings following the course of equity, of petitions for divorce, separate maintenance, alimony, and custody of children; and also original jurisdiction of all actions at law where title to real estate or some right or interest therein is in issue, except actions for possession of tenements let or held at will or by sufferance; and also exclusive original jurisdiction of all other actions at law in which the debt or damages laid in the writ shall exceed the sum of five hundred dollars. It also has original jurisdiction of all crimes, offenses, and misdemeanors, except as otherwise provided by law, and shall sentence all persons found guilty before it to the punishment prescribed by law, and all indictments found by grand juries shall be returned into said court; and also jurisdiction of such motions for new trials as may be provided by law, and concurrently with the supreme court has jurisdiction of writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto; and informations in the nature of quo warranto; also jurisdiction of such appeals and statutory proceedings as may be provided by law, and may exercise general probate jurisdiction in all cases brought before it on appeal from probate courts or when such jurisdiction is properly involved in suits in equity.

Presiding Justice, Willard B. Tanner, of Providence. Associate Justices, George T. Brown, of Providence; Elmer J. Rathbun, of West Greenwich; Chester W. Barrows, John Doran, of Providence; John W. Sweeney, of Westerly; and Edward W. Blodgett of Pawtucket.

TIMES FOR HOLDING SUPERIOR COURT.

COUNTY.	WHERE HELD.	TIME OF SESSION.
Kent.	East Greenwich.	4th Mondays in October, January, March, and June.
Newport.	Newport.	1st Mondays in October, December, March, and June.
Providence	Providence.	3d Monday in September, and thence continuously to the 2d Monday in July following.
and Bristol.
Washington.	So. Kingstown.	3d Mondays in September, November, February, and April.

The superior court is always open, except on Sundays and legal holidays, for the transaction of all business, except that between the 1st Monday in July and 1st Monday in October no jury trial, except in special statutory cases, nor petition for divorce or for the defaulting of recognisances, shall be heard, and in vacation time the court shall not be obliged to, though by consent it may, hear other matters, and may at all times enter final orders and decrees upon default and upon bills and petitions for the appointment of trustees, and in special statutory cases properly brought and tried before it. Vacation is from the second Monday in July to the third Monday in September.

COURTS OF PROBATE.

The town councils are courts of probate within their respective towns, and the municipal court of the city of Providence is the court of probate of said city. But any town or any city council may elect a judge of probate for such town or city, who, upon being sworn, shall, instead of the town council, have the powers and be subject to the duties of a court of probate. The courts of probate are held by judges thus elected in the cities of Newport, Pawtucket, Woonsocket, Cranston, and Central Falls, and in the towns of Bristol, East Providence, Lincoln, North Providence, Johnston, Warwick, West Warwick, Westerly, and Warren.

DISTRICT COURTS.

For courts of inferior jurisdiction the State is divided into twelve judicial districts, in each of which is established a district court. These courts have cognizance of all crimes, offenses, and misdemeanors committed within their respective districts, punishable by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment not exceeding one year; and also jurisdiction to apprehend, examine, and bind-over to the higher courts for higher crimes and offenses.

They also have exclusive jurisdiction of all civil actions legally brought before them wherein the debt or damages demanded do not exceed five hundred dollars; and also of all actions for possession of tenements and estates within their respective districts let or held at will or by sufferance. They may also take and record the declarations of aliens of intention to become citizens of the United States.

The justices of these courts are elected by the general assembly in grand committee at its January sessions and hold their offices for three years.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

There is a clerk for the supreme court with an office in Providence; and a clerk for the superior court for the counties of Providence and Bristol, in Providence, with an assistant in Bristol, and a clerk for each of the counties of Newport, Washington, and Kent, in those counties respectively. There is also a sheriff for each county.

COURTS OF COMMON PLEAS.

Jurisdiction. — The courts of common pleas have jurisdiction of all civil cases and actions ex delicto.

The summer term of the court of common pleas is held without a jury, and only cases not requiring a jury can there be tried except in the counties of Anderson, Barnwell, Beaufort, Berkeley, Calhoun, Charleston, Cherokee, Colleton, Edgefield, Florence, Greenville, Georgetown, Hampton, Kershaw, Laurens, Lexington, Newberry, Oconee, Orangeburg, Pickens, Richland, Saluda, Spartanburg, Sumter, Union, and York. In Bamberg, Clarendon, Lee, and Williamsburg counties no jury trials at summer term unless by consent of counsel. In Aiken County, at the time allotted for the court of general sessions, the court of common pleas can be opened for the purpose of granting judgments by default and the hearing of any matters in the common pleas court by consent of counsel.

Whenever provision is made for courts of general sessions only, the judge presiding shall, at the conclusion of any such court of general sessions, open the court of common pleas without juries, and give judgments by default, hear and determine equity causes, and transact all other business of a regular term of a court of common pleas, except trials by jury.

As to all of the courts of the fourth circuit and as to all of the courts of the twelfth circuit except the courts for the counties of Horry and Georgetown, the presiding judge of the court of general sessions is authorized to open the court of common pleas, render judgments by default, and by consent of parties to try (at any term between the days on which said courts of general sessions open and close) any civil action, in the same manner and with the same effect as if said action should be tried at a regular term of the court of common pleas.

Whenever the business of the sessions court for Richland County is concluded and the same is not immediately followed by the court of common pleas, the presiding judge shall open the court of common pleas without juries and hear causes on calendars 2 and 3, as prepared by the clerk of court at the preceding term of the common pleas, and shall order docketed all default cases presented, and give judgment therein.

The courts of common pleas in the counties of the third and eighth circuits shall be open at all terms of the courts of general sessions for the purpose of rendering judgments by default, for the trial of such equity cases as may be ready for hearing, for granting orders of reference, and other orders in civil cases. In the eleventh circuit, the presiding judge shall call calendars 2 and 3 peremptorily at the close of the session court, if there be time for the same, in the counties of Lexington and Saluda after the work of the sessions court shall have been concluded.

By Code of Laws, 1912, ch. lxxvii, the counties of Aiken, Calhoun, Colleton, Darlington, Dillon, Hampton, Jasper, Lee, Newberry, and Richland are given authority to establish "county courts." We know of none having been established.

PROBATE COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — The court of probate is a court of record. There is one established in each county of the State. The judges of probate, each in his own county, have jurisdiction in all matters testamentary, and of administration in business appertaining to minors, and the allotment of dower, cases of idiocy and lunacy, and persons non compos mentis. They also have jurisdiction in relation to the appointment and removal of guardians, and in relation to trustees appointed by will. They shall also issue all marriage licenses, except in the counties of Beaufort, Colleton, Darlington, Georgetown, Horry, Oconee and Sumter, which are issued by the clerks of court. They have no jurisdiction in partition of real property. All proceedings in this court are by petition.

Terms. — Regular sessions are held on the first Monday of each month.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS.

Magistrates have civil jurisdiction in actions arising on contract for recovery of money only; in actions for damages for injury to rights pertaining to the person, or to personal or real property; in actions for a penalty, fine, or forfeiture; in actions commenced by attachment; in actions for damages, for fraud in the sale, purchase, or exchange of personal property; and in actions to recover possession of personal property; whenever the sum, or debt, or damages, or value of the property claimed do not exceed one hundred dollars. The defendant has twenty days within which to answer in the action, unless the amount is less than twenty-five dollars, in which case five days only are allowed; except in proceedings for claim and delivery of personal property, in which magistrate specifies a time, not more than twenty days from date of summons.

By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 1421, 1422, "The civil and criminal court of Charleston" has been established, the money jurisdiction being limited to five hundred dollars. By A. A. 1912, 27 Stats. 664, a similar court has been established for the county of Barnwell.

MUNICIPAL COURTS.

By Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 2962-2965, a municipal court is established for every city in this State having a population of more than twenty thousand and not exceeding fifty thousand inhabitants. Said municipal courts have jurisdiction to try and determine all cases arising under the ordinances of the city in which said court is established, and generally shall have all such judicial powers and duties as are conferred upon the mayor of such city, either by its charter or by the laws of the State; and shall also have all such powers, duties, and jurisdiction in criminal cases as are conferred by law upon the magistrates appointed and commissioned for the county in which said court is established, except the appointment of a constable. See A. A. 1913, p. 62. The municipal court shall be held by a recorder, elected by the mayor and aldermen of the city in which said court is established; jury trials are provided for, if desired; and any party shall have the right to appeal from the sentence or judgment of the recorder to the city council of the city or the court of general sessions of the county in which the trial is held.

The city of Charleston has had a somewhat similar municipal court for some years.

By A. A. 1904, amended A. A. 1905, any city in this State, whose population by the last census was not less than two thousand and not more than twenty thousand, or which may now or hereafter, by actual enumeration, have a population within said limits, shall have power, by ordinance duly enacted, to establish in such city a municipal court for the trial and determination of all cases arising under the ordinances of such city. Every municipal court established under the authority of this act shall be vested with all the powers and jurisdiction, and be held and conducted in the same manner, and be subject to all the terms and provisions which are created, expressed, and declared in the sections of the Code of Laws above mentioned.

By A. A. 1913, p. 135, a township court is established for cities having between twenty-five thousand and forty thousand inhabitants, money jurisdiction being limited to five hundred dollars.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

The county officers are —

Clerk of the court of general sessions and of common pleas (the circuit court).

County Sheriff.

Master in certain counties (two in Charleston County).

County Coroner.

Probate Judge, who has jurisdiction as above stated.

County Treasurer, who collects all the taxes of the county.

County Auditor, who assesses all the property of the county.

County Supervisor and County Board of Commissioners, who have control over all roads, bridges, public buildings, etc. in most counties.

County Superintendent of Education and County Board of Education, who have charge of all free schools in the county, except in the city of Charleston, and certain other school districts.

Register of Mens Conveyance (in Charleston, Greenville, and Spartanburg counties), who has charge of all records pertaining to the conveyance, mortgage, or pledge of real and personal property. In every county but Charleston, Greenville, and Spartanburg the clerk of the court discharges the said duties. (Code of Laws, 1912, vol. 1, §§ 1348, 1349.)

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Bailey & Voorhees, of Sioux Falls.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT.

Jurisdiction. — The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction unlimited in amount. It has original jurisdiction over writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, injunction, and other original and remedial writs; and all writs necessary to the exercise of its appellate jurisdiction.

Judges. — E. G. Smith, of Yankton; C. S. Whiting, of DeSmet; J. H. McCoy, of Aberdeen; S. C. Polley, of Deadwood; and J. H. Gates, of Sioux Falls.

Terms. — At Pierre, 1st Tuesdays in April and October.

CIRCUIT COURTS.

The circuit courts possess chancery as well as common law jurisdiction. They have original jurisdiction of all actions and causes, both at law and in equity. They have exclusive original jurisdiction in all actions or proceedings in chancery, except a limited jurisdiction conferred on municipal courts to determine liens on personal property, and in all actions at law where the debt or sum claimed, or value of the property involved, exceeds one thousand dollars, in counties where the population is ten thousand or more; and in all cases in which the title to real property or the boundary thereof in any wise comes in question, except in actions in forcible entry and detainer in the municipal court; and in all such other cases as now are or may hereafter be provided by law. They have jurisdiction of appeals from all final judgments of justices of the peace and some classes of final judgments of municipal courts, and from all judgments, decrees, or orders of the probate court, or other inferior officers or tribunals, in the cases prescribed by statute. They have also the power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, quo warranto, certiorari, injunction, and other original and remedial writs; and all other writs necessary to carry into effect their judgments, decrees, and orders, and to give them a general control over inferior courts, officers, boards, tribunals, and jurisdictions.

Circuit Judges. — 1st Circuit, R. B. Tripp, of Yankton; 2d Circuit, Joseph W. Jones, of Sioux Falls, and L. L. Fleeger, of Parker; 3d Circuit, W. N. Skinner, of Watertown; 4th Circuit, Frank B. COUNTY COURTS.

Jurisdiction. — They have original jurisdiction in the probate of wills, the administration and settlement of estates of deceased persons, the guardianship of minors, insane or incompetent persons, and idiots, and in proceedings by executors, administrators and guardians for the sale of real estate; and in counties having a population of ten thousand or over, concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit court in all that class of cases wherein justices of the peace now have or may hereafter have jurisdiction, except actions for the forcible entry or detainer of real property, where the debt, damage, claim, or value of the property involved shall not exceed one thousand dollars, and criminal jurisdiction in all cases of misdemeanor. Appeals from and writs of error to the county courts are allowed to the supreme court in civil and criminal cases, and in all probate matters to the circuit court.

Terms. — Terms of the county court are held at the several county seats on the 1st Monday in January, March, May, July, September, and November, and the court is always open for probate business. In counties of over ten thousand population terms for civil and criminal business are held on the 1st Tuesday in January and July.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Justices' courts have jurisdiction in actions arising on contract for the recovery of money only, where the sum claimed does not exceed one hundred dollars; for damages for injury to the person; taking, detaining, or injuring personal property; or for an injury to real property, where the title or boundary of such real property does not in any wise come in question, and where the damages claimed do not exceed one hundred dollars; for a fine, penalty, or forfeiture not exceeding one hundred dollars; and for and in actions to recover the possession of personal property, when the value of such property does not exceed one hundred dollars; upon any bond or undertaking conditioned for the payment of money, not exceeding one hundred dollars; to take and enter judgment on the confession of a defendant, when the amount confessed does not exceed one hundred dollars; in actions for forcible entry and detainer, or detainer only, of real property, where the title or boundary thereof in nowise comes in question. These courts have criminal jurisdiction to try and determine all cases of misdemeanor committed within their respective counties, not indictable, where the punishment is a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail for a period not exceeding thirty days, or both such fine and imprisonment. And as to all public offenses which are indictable, they have the power of committing magistrates.

MUNICIPAL COURTS.

Municipal courts may by vote of the electors be established in cities having a population of five thousand or over and in county seats having a population of fifteen hundred or over. Where established they displace the justices' courts in the city and have jurisdiction concurrent with the circuit court throughout the county in which the city is located in civil cases in which the amount involved does not exceed five hundred dollars. They have exclusive original jurisdiction of civil and criminal cases arising under the city ordinances, and have substantially the same criminal jurisdiction throughout the county possessed by the justices' courts. They also have jurisdiction in the county, concurrent with the circuit court, of actions to foreclose chattel mortgages and to determine other liens on personal property in which the amount of the relief demanded does not exceed five hundred dollars.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Judge — Presides over the county court, which is the court of probate.

County Auditor — Has charge of the county's accounts. He issues drafts upon the county treasurer, and audits the claims against the county. He is the clerk of the board of county commissioners. He makes the lists of taxes, and has charge of the expenditures of the county.

Register of Deeds — Has charge of the record of deeds, mortgages, and all miscellaneous instruments and records.

County Treasurer — Receives the duplicates of lists of taxes filed in his office by the county auditor, and collects the same. He pays drafts drawn upon him by the clerk of courts for court expenses. He collects the state and county revenue, and pays the former to the treasurer of the State. He also collects the taxes levied by cities and towns within the county. He has charge of tax sales and issues tax sale certificates and deeds thereon.

Sheriff — Performs the duties commonly appurtenant to that office.

Clerk of Courts — Is clerk of, and has charge of the records, files, and seals of both the circuit and county courts.

State's Attorney — Represents the State in all criminal matters arising in either the circuit or county courts, and is the attorney of the county.

County Commissioners — Generally compose a board of five. They have general charge of all the business of the county.

In addition to the foregoing are the superintendent of schools, the surveyor, and the coroner, whose duties are sufficiently indicated by the names of their offices.

COURT CALENDAR FOR TENNESSEE.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1918-1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by Walter Stokes, Esq., of Nashville.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT OF TENNESSEE.

The supreme court is the highest appellate court, and hears certain appeals and writs of error from the circuit and chancery courts, and all petitions for certiorari from the court of civil appeals. It has no original jurisdiction.
Chief Justice, D. L. Landsden, of Cookeville. Justices, Grafton Green, of Lebanon; Frank P. Hall, of Dresden; Collin P. McKinney, of Ripley; Nathan L. Bachman, of Chattanooga.
Terms. — Eastern Division, at Knoxville, 2d Monday in September. Clerk, Samuel E. Cleage.
Middle Division, at Nashville, 1st Monday in December. Clerk, Preston Vaughn.
Western Division, at Jackson, 1st Monday in April. Clerk, T. B. Carroll.

COURT OF CIVIL APPEALS.

The act of the General Assembly, approved February 12, 1907, amended the act approved April 29, 1905, creating the "Court of Chancery Appeals," by adding two additional judges; said court to consist of five judges and the name changed to the "Court of Civil Appeals." To hold one session in each year at the following places and dates: At Nashville, the 1st Monday in September; at Jackson, the 1st Monday in January; and at Knoxville, the 1st Monday in May, and special sessions as provided for. Its jurisdiction is appellate only and conclusive in all cases from courts of equity or chancery not exceeding one thousand dollars, exclusive of costs; and excepting ejectment suits and others involving revenue and constitutional questions. All cases from the circuit courts must be appealed to the court of civil appeals regardless of the amount involved.
Cases in the court of civil appeals can only be taken for review before the supreme court by certiorari. The judges of that court are: Presiding Justice, S. F. Wilson, of Nashville. Justices, Walter W. Faw, of Franklin; W. A. Owen, of Covington; Sid R. Clark, of Trenton; R. H. Sansom, of Knoxville. They sit in banc at the times and places named.

CHANCERY AND CIRCUIT COURTS.

The courts of record of civil jurisdiction are, in each county, a circuit court; in each chancery district (composed of one or more counties), a chancery court; in each county, a probate court. The counties are laid off into civil districts, and in each civil district are two justices of the peace and a constable.
The circuit courts hold three terms annually; are courts of general original jurisdiction according to the course of the common law, and for the trial, as at common law, of actions of contract and wrong wherein the value of the cause of action exceeds fifty dollars. It has also general appellate jurisdiction.
The chancery courts hold two terms annually, are courts of general equity jurisdiction as at common law, in cases where the subject of the suit is of value exceeding fifty dollars. And now by Act, 1915, ch. 47, § 1 (Jurisdiction of Chancery Court, amending Act 1877, ch. 97), jurisdiction of all civil causes of action now triable in the circuit court, except for unliquidated damages for injuries to person or character and except for unliquidated damages for injuries to property not resulting from a breach of oral or written contract, is hereby conferred upon the chancery court, which shall have and exercise concurrent jurisdiction thereof along with the circuit court.

PROBATE COURTS.

The probate or quorum courts, denominated the county courts, have the usual probate jurisdiction; such as admitting wills to probate and record; the qualifications of executors; the appointment and qualification of administrators, guardians of infants and persons of unsound mind; the settlement of accounts of executors, administrators, guardians, etc. It is the duty of these courts to provide for the collection of taxes for county purposes. And they have concurrent jurisdiction with the chancery and circuit courts in sales of land for distribution and partition.

In some of the more populous and wealthy counties, special judges preside in the probate courts. Generally, in the counties, these courts are called quorum courts, and are administered by a justice of the peace, elected annually by the justices of the county, and styled chairman of the county court.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

The courts of justices of the peace are not courts of record. Justices have jurisdiction of causes of equity cognizance wherein the value in controversy does not exceed fifty dollars, and of causes of action in tort wherein the damages claimed do not exceed five hundred dollars. They have also jurisdiction of actions against the makers of promissory notes, acceptors of bills, indorsers who have waived demand and notice, liquidated accounts signed by the party to be charged, obligors of bonds, wherein the judgment to be rendered does not exceed one thousand dollars; and against indorsers of notes and bills, debtors on open or unliquidated accounts, and in actions of replevin, and of forcible and unlawful entry and detainer, and in all cases of damages, except libel and slander, arising from either tort or contract, wherein the judgment rendered does not exceed five hundred dollars. (Act 1875, ch. 11.)

The courts of the justices are always open. Generally, no defined time is requisite for service of process before trial and judgment. The constable who serves the process (warrant) generally designates the day, hour, and place for the trial; and unless good cause for continuance is shown, judgment may be obtained on day of issuance, service, and return of the warrant, after the lapse of one hour from the time case is set for trial.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Sheriff. — General duties and powers of such officer.

Trustee — Is the collector of taxes.

Register — Records instruments required by statute to be registered.

Notaries, Constables, Clerks of Courts. — Like duties and powers as usually belong to such officers.

Justices of the Peace. — The counties are laid off into civil districts. Each civil district elects two justices and one constable. Their duties and powers are those usual to such officers, and coextensive with their respective counties. The justices of each county meet at their courthouse the 1st Mondays in January, April, July, and October, and have, in such sessions, charge of the roads, bridges, paupers, taxation, and financial administration of their counties; they elect each year one of themselves to be chairman of the quorum court, except in counties which elect county judges, the principal duties and powers of which court are, to meet at the courthouse on the 1st Monday in each month, make probate of wills, qualify executors, appoint and qualify administrators and guardians, confirm or modify or reject the settlements made by the clerk of the court of the accounts of executors, administrators, and guardians, to partition and distribute estates of decedents, to settle insolvent estates of decedents, to allot dower, to partition lands, to change names of persons, etc.

COURT CALENDAR FOR TEXAS.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1918-1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Baker, Botts, Parker & Garwood, of Houston.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT.

The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction as to matters of law in civil cases only, after judgment in one of the courts of civil appeals. (For jurisdiction, see Laws of Texas, title "Appeals.")

Term. — At Austin, from the first Monday in October to the last of June.

Chief Justice, Nelson Phillips, of Dallas. Associate Justices, W. E. Hawkins and Thomas B. Greenwood. Reporter, A. E. Wilkinson, of Austin. Clerk, F. T. Connerly, of Austin. Attorney-General, B. F. Looney, of Greenville.

COURT OF CIVIL APPEALS.

The State is divided (by counties) into nine supreme judicial districts, in each of which is held a "Court of Civil Appeals" with appellate jurisdiction in civil cases decided by the district and county Courts. (See Laws of Texas, title "Appeals.") They are each in session from the first Monday in October until the first Monday in July. Cases are subject to call for hearing thirty days after being filed and in the order filed.

The court of civil appeals for the First Supreme Judicial District sits at Galveston. R. A. Pleasants, of Houston, Chief Justice. C. E. Lane, of La Grange, and Geo. W. Graves, of Houston, Associate Justices. H. L. Garrett, Clerk.

The court of civil appeals for the Second Supreme Judicial District sits at Fort Worth. T. H. Conner, of Eastland, Chief Justice. R. H. Buck, of Fort Worth, and Irby Dunklin, of Fort Worth, Associate Justices. J. A. Scott, Clerk.

The court of civil appeals for the Third Supreme Judicial District sits at Austin. W. M. Key, of Austin, Chief Justice. B. H. Rice, of Marlin, and C. H. Jenkins, of Brownwood, Associate Justices. R. H. Connerly, Clerk.

The court of civil appeals for the Fourth Supreme Judicial District sits at San Antonio. W. S. Fly, of Gonzales, Chief Justice. A. N. Moursund, of Fredericksburg, and P. H. Swearingen, of San Antonio, Associate Justices. J. Murray, Clerk.

The court of civil appeals for the Fifth Supreme Judicial District sits at Dallas. Anson Rainey, of Waxahachie, Chief Justice. J. M. Talbot, of Dallas, and Chas. A. Rasbury, of Dallas, Associate Justices. Geo. W. Blair, Clerk.

The court of civil appeals for the Sixth Supreme Judicial District sits at Texarkana. S. P. Willson, of Jacksonville, Chief Justice. R. B. Levy, of Longview, and William Hodges, of Paris, Associate Justices. E. T. Rosborough, of Texarkana, Clerk.

The court of civil appeals for the Seventh Supreme Judicial District sits at Amarillo. S. P. Huff, of Amarillo, Chief Justice. R. W. Hall, of Vernon, and William Boyce, of Amarillo, Associate Justices. J. M. Oakes, Clerk.

The court of civil appeals for the Eighth Supreme Judicial District sits at El Paso. J. R. Harper, of El Paso, Chief Justice. E. F. Higgins, of Alpine, and A. M. Walthall, Associate Justices. J. F. Driscoll, Clerk.

The court of civil appeals for the Ninth Supreme Judicial District sits at Beaumont. L. B. Hightower, Jr., of Beaumont, Chief Justice. A. G. Brooke, of Carthage, and S. M. King, of Nacogdoches, Associate Justices. W. G. Woodard, Clerk.

COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEALS.

The court of criminal appeals has appellate jurisdiction in all criminal cases except cases originating in justices' courts wherein the judgment rendered or fine imposed by county court does not exceed one hundred dollars.

Term. — At Austin, from first Monday in October to last Saturday in June. W. L. Davidson, of Georgetown, Presiding Judge. O. S. Lattimore, of Fort Worth, and W. C. Morrow, of Hillsboro, Judges. Clerk, E. P. Smith, of Austin.

DISTRICT COURTS.

The district courts have original jurisdiction in all criminal cases of the grade of felony; in all suits in behalf of the State to recover penalties, forfeitures, and escheats; of all cases of divorce; of all misdemeanors involving official misconduct; of all suits to recover damages for slander or defamation of character; for all suits for trial of title to land for the enforcement of liens thereon; of all suits for the trial of the right of property when the property levied on shall be equal to or exceed in value five hundred dollars; of all suits, complaints, or pleas whatever, without regard to any distinction between law and equity, when the matter in controversy shall be valued at an amount in excess of five hundred dollars, exclusive of interest; and of contested election. And the said court and the judges thereof have power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, injunctions, and certiorari, and all writs necessary to enforce their jurisdiction. They also have appellate jurisdiction and general control in probate matters over the county court, and original jurisdiction over all causes of action for which a remedy or jurisdiction is not otherwise provided. The district court also has appellate jurisdiction and general supervisory control of the county commissioners' court.

The legislature is authorized by the Constitution to limit the jurisdiction of the county court in any county to probate matters alone, whereupon the jurisdiction of the county court is transferred to the district court for that county; and this has been done in many of the counties.

The State is divided into eighty-six judicial districts, the courts holding sessions in and for each organized county of the State.

TIMES FOR HOLDING DISTRICT COURTS IN 1918-1919.

NOTE. — In the following calendar, the letters t. f. mean "till finished," or until business is disposed of. W. means weeks. In case of the expiration of the term of a district court during the trial of a case the judge may continue the term until the end of the trial. The unorganized counties are designated by asterisks. In counties marked thus, †, the county courts have only probate jurisdiction.

COUNTY COURTS.

The county court in each county, where the jurisdiction has not been conferred upon the district court as before stated, has original jurisdiction of all misdemeanors punishable by imprisonment or by fine exceeding two hundred dollars, and exclusive original jurisdiction of all civil cases when the matter in controversy exceeds in value two hundred dollars and does not exceed five hundred dollars exclusive of interest, and concurrent jurisdiction with the district court when the matter in controversy exceeds five hundred dollars and does not exceed one thousand dollars, but has no jurisdiction of suits for the recovery of land or for the enforcement of liens thereon. They have appellate jurisdiction in cases civil and criminal of which justice courts have original jurisdiction, but of such civil cases only when the amount in controversy in the justice court exceeds the sum or value of twenty dollars exclusive of interest and costs, and in all appeals from the justice court the trial in the county court is de novo.

The county courts have the general jurisdiction of a probate court; they probate wills, appoint guardians of minors, idiots, lunatics, persons non compos mentis, and common drunkards, grant letters testamentary and of administration, settle accounts of executors, etc., and issue all writs necessary to enforce their jurisdiction.

But in many counties the jurisdiction of the county courts, except as to probate matters, is transferred to the district court. Such courts are designated in the district court calendar by the mark †.

Practice.—Same as district courts, except that jury consists of six men, qualified as in district court.

Terms.—Of each county court are held at least once in three months. The terms are fixed in each county by the commissioners' court.

COMMISSIONERS' COURTS.

The county commissioners, of whom there are four elected in each county, with the county judge as presiding officer, constitute a county commissioners' court, having jurisdiction of all county police and business matters. This court has charge of the business affairs of the county, contracts for public improvements, and appropriates the county funds.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Justices' courts, of which there are from four to eight in each county, are courts, not of record, having original jurisdiction, civil and criminal, where the amount sued for, exclusive of interest, or the penalty sought to be imposed, does not exceed two hundred dollars. They may render judgments for specific articles, foreclose liens on personal property, and have original jurisdiction of all cases of forcible entry and detainer, and distrains for rent. They are held to be courts of general jurisdiction within their prescribed limits, and judgments carry presumptions accordingly.

Terms — Are held for civil business once in each month, and in cities of over eight thousand inhabitants there are two justices of the peace with concurrent jurisdiction, thus making two terms each month.

· COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Judge. — Judge of county court, for which see above; presides over commissioners' court, see above; chief manager of business affairs of county. In many counties he is ex-officio superintendent of public schools.

Sheriff — Performs the duties usually incident to that office, executes process, has charge of county jail, etc. In counties having less than ten thousand population the sheriff is also collector of taxes.

County Clerk — Is clerk of the county court and the commissioners' court; has charge of the records of those courts; is county recorder and has charge of the records of deeds, mortgages, and other papers entitled to registration.

Assessor — Assesses the property of the county, both real and personal, each year, for taxation.

Tax Collector. — In counties of ten thousand inhabitants or over, the tax collector collects the taxes and accounts to the State and county therefor.

County Attorney — Represents the State in criminal prosecutions in county court and inferior courts, aids the district attorney in prosecutions in the district court; represents the State in district court in the absence of district attorney; institutes suits to collect delinquent taxes; advises county officers and represents the county in litigation.

County Superintendent of Schools. — In certain counties there is a county superintendent of education, who visits the public schools, approves teachers' contracts, receives their reports, approves their salary vouchers, issues certificates, advises trustees, etc. In many of the counties of the State, the county judge performs these duties.

County Surveyor. — The county surveyor is required to receive and examine all field notes of land surveys in the county, certify them, and record them in a book to be kept for that purpose; to plat the surveys upon a map; and perform certain duties in regard to the public lands of the county.

COURT CALENDAR FOR UTAH.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by Messrs. Dey, Hoppaugh & Fabian, of Salt Lake City.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT.

The supreme court consists of five judges. Its jurisdiction is both original and appellate. Its original jurisdiction extends to the issuing of writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, quo warranto, and habeas corpus; its appellate jurisdiction, to a review of all cases removed to it from the district courts.

Chief Justice, W. M. McCarty. Associate Justices, E. E. Corfman, Samuel R. Thurman, Valentine Gideon, and J. E. Frick.

Three terms each year, at Salt Lake City; one begins on the second Monday in February, one on the second Monday in May, and one on the second Monday in October.

DISTRICT COURTS.

The district court has original jurisdiction in all civil and probate actions, and appellate jurisdiction over the justice of the peace, city, and municipal courts.

The State is divided into seven judicial districts. At least three terms a year must be held in each county. Terms are not fixed by law, but by the judge of the district during the month of December each year.

First Judicial District, J. D. Call, Judge.

Second Judicial District, Alfred W. Agee and A. E. Pratt, Judges.

Third Judicial District, William H. Bramel, John F. Tobin, P. C. Evans, Harold M. Stephen, and J. Louis Brown, Judges.

Fourth Judicial District, Andrew B. Morgan, Judge.

Fifth Judicial District, David H. Morris, Judge.

Sixth Judicial District, Henry N. Hayes, Judge.

Seventh Judicial District, George Christensen, Judge.

JUSTICES', MUNICIPAL, AND CITY COURTS.

Justices and municipal courts have jurisdiction to hear and determine practically all civil cases at law in which the debt or damage claimed does not exceed three hundred dollars, and in which the title or boundaries of real property is not in issue. They have concurrent jurisdiction with the district courts in cases of forcible entry and forcible and unlawful detainer where the whole amount of rent and damage claimed is less than three hundred dollars; and also in actions to foreclose chattel mortgages where the sum claimed and value of the property are each less than three hundred dollars.

Municipal courts exist in cities having a population of more than fifteen and less than forty thousand.

The city court exists only in cities of the first class. Its jurisdiction is concurrent with the district court, and practically covers all cases in which the amount involved does not exceed five hundred dollars, and in which the title to real estate is not involved. At present Salt Lake City is the only city of the first class in Utah.

COURT CALENDAR FOR VIRGINIA.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1918-1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by Messrs. Jo. Lane & Cary Ellis Stern, of Richmond.

UNITED STATES COURTS.
For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

COURTS OF VIRGINIA.
The courts consist of a supreme court of appeals, circuit courts, corporation courts, the chancery court of the city of Richmond, the law and equity court of Richmond city, and the law and chancery court of Norfolk city.

SUPREME COURT OF APPEALS.
The supreme court has appellate jurisdiction of all criminal offenses and of civil suits where matter in controversy exceeds three hundred dollars in value. It has no original jurisdiction except in cases of habeas corpus, mandamus,¹ and prohibition.
It consists of five judges, who select the president.
The judges of the supreme court of appeals are S. G. Whittle, of Martinsville, Virginia; Joseph L. Kelly, of Bristol, Virginia; Frederick W. Sims, of Louisa, Virginia; Robert R. Prentiss, of Suffolk, Virginia; Martin P. Burke, of Lexington, Virginia. Elected for 12, 10, 8, 6, and 4 years.
Regular Terms. — At Richmond, 1st Tuesday in November, with adjourned sessions.
At Staunton, 1st Tuesday in September.
At Wytheville, 1st Tuesday in June.

CIRCUIT COURTS.
The State is divided into thirty-one judicial circuits, under the jurisdiction of as many circuit judges, who are elected by the legislature for eight years. There is no separate chancery court, except for the city of Richmond, the circuit judges having both common law and equity jurisdiction. The circuit courts have jurisdiction of all suits at law and in equity for amounts over twenty dollars, to which the Commonwealth is not a party. The circuit court of the city of Richmond has exclusive jurisdiction of cases at common law (exclusive of criminal cases) and equity cases to which the State is a party. It has no other equity jurisdiction.

TIMES FOR HOLDING CIRCUIT COURTS IN 1918-1919.
NOTE. — For terms of holding circuit courts in cities, see end of list. Where the day of the month fixed for a term to commence falls on Sunday, the court convenes on the Monday after.

Corporation Court of Winchester and also the Corporation Court of Manchester sit on 3d Monday in each month except August.

CORPORATION COURTS.

The cities of the State shall be divided into two classes. All cities which contain ten thousand inhabitants or more shall belong to the first class, and all cities which contain less than ten thousand inhabitants shall belong to the second class. In each city of the first class there shall be, in addition to the circuit court, a corporation court.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Recorder. — There is no such officer in Virginia, the duties generally incident to that office being discharged by the clerk of the corporation court, in corporations having such courts, and the clerk of the circuit court of the counties, who has charge of the record of deeds, mortgages, and all miscellaneous records of the county or city. He records any proper instrument presented to him for that purpose, for the lawful fee provided therefor.

County Treasurer. — Pays any warrants drawn upon him by the proper authorities of the county. Collects the state as well as the county revenue and pays the former to the treasurer of the State. He has charge of tax sales, etc.

COURT CALENDAR FOR WASHINGTON.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1919.

Revised November 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Hughes, McMicken, Ramsey & Rupp, of Seattle.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT.

Jurisdiction. — The supreme court has original jurisdiction in habeas corpus and quo warranto and mandamus as to all state officers, and appellate jurisdiction in all actions and proceedings, excepting that its appellate jurisdiction shall not extend to civil actions at law for the recovery of money or personal property, when the original amount in controversy, or the value of the property, does not exceed the sum of two hundred dollars, unless the action involves the legality of a tax, impost, assessment, toll, municipal fine, or the validity of a statute. The supreme court also has power to issue writs of mandamus, review, prohibition, habeas corpus, certiorari, and all other writs necessary and proper to the complete exercise of its appellate and revisory jurisdiction. (Constitution, Art. IV, § 4.)

The supreme court of Washington is composed of a chief justice and eight associate judges, elected by the qualified electors of the State at large at the general state election and for the term of six years.

Chief Justice, John F. Main, of Seattle. Associate Justices, Mark A. Fullerton, of Olympia; Wallace Mount, of Spokane; Stephen J. Chadwick, of Colfax; Emmet N. Parker, of Tacoma; Oscar R. Holcomb, of Ritzville; Kenneth Mackintosh, of Seattle; John R. Mitchell, of Olympia; and Warren W. Tolman, of Spokane. Attorney-General, W. V. Tanner, of Seattle. Clerk, C. S. Reinhart, of Olympia.

Terms. — At Olympia, 2d Mondays in January, May, and October.

SUPERIOR COURTS.

There is one superior court in each county.

Jurisdiction. — The superior courts have original jurisdiction in all cases in equity, and in all cases at law which involve the title or possession of real property, or the legality of any tax, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine; and in all other cases in which the demand or the value of the property in controversy amounts to one hundred dollars, and in all criminal cases amounting to felony, and in all cases of misdemeanor, not otherwise provided for by law; of actions of forcible entry and detainer; of proceedings in insolvency; of actions to prevent or abate a nuisance; of all matters of probate, of divorce, and for annulment of marriage; and for such special cases and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for; also original jurisdiction in all cases and of all proceedings in which jurisdiction is not vested exclusively in some other court; also the power of naturalization, and to issue papers therefor; the power to issue writs of mandamus, quo warranto, review, certiorari, prohibition, and habeas corpus. (Constitution, Art. IV, § 6.) There is a superior court in each of the organized counties of this State. Each judge is elected by the qualified electors of the county for the term of four years.

The superior courts are also invested by the Constitution with jurisdiction over all matters of probate.

The superior courts are courts of continuous session. But as some of the judges are elected for two or more counties these judges hold court in one county at certain specified times and at other times in another county, as shown in the following table. While the judge is holding court in another county the most urgent of his duties may be performed by a "court commissioner" appointed by him. Such commissioner has power to hear and determine all probate matters, to grant defaults and enter judgment, to issue temporary restraining orders, and perform like duties as a judge of the superior court at chambers subject to revision by the judge of the county, to take testimony and proofs, to grant adjournments, preserve order, compel the attendance of witnesses, administer oaths, and to authenticate his official acts with his official seal of "court commissioner." (Const. Art. IV, § 23, 1 R. & B. C. §§ 83-85.)

The judge of the superior court in each county may appoint a court commissioner for the county, who shall have power, authority, and jurisdiction concurrent with the superior court in certain particulars, e. g. to hear and determine all matters of probate, grant and enter defaults, issue temporary restraining orders and injunctions, fix and approve bonds, hear and determine proceedings supplemental to execution, grant adjournments, administer oaths, compel attendance of witnesses, take acknowledgments, affidavits, and depositions, etc. All his acts shall be subject to revision by the superior court. (1 R. & B. C. §§ 83-86.)

PROBATE COURTS.

See Superior Courts.

JUSTICES' COURTS.

Each county is divided into precincts by the county commissioners, and in each precinct a justice of the peace is elected, who has jurisdiction in civil cases where the amount in controversy is less than the sum of one hundred dollars, except in actions for false imprisonment, libel, slander, malicious prosecution, criminal conversation, or seduction, and except against an executor or administrator as such. Where the title to land is in issue, they have no jurisdiction. (1 R. & B. C. §§ 43-45.) In incorporated cities, there are one or more justices of the peace.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Assessor — Determines fair value of property listed for taxation.

Board of Equalization — Is composed of the county commissioners, the county assessor, and the county treasurer, or a majority of them. Meets 1st Monday in August at office of county auditor.

County Auditor — Acts as clerk of board of equalization. Keeps accounts current with county treasurer. Records deeds and other instruments, and registers warrants.

County Treasurer — Is receiver and collector of state, county, municipal, and other taxes.

County Clerk — Is custodian of all court records and seal of court. In addition to administering oaths in court, he has the powers of a notary public; attends all sessions of court in person or by deputy.

COURT CALENDAR FOR WYOMING.

JURISDICTION AND TIMES FOR HOLDING COURTS IN 1918-1919

Revised November 1, 1918, by William A. Riner, Esq., of Cheyenne.

UNITED STATES COURTS.

For terms of United States courts and officials, see first part of Court Calendar.

SUPREME COURT.

The supreme court has original jurisdiction in quo warranto and mandamus as to all state officers, and in habeas corpus. It has also power to issue writs of mandamus, review, prohibition, habeas corpus, certiorari, and other writs necessary or proper to the complete exercise of its appellate and revisory jurisdiction. Each of the judges has power to issue writs of habeas corpus. It consists of three judges and holds two terms each year, one commencing on the 1st Monday in April and one commencing on the 1st Monday in October.
Chief Justice, Charles N. Potter. Associate Justices, Cyrus Beard and Charles H. Blydenburg. Its sessions are held in Cheyenne.

DISTRICT COURTS.

The State is divided into seven districts. The district courts are courts of general jurisdiction. They have original jurisdiction of all causes both at law and in equity, and in all criminal cases, of all matters of probate and insolvency, and other proceedings not otherwise provided for. They have appellate jurisdiction in cases arising in justices' courts. They have also power to issue writs of mandamus, quo warranto, review, certiorari, prohibition, injunction, and writs of habeas corpus by or on behalf of any person in actual custody in their respective districts. The counties of Laramie, Platt, Goshen, and Niobrara compose the first district. The counties of Albany and Carbon compose the second district. The counties of Lincoln, Sweetwater, and Uinta compose the third district. The counties of Johnson and Sheridan compose the fourth district. The counties of Park, Big Horn, Washakie, and Hot Springs compose the fifth district. The counties of Fremont, Natrona, and Converse compose the sixth district. The counties of Campbell, Crook, and Weston compose the seventh district. District Judges, William C. Mentzer, Judge of the First District; Volney J. Tidball, Judge of the Second District, John R. Arnold, Judge of the Third District; James H. Burgess, Judge of the Fourth District; P. W. Metz, Judge of the Fifth District; Charles E. Winter, Judge of the Sixth District; E. C. Raymond, Judge of the Seventh District.

Washakie.	Worland.	5th.	2d Monday in September.
Weston.	Newcastle.	7th.	1st Mondays in March and November.

JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

The several justices of the peace are elected in each county, whose courts are open at all times. Their jurisdiction in civil cases is confined to cases where the debt or sum claimed does not exceed two hundred dollars. They have no jurisdiction in controversies where the title to real estate is brought in question. Executions issuing therefrom can be levied only on personal property, but transcripts of their judgments may be filed in the district court, and thereupon executions may issue against the real estate of the judgment debtor.

Appeals may be taken in all cases to the district courts except from judgments by confession, and when the judgment is less than twenty-five dollars or for costs only. These courts have jurisdiction to hear and determine all misdemeanors where the penalty prescribed by law does not exceed a fine of one hundred dollars and imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding six months, saving to the defendant the right of appeal to the district court. In all other cases of crimes or misdemeanors justices of the peace are merely examining magistrates, with power to commit or hold to bail.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

County Clerk — Has charge of the records of deeds, mortgages, and all the miscellaneous records of the county. He records any papers or instruments presented to him for that purpose for the fee provided by law in each case. The county clerk in all counties, except those having an assessed valuation of over five million dollars, has charge also of the records of the district court, the only court of record. The district court also has probate jurisdiction. The clerk issues all processes. In counties where the assessed valuation is more than five million dollars the office of clerk of the district court is a separate office. The county clerk is also clerk of the board of county commissioners, the auditing body and the body exercising the general powers of the county.

County Treasurer — Receives the tax list when completed, and collects the taxes and pays the county warrants. All city, county, and school taxes are paid to him. He has charge also of tax sales, etc.

ALBERTA LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Short, Ross, Selwood, Shaw & Mayhood, of Calgary.

Acknowledgments. — See Affidavits.

Affidavits. — Affidavits may be sworn abroad, before (1) any notary public, certified under his hand and official seal, (2) any judge of a court of record, (3) any British consul, (4) or before a commissioner appointed for the purpose of taking affidavits outside the Province. The officers of the court take judicial notice of the seal, or signature as the case may be, of such notary public, judge, consul, or person subscribed to any affidavit. All affidavits must be drawn up (1) in the first person, (2) divided into paragraphs, (3) the paragraphs numbered consecutively, (4) and as nearly as may be each paragraph must be confined to a distinct portion of the subject. Every affidavit must also state the occupation and true place of abode of the deponent and must be signed by him, and the jurat must express the time when and the place where the affidavit is taken.

Assignments. — An assignment may be made to an official assignee of the judicial district in which the debtor resides or carries on business for the purpose of paying ratably or proportionately and without preference or priority, all the creditors their just debts; otherwise every gift, conveyance, assignment or transfer, delivery over or payment of any property, real or personal, made by an insolvent or by a person unable to pay his debts in full, or by one knowingly on the eve of insolvency, (1) with intent to defeat, hinder, delay, or prejudice creditors, or (2) with intent to prefer a creditor, or (3) which has the effect of preferring a creditor, and (4) every confession of judgment, cognovit actionem, or warrant of attorney to confess judgment made by a like person with intent to defeat, delay, or prefer a creditor, shall as to (1), (2), and (4) be utterly void as against the creditors injured, and as to (3) be utterly void as against the creditors injured bringing action or proceedings within sixty days thereafter. Any alienation, fraudulent at common law, may be successfully attacked at any time within the period of the Statute of Limitations. An assignment takes priority, except as to costs, as against all other attachments, garnishments, judgments, or executions where payment to the creditor or other person has not actually been made. The assignee may disclaim leaseholds.

Attachment. — 1. Of Debts. — Any plaintiff in an action for a debt or liquidated demand, before or after judgment, and any person who has obtained a judgment or order for the recovery or payment of money, may issue a garnishee summons upon filing an affidavit of himself or his advocate or agent showing the nature and amount of the claim or judgment and swearing positively to the indebtedness and stating that to the best of the deponent's information and belief the proposed garnishee is indebted to the defendant (or judgment debtor). Service of a garnishee summons binds any debt due or accruing due from the garnishee to the defendant (or judgment debtor). No debt due or accruing due from a mechanic, workman, laborer, servant, clerk, or employee for or in respect of his wages or salary, shall be liable to seizure or attachment unless the same exceeds twenty-five dollars, and then only to the extent of the excess. This twenty-five dollars exemption does not apply where the debt sued for, or in respect to which the judgment was recovered, has been contracted for board and lodging.

2. Of Personal Property. — After action brought wherein the claim is for the recovery of a debt of one hundred dollars or upwards, upon affidavit of the plaintiff or his agent setting forth the origin of the debt and amount thereof, and that the deponent has reason to believe (a) that the defendant is about to abscond or has absconded from the Province leaving personal property liable to seizure under execution for debt, or (b) has attempted to remove such property out of the Province or to sell or dispose of the same with intent to defraud his creditors generally or the plaintiff in particular, or (c) keeps concealed to avoid service of process, and (d) in any case the deponent verily believes that without the benefit of attachment he will lose his debt or sustain damage, and upon the further affidavit of one other credible person corroborating such facts, the judge, upon being satisfied, may direct the clerk of the court to issue a writ of attachment, which writ must be executed by the sheriff according to its tenor. The return of the goods seized may be secured by giving the sheriff sufficient security or by depositing in court the appraised value thereof. A writ of attachment may be set aside by a judge on satisfactory proof by affidavits that the creditor who sued out such writ had not reasonable cause for taking such proceeding.

Bill of Sale. — Every sale or mortgage of goods or chattels not accompanied by immediate delivery and followed by an actual and continued change of possession of the goods or binder, and two plows. (5) Books of a professional man. (6) Necessary trade or professional tools of debtor to the value of two hundred dollars. (7) Sufficient seed for cultivated land up to eighty acres and fourteen bushels of potatoes. (8) The homestead to the extent of one hundred and sixty acres or if urban to the value of fifteen hundred dollars. (9) There are no exemptions in favor of an absconding debtor for debt exceeding fifty dollars unless he is leaving his wife or family in the Province, nor to an execution issued upon a judgment or order for payment of alimony.

(b) From Distress. — Distress for rent covers only the interest of the tenant and his relatives, including son-in-law, daughter-in-law, and husband or wife living on the premises as a member of the tenant's family, in the goods upon the premises; excepting that goods there held under execution against the tenant or title to which is derived from him absolutely in trust or as security may be distrained.

Where execution issues on a judgment for the purchase price of any goods, such goods, unless they are the food, clothing, or bedding of the debtor or his family, are not exempt.

Foreign Companies. — No foreign company having gain for its object is allowed to carry on any part of its business in Alberta until it is duly registered or licensed under our Foreign Companies Act, and until such time shall not be capable of acquiring or holding lands or any interest therein or of registering any title thereto under the Land Titles Act.

Inheritance Taxes. — Succession duties are payable on all property situate within the Province, of any person, and passing on his death, except in the following cases: (1) Property passing under a will, intestacy, or otherwise, to or for the use of any person or beneficiary whatsoever, where the net value of the deceased's property does not exceed five thousand dollars. (2) Property passing to or for the use of any resident or residents of the Province, being the grandfather, grandmother, father, mother, husband, wife, child, son-in-law, or daughter-in-law of the deceased, where the net value of the deceased's property does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars. The amount of duty payable on the share of any person or beneficiary is fixed by the following, or by some one or more of the following considerations: (a) Net value of the deceased's property. (b) Place of residence of person or beneficiary. (c) Value of property taken, wherever situated. (d) Degree of kinship or absence of kinship of the deceased. This duty is assessed by and is payable to the provincial treasurer, Edmonton, Alberta. Any duties imposed are due and payable on the death of the deceased, or within six months thereafter, but if satisfactory proof is made that payment within the time above limited would be unduly onerous on the estate, then such payment may be extended by order of the lieutenant-governor-in-council for any period deemed advisable.

Interest. — Five per cent. is the legal rate. A contract may be made for any rate, provided (1) that a bank cannot collect more than seven per cent.; (2) a money lender cannot collect more than twelve per cent. on sums under five hundred dollars; and (3) a real estate mortgagee cannot collect a greater interest after maturity than before.

Judgments. — See Executions.

Limitation of Actions. — On debt for rent upon an indenture of demise or covenant or debt upon any bond or other specialty, actions of debt, or scire facias upon a recognizance, twenty years. Recovery of land or any legacy charged on land or any money secured by mortgage, judgment, lien, or otherwise charged upon or payable out of any land or rent, at law or in equity, twelve years. Debt upon an award where submission is not by specialty or upon money levied on any fiery facias, arrears of rent, or interest in respect of any money charged upon or payable out of any lands or rent, or in respect of any legacy, or any damage in respect of such arrears or rent or interest, case except slander, assumpsit, all actions for recovery of merchants' accounts, bills, notes, and all actions of debt grounded upon any lending or other contract, without specialty, detinue, trover, trespass to land, six years. Trespass to the person, four years. Slander, penal actions, where penalty goes to the crown, two years. Actions by or against the executors or administrators for torts by or against the deceased, one year after the decease. Qui tam actions, recovery of fire insurance, injury causing death and tort actions by executors, one year. Disputed claims against an estate, six months. Infants and persons of unsound mind have six years' grace beyond the time when the disability ceased, and the statute does not begin to run against persons beyond the seas, in each case provided no action shall be brought more than thirty years after the cause accrued. No right or title can be acquired by prescription to any use of light, easement, right in gross or profit a prendre. The statute starts afresh in case of any debt or liquidated demand by part satisfaction of either principal or interest, or by an acknowledgment of the debt in writing signed by the party chargeable or his agent.

Married Women. — A married woman has the same right as a femme sole to acquire, hold, and dispose of every form of personal property, including all her wages and personal earnings and all proceeds or profits from any trade or calling carried on separately from her husband or which is derived from any literary, artistic, or scientific skill, and she has the right to maintain an action in her own name to recover such wages, personal earnings, proceeds, and profits. In respect to land acquired on or after the first day of January, 1887, a married woman has all the rights and is subject to all the liabilities of a femme sole, and may in all respects deal with land as if she were unmarried.

Courtesy abolished. See Dower.

Mortgages. — See Real Property.

Real Property. — The Torrens system of land titles was introduced in the Province on July 1, 1887. All titles to land and every interest therein, except leasehold interests for a

Before it can be registered, every disposition of lands by act inter vivos must be accompanied by sworn proof that the land is not subject to dower or by the consent of the wife duly acknowledged in statutory form.

On registration of a transfer same must be accompanied by the owner's duplicate certificate of title. Such registration implies a covenant by the transferee to pay any existing registered mortgage on the land and also implies a covenant by the transferor for further assurance.

Leases. — When the land is intended to be leased or demised for a life or lives or for a term of more than three years, the owner shall execute a lease in the statutory form, which also must be registered. Surrender of lease or demise (other than by operation of law) is effected by registering same in the form prescribed by the Land Titles Act.

Mortgages. — Mortgages are in the form prescribed by the Land Titles Act and may contain additional covenants and agreements. They have priority according to the time of registration, and are noted upon the certificate of title and duplicate thereof. A discharge of mortgage is executed in statutory form, and registered like a mortgage. All easements, mortgages, and incumbrances may be transferred in whole or in part. All instruments may be executed by attorney, provided the power of attorney is registered.

Executions. — Writs of execution attach lands under the Land Titles Act only when they are registered in the Land Titles Office in which the titles to the lands are recorded. They continue in force during the life of the judgment on which they are founded if issued or renewed subsequent to the first day of September, 1914.

Caveats. — Any person claiming to be interested under any will, settlement, or trust deed, or any instrument or transfer or transmission, or under an unregistered instrument, or under an execution where the execution creditor seeks to affect land in which the execution debtor is interested beneficially, but the title to which is registered in the name of some other person, or otherwise howsoever in any land, mortgage, or incumbrance, may cause to be filed on his behalf with the registrar a caveat in the statutory form, which has the effect of maintaining priority for any instrument subsequently registered as of the date of the registration of the caveat, and renders all transfers or instruments affecting the land subject to the claim of the caveator.

Attestation. — Every instrument required to be registered, except those under the seal of a corporation, caveats, orders by the courts or judge, executions, certificates of judicial proceedings, grants from the Crown, and orders in council, shall be witnessed by one person, who shall sign his name to the instrument as witness and who shall appear, (a) if executed in the Province of Alberta before a person authorized to take affidavits therein, and (b) if executed without the Province before a notary public or other proper official as indicated under affidavits, and make an affidavit to be attached to such instrument in the following form: —

CANADA,
PROVINCE OF ALBERTA, } To wit: —
(or wherever sworn).

I, (full name, address, and occupation of the witness), make oath and say: —

1. That I was personally present and did see (name of person or persons signing instrument), named in the within instrument, who is personally known to me to be the person named therein, duly sign, seal, and execute the same, for the purposes named therein.

2. That the same was executed at (place where executed), and that I am the subscribing witness thereto.

3. That I know the said (name of person or persons signing instrument), and he (or each) is in my belief of the full age of twenty-one years.

(Witness sign here.)

Sworn before me at (place, full description of city, town, or village where sworn), this (date when sworn) A. D. 19 .

A in and for .

Abstracts. — Every registrar shall when requested furnish under seal an abstract showing in whose name any parcel of land stands, the number of the certificate of title, and all instruments registered against the said lands; and every such abstract shall be received as evidence in the same manner and with the same effect as if the title was produced. The registrar upon request shall furnish a general certificate stating what, if any, decrees, orders, executions, or other instruments which affect the lands of any person are registered in his office. The Province of Alberta is divided into the North Alberta Land Registration District covering all the land north of township thirty-four, and the South Alberta Land Registration District covering all the land south of township thirty-five.

Sales in Bulk. — Any sale or transfer of a stock of goods, wares, or merchandise, out of the usual course of business or trade of the vendor, or where substantially the entire stock in trade or an interest of the vendor shall be sold or conveyed by any trader, manufacturer, or merchant other than an executor, administrator, receiver, assignee, or public official, is a sale in bulk. Upon any sale in bulk the purchaser before paying the vendor any part of the purchase price or giving any security therefor shall receive from the vendor a written statement verified by statutory declaration containing the names and addresses of all the creditors of the vendor together with the amount owing to such creditors, and thereupon shall either obtain a written waiver of the provisions of the Bulk Sales Act of Alberta from the vendor's creditors representing fifty per cent. in number and value of the claims as shown by said written statement, or shall pay the whole of the purchase-money or sufficient thereof to satisfy the claims of all the creditors of the vendor, or deliver his promissory note or notes or other documents securing the same or part thereof, to an official assignee, for distribution pro rata among the creditors of the said vendor, subject to any preferences provided for by law or by previous contract. Any purchase contrary to the above requirements with respect to any action brought within sixty days thereafter shall be deemed fraudulent and void, unless the whole of the proceeds of the sale or sufficient thereof to satisfy the claims of all the creditors of the vendor is in fact actually applied in payment of all his creditors without preference or priority except such as is provided for by law or previous contract.

Wills. — Any person of sound mind, not under the age of twenty-one years, may will all property which would otherwise devolve upon his heirs or personal representatives, to any person, subject only to the right of a widow to claim within six months after the date of her husband's death a like share as if her husband had died intestate, provided that no devise or bequest made less than six months before the death of the donor to a religious corporation shall be valid. Every will must be in writing, signed at the foot or end thereof by the testator, or by some other person in his presence and by his direction; and such signature shall be made or acknowledged by the testator in the presence of two or more witnesses present at the same time; and such witnesses shall attest and shall subscribe the will in the presence of the testator, but no form of attestation shall be necessary. Executors, legatees, and devisees are competent witnesses, but, except in the case of a charge for the payment of a debt, any legacy or devise to the witness or the husband or the wife of the witness is void. A will is revoked by marriage, and may be revoked by any subsequent will, codicil, or writing executed with like formality as a will, or by the burning, tearing, or otherwise destroying a will by the testator or by some person in his presence and by his direction with the intention of revoking the same. In the absence of words of limitation or express contrary intention the testator's entire interest passes.

No particular form nor any witness is necessary for the will of a soldier, seaman, or mariner on military or naval service. Such persons even if infants may make a valid will.

Workmen's Compensation. — So far as the statutes provide for compensation to workmen or their dependents for injuries causing death or disability, the fellow-servant rule is abolished. Under a statute of 1918, in industries referred to in that Act, in case of accident causing death or disability to a workman not due to his willful misconduct, the workman or his dependent is entitled to compensation in an amount fixed by the Workmen's Compensation Board, Edmonton, according to a schedule named in the Act, and the common-law remedy is barred. In case of a like accident in industries other than those within the scope of the said Act, a workman on, in, or about a railway, factory, mine or quarry or engineering work, or in or about any building which is either being constructed or repaired by means of a scaffolding, or being demolished, or on which machinery driven by steam, water, or other mechanical power is being used for the purpose of the construction, repair, or demolition thereof, who sustains personal injury by accident, is entitled to compensation from the employer, provided (1) the employee is disabled from earning full wages; (2) the injury is not attributable to the serious willful misconduct of the employee; (3) if the injury result from the personal negligence or willful act of the employer, the employee may elect to proceed at law or claim compensation. The procedure relating to claims and arbitration in case of dispute is set forth in the Act of 1908.

BRITISH COLUMBIA LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Taylor, Mayers, Stockton & Smith, of Vancouver.

Absconding Debtors. — See Attachment.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — Actions in the supreme court are commenced by writ of summons, and in the county court by a summons and plaint. A defendant served personally with a writ issued out of the supreme court in the Province must appear to the writ within eight days after service, including the day of such service, but if the defendant be served without the Province he must appear within such time as is allowed by the judge making the order for service of the writ ex juris, regard being had to the locality in which he is resident. If the defendant residing out of the Province is not a British subject, and is without British dominions, notice of the writ and not the writ itself is to be served. When the action is for debt or liquidated demand, the writ may be specially indorsed with the plaintiff's claim, and in default of appearance as aforesaid the plaintiff may sign final judgment for the amount of his claim without further proof of claim. If the defendant appears to a writ, he must give notice of appearance to the plaintiff. If the writ is specially indorsed and defendant enters an appearance, he must deliver defense within ten days from time limited for entering appearance. If a defendant appears to a writ not specially indorsed, the plaintiff is required to deliver a statement of claim within twenty-one days after appearance. The defendant must then deliver his defense, set-off or counter-claim, within ten days and the plaintiff may reply, if he sees fit, within ten days from the delivery of the defense. On the defendant's failure to appear where the plaintiff's claim indorsed on his writ of summons is unliquidated, no statement of claim is required, but interlocutory judgment may be entered and damages assessed on notice of trial. Where the writ is specially indorsed as aforesaid, no further statement of claim is required, but the indorsement on the writ shall be deemed to be a statement of claim. The defendant may set-off or counter-claim against the plaintiff any right or claim, and such set-off or counter-claim shall have the effect of a cross-action. The plaintiff may, by his reply, join issue with the defense, and each party in his pleading subsequent to reply may join issue upon the previous pleading. The plaintiff may indorse his claim with the statement that if the defendant appears he intends to proceed to trial without pleadings; in such case no pleadings shall be required or delivered except by order of the judge. If the defendant appear in an action where the writ is specially indorsed, the plaintiff may apply to a judge for final judgment upon an affidavit verifying his cause of action. The defendant is then called upon to show if he has a defense, and if he cannot do this, or show that the plaintiff is not entitled to judgment on the indorsement of his writ, judgment is ordered to be entered and execution may be issued forthwith. Where the plaintiff resides out of British Columbia and is not the holder of any real property within British Columbia, he may be required by the defendant to deposit security in court for the defendant's costs. This is usually fixed at one hundred and fifty dollars in the first instance.

In the county court the plaintiff gives particulars of his claim, called a plaint, to the registrar of the court, and thereupon a summons is issued to the defendant calling upon him to appear thereto within eight days after service. The practice of the county court is largely based on that of the supreme court. Where the claim is for debt or liquidated demand and the defendant does not appear, the plaintiff may sign final judgment for the amount of his claim. Where the plaintiff's claim is not for debt or liquidated demand and the defendant does not appear, then the plaintiff may sign interlocutory judgment, when the matter is brought forthwith before a judge, who shall give directions in respect thereto, and order such proceedings to be taken and judgments entered as may be just. Where the defendant appears and the plaintiff's claim is for debt or liquidated demand, the plaintiff may have speedy judgment on verifying his cause of action, unless the defendant shows to the court he has some defense. In the small debts court, which like the county court has limited jurisdiction as to amount, nature of action, and venue, the plaintiff issues his summons, to which is attached particulars of his claim, which must not exceed the sum of one hundred dollars, calling upon the defendant to appear upon the return day. This court has jurisdiction only up to one hundred dollars on action for debt on contract and no jurisdiction in tort. The practice of proving the claim is much the same as in the county court, except that the plaintiff or some one who can swear positively to the cause of action must appear on the return day and prove the debt. Judgment is then given and execution may be issued forthwith.

The exchequer court of Canada has jurisdiction in all admiralty matters. Actions therein are commenced by a writ of summons and may be issued from out either of the registries of British Columbia, at the cities of Vancouver or Victoria. See Courts, Jurisdiction of.

An absolute assignment in writing under the hand of the assignor, not purporting to be by way of charge, of any debt or other legal chose in action of which express notice in writing shall be given the debtor, trustee, or other person from whom the assignor is entitled to receive or claim such debt or chose in action, is effective in law and passes legal right to such debt or chose in action from the date of such notice, and all remedies may be pursued by the assignee without the concurrence of the assignor. Bonds and debentures of corporations made payable to bearer may be transferred by delivery, and such transfer vests the property in the holder thereof, and enables him to maintain action thereon in his own name.

In case of an assignment of a debt arising out of contract and not assignable by delivery, the defendant may avail himself of any defense or set-off arising before notice of the assignment which might have been made to a suit brought by the assignor. This does not apply to bills of exchange or promissory notes before maturity. All the parties to a bill or note may be included in one action.

Affidavits. — Within the Province affidavits may be made before a commissioner appointed by the supreme court to take affidavits, county court judges, and registrars of the several county courts respectively, or before a stipendiary magistrate, or a justice of the peace. In certain cases an affirmation may be made in lieu of an oath. Statutory declarations may be made attesting the execution or any writing, etc. (The Canada Evidence Act, 1893.) Affidavits made out of the Province for use in any court in the Province may be made before a commissioner authorized to administer oaths in the supreme court of judicature in England; a judge of any of the superior courts in England, Ireland, or Scotland; a judge of any of the county courts in England or Ireland within his county; a sheriff or sheriff's substitute of any county of Scotland within his county; a notary public certified under his hand and official seal; the mayor or chief magistrate of any city, borough, or town corporate in Great Britain or Ireland, or in any colony of his Majesty without Canada, or in any foreign country, and certified under the common seal of such city, borough, or town corporate; a judge of any court of record or of supreme jurisdiction in any colony without Canada, belonging to the crown of Great Britain, or any dependency thereof, or in any foreign country; or, if made in the British possessions in India, before any magistrate or collector certified to have been such under the hand of the governor of such possession; or if made in Canada, before any judge, prothonotary, notary public, or commissioner for taking affidavits or authorized to administer oaths in, or the clerk of, a court of record in the Dominion of Canada or in any Province thereof, or before any stipendiary magistrate in the territories of Canada; or before any consul, vice-consul, or consular agent of his Majesty exercising his functions in any foreign place. Every judge, registrar, or notary public, and every commissioner heretofore or hereafter appointed for taking affidavits and affirmations within the Province, and every person heretofore or hereafter authorized to take affidavits, whether within or without the Province, to be used in any court of the Province, shall have power to take such affidavits and affirmations. This does not apply to the Land Registry Act.

Aliens. — Aliens have all the advantages of native-born citizens as regards holding and disposing of real and personal property with the exception of ships or any interest therein. At present there is war legislation affecting alien enemies.

Appeals. — An appeal from a magistrate who deals with summary criminal and quasi criminal matters lies to the county court. The case is then reheard. If a conviction is complained of as bad in law, it may be brought before the supreme court as a case stated, and within nine days application must be made to the magistrate to state and sign a case.

An appeal lies to the court of appeal of British Columbia (which consists of the chief justice of the court of appeal and four other judges) from all orders and judgments of the supreme court, and from all judgments of the county court where the amount involved exceeds one hundred dollars. In county court actions involving a lesser sum there is an appeal to the court of appeal on questions of law only. Appeals from the small debts court lie to the county court and are in the nature of rehearings. The court of appeal sits four times a year, at Victoria on the first Tuesday in January after the third of said month and the first Tuesday in June, and at Vancouver on the first Tuesday in April and the first Tuesday in November. The court of appeal is the court of last resort in the Province.

From the court of appeal an appeal lies to the supreme court of Canada, which sits at Ottawa, and from that court in certain cases to the privy council in England, which is the court of last resort. An appeal also lies to the privy council in England direct from the court of appeal by leave of the court of appeal.

A judge of the supreme court has power to stay execution pending appeals.

Arbitration. — Parties may agree to arbitrate matters in dispute, the mode to be agreed upon. Statute provides for arbitration by a single arbitrator unless otherwise provided for. Certain statutes provide for arbitration of certain questions by two arbitrators, who shall choose a third. When one party refuses to appoint within seven days after notice, a supreme court judge on motion will do so, and if one or both parties are dissatisfied with award, an appeal will lie to a judge by way of motion within two months of publishing of award. An award can be enforced by order of court in same way as a judgment or order of court.

Arrest. — An order for arrest for debt is granted only when a plaintiff having a cause of action against some person satisfies a judge, generally by affidavit, that he has such a cause of action to an amount of one hundred dollars or upwards, and that there is good and probable cause for believing that the defendant is about to quit the Province for the purpose of defrauding his creditors generally, or the plaintiff in particular, unless he be forthwith apprehended. And such an order is granted to the plaintiff who has recovered judgment to an amount of one hundred dollars or upwards, and shows as above.

Assignments. — An assignment for the benefit of creditors must be executed by the trustee or trustees within seven days after it shall have been executed by the debtor, and it shall have no force or effect unless it or a counterpart thereof be registered in any county court registry where bills of sale can be registered, within twenty-one days from the date thereof, together with an affidavit of a witness thereto of the due execution of such assignment. It must also be registered in the land registry office in the district where the lands are situate if the assignment passes any real estate to the assignee. It is the duty of a trustee to cause notice of the deed to be published in the "British Columbia Gazette" and a paper published in or near the town within which the debtor resides issued first after ten days from the date of the assignment. The trustee is liable to a penalty of ten dollars for each and every day which shall pass after the issue of the number of the Gazette or newspaper in which the notice should have appeared. Three months' wages are preferred. Claims against the estate should be stated, with items and dates, and verified by affidavit or declaration, which should also state whether any security is held by creditor, and if so what, and the value thereof. No special form is necessary, but deponent should have personal knowledge and state that the full amount is owing. All claims should be sent to the trustee within a reasonable time, which in case of dispute will be settled by the court. Judgment debts have no priority.

Assignment of Book Accounts. — Every assignment of book accounts executed after the first day of July, 1916, shall be in writing and shall be duly attested and registered within the time hereinafter prescribed, otherwise such assignment shall — (a) as against all assignees, receivers, or trustees of the estate and effects of the person whose book accounts, or any of them, are comprised in such assignment; and (b) as against all sheriffs and sheriffs' officers and other persons seizing any book accounts comprised in such assignment, or any books, documents, or papers relating to the same, in the execution of any process of execution lawfully sued out of any court of competent jurisdiction in that behalf authorizing the seizure of the book accounts of the person by whom or of whose book accounts such assignment shall have been made or given; and (c) as against every person by whom or on whose behalf such process shall have been issued; and (d) as against subsequent bona-fide purchasers or mortgagees for valuable consideration — be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever so far as regards the property in or right to the possession of any book accounts comprised in such assignment of book accounts which at or after the time of the execution by the debtor of such assignment for the benefit of his creditors, or of the execution of such process of execution as aforesaid, or of such purchase or mortgage, as the case may be, and after the expiration of the time hereinafter prescribed, shall be in the possession, or apparent possession, of the person making and giving such assignment of book accounts.

Every assignment of book accounts or a true copy thereof shall, within the period of five days in cases where the business to which the said book accounts are related is within the corporate limits of a city or town in which is situate an office of the county court prescribed for the registration of assignments of book accounts, and in all other cases within a period of twenty-one days after the making thereof next ensuing, be registered by the filing of such assignment of book accounts or a copy thereof, as the case may be, together with such affidavits as are herein required, in the county court registry of the county or place within which the assignor carries on the business to which the said book accounts are related, as hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, in the several county court registries for the several respective districts as are in section 8 of the Bills of Sale Act provided for the registration of bills of sale.

If the business to which an assignment is related is carried on by having an established branch within the limits of more than one of such registration districts, it shall be necessary to register such assignment in only one such registry, but the person registering shall furnish copies of assignment and affidavit as may be necessary to the registrar and such registrar will forward certified copy to each other registry required.

Where a subsequent assignment of book accounts is executed after the execution of a prior unregistered assignment, and comprises all or any part of the book accounts comprised in such prior assignment, then, if such subsequent assignment is given as a security for the same debt as is secured by the prior assignment, or for any part of such debt, it shall to the extent to which it is a security for the same debt or part thereof, and so far as respects the book accounts, or part thereof, comprised in the prior assignment, be absolutely void, unless the court having cognisance of the case is satisfied by evidence on oath that the subsequent assignment was not given for the purpose of evading this act, but was bona-fide given for the purpose of correcting some material error in the prior assignment or of effecting registration in any case where such prior assignment was, through accident, inadvertence, or some other sufficient cause, not registered under the provisions of this act.

Every assignment registered in accordance with the act and subject to the provisions thereof shall have and take precedence and priority over any unregistered assignment of the same book accounts.

A transfer or assignment of a registered assignment need not be registered.

In case of two assignments comprising in whole or part the same book accounts they have priority in the order of the date of registration.

[Schedule. Assignment of Book Accounts Act. Form A.]

I, _____, of _____, make oath and say as follows:

1. That the paper writing hereunto annexed, and marked "A," is a true copy of an assignment of book accounts, and of every (or where the original is filed, is the assignment of book accounts and every) schedule or inventory thereto annexed, or therein referred to, and of every attestation of the execution thereof, as made and given and executed by _____.

2. That the assignment of book accounts was made and given by the said _____ on the day of _____, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and _____.

3. That I was present and did see the said _____ in the said assignment of book accounts mentioned, and whose name is signed thereto, sign and execute the same on the said day of _____, in the year aforesaid.

4. Attachment. — Any person who has a debt due to him exceeding one hundred dollars by an absconding debtor may, upon affidavit made by himself, his servant, or agent, verifying the debt and stating the cause of action, and that he believes, giving the facts on which his belief is grounded, that the debtor has left the Province and gone to some other place, naming the latter, or if whereabouts are unknown, stating so, with intention of defrauding the plaintiff of his just dues or to avoid arrest or service of process, and was at the time of his departure possessed of real or personal property, etc., in this Province, which affidavit must be supported by the affidavits of two credible persons acquainted with the debtor, stating they believe, giving the facts on which their belief is grounded, that the debtor has left the Province of British Columbia with intention to defraud the plaintiff or avoid arrest, etc., obtain from a judge of the supreme court an order for a writ of attachment to issue against the property of the debtor in the Province. The writ is handed to the sheriff, who immediately seizes and holds possession of the property subject to the order of the court. The writ of attachment contains a summons to the defendant, the manner of service being directed by the judge. The plaintiff proceeds to prove his claim, and if no appearance or special bail is put in by the debtor, the property is directed to be sold. There is no priority where there is more than one writ except for costs of first writ. Moneys of a debtor in the hands of a third party may be attached by an order of court obtained on the ex parte application of a judgment creditor. The plaintiff at the time he issues a writ of summons, or at any time thereafter, may upon filing an affidavit attach moneys in the hands of a third party due to the defendant.

Attachment of Debts. — On the ex parte application of the plaintiff or a judgment creditor, and upon being satisfied by the affidavit of some person aware of the facts stating, if the claim be upon a judgment, the amount of such judgment unsatisfied, and otherwise the nature and amount of the plaintiff's claim, and stating that such claim is justly due and owing, and in either case that some third person is indebted to the defendant or judgment debtor, and is within the jurisdiction of the court, any judge of the supreme court or district registrar or deputy district registrar of such court, or any judge of a county court or registrar or deputy registrar of such court in his territorial jurisdiction, may order that all debts, obligations, or liabilities due or accruing due from such third person to the defendant or judgment debtor be attached up to such amount as will satisfy the plaintiff's or creditor's claim, together with a reasonable amount of costs. The affidavit may be sworn before suit is commenced under the following caption: "In the matter of an intended action between plff., and _____ deft." When the plaintiff has obtained judgment, if he is not already a judgment creditor, he may make this order absolute on application to a judge in court. If the garnishee disputes liability, the trial of an issue may be directed, pending result of which no order can be made by the court for payment into court or otherwise of the amount in dispute. If it is found on the trial of such issues that no moneys are payable by the garnishee to such defendant or judgment debtor, the garnishee order is discharged. In the small debts court a garnishee summons may be issued by the magistrate on application, and on filing an affidavit setting forth the amount due and the indebtedness of the garnishee to the judgment debtor or defendant. In the supreme court and county court the defendant, if a mechanic, workman, laborer, servant, or employee, is entitled to an exemption of forty dollars in respect of his wages or salary, and in the small debts court in the sum of thirty dollars, if a married man, and twenty dollars if single, provided that no exemption shall be allowed when the debt has been contracted for board and lodging and in the opinion of the judge the exemption is not necessary for the support of the debtor's family.

Banks and Banking. — The same law which applied to other provinces applies here.

Chattel Mortgages and Bills of Sale. — Every bill of sale of personal chattels of which immediate delivery and change of possession is not given shall be void as against all assignees of the estate and effects of the person whose goods, or any of them, are comprised in such bill of sale, under the laws relating to bankruptcy or insolvency, or under any assignment for the benefit of the creditors of such person, and as against all sheriff's officers and other persons seizing any property or effects comprised in such bill of sale in the execution of any process of any court of law or equity authorizing the seizure of the goods, by whom or of whose goods such bill of sale shall have been made, and as against every person on whose behalf such process shall have issued, and as against subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith for valuable consideration, whenever such bill of sale is not duly filed, in the county court registry of the district in which the property intended to be affected is situate, within five days in cases where the goods referred to in the bill of sale are within the corporate limits of a city or town in which is situate an office of the county court wherein such bill of sale may be registered, and in all other cases within twenty-one days after execution. An affidavit must be annexed to every bill of sale showing the time when it was made or given, and a description of the residence and occupation of the person making or giving the same, and of every attesting witness, and also an affidavit of the bargainee or his agent that the sale is bona fide and for valuable consideration; or of the mortgagee or his agent that the mortgagor is justly and truly indebted to the mortgagee in the sum mentioned in the mortgage as per attached statement.

There shall be lodged with every application to register a bill of sale created by a corporation after the thirty-first day of May, 1916, which is also required to be registered in the office of the registrar of joint-stock companies, pursuant to the "Companies Act" or any other act of the Province (subject to any provisions to the contrary contained in any such act), particulars of such bill of sale, according to the form marked "F" in the schedule to this act, together with a fee of one dollar; and the registrar in whose office registration shall be effected shall certify such particulars, and forthwith forward the same with the said fee, by registered letter, to the said registrar of joint-stock companies, who shall register the bill of sale by entering in the register of mortgages and filing the said particulars. (See Conditional Sales.)

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons — Should be sent in to the executor or administrator and verified in same manner as claims against an assignor for benefit of creditors. All claims should be sent in within one year after granting of probate or administration. No priority of specialty debts over simple contract debts save as to any security they may hold. An executor or administrator can sue or be sued in the court.

Claims. — See Proof of Claims.

Conditional Sales. — Every receipt, note, hire receipt, or order for chattels given by any bailee of chattels where the condition of the bailment is such that the possession of the chattel should pass without any ownership therein being acquired by the bailee until the payment of the purchase or consideration money, or some stipulated part thereof, shall be void as against any subsequent purchasers or mortgagees unless a true copy of such receipt, note, hire receipt, or order shall be filed with the proper officer not later than thirty days after the giving of such receipt, note, hire receipt, or order by the bailee or conditional purchaser. No such bailment shall be valid against such subsequent purchaser or mortgagee as aforesaid unless it is evidenced in writing, signed by the bailee or his agent, nor unless in the instrument evidencing the bailment or conditional sale, the chattels are so described that they may be clearly identified. Such instrument shall be filed with the proper officer in the county within which the chattels are delivered or are by the terms of the instrument required to be delivered. The office for filing shall be the office of the registrar of the county court in or nearest to the place where delivery of the chattels is made or required to be made. Proper officer means registrar of county court. A statement of the amount due upon any such sale must be given within five days of request. A bailee or his successor may redeem within twenty days after goods taken possession of by a bailor, etc., on payment of the full amount in arrear, together with interest and costs. Five days' notice of sale of goods taken possession of by bailor, etc., must be given to bailee or his successor. A copy of the receipt, note, hire receipt, order, or other instrument by which a lien on the chattel is retained, or which provides for a conditional sale, must be left with the bailee or conditional vendor at the time of the execution of the instrument, or within twenty-one days thereafter. See Chattel Mortgages.

Corporations. — Corporations are constituted by act of Parliament, by special charter, or under the general law relating to the incorporation of joint-stock companies. Under the general law corporations organized for any lawful purpose are required to file with the registrar of joint-stock companies a memorandum of association signed by at least five members. A company incorporated under the local act may be dissolved on presentation of a petition to a judge setting forth that it is the desire of two thirds of all the shareholders to dissolve, and that all claims against it have been discharged. Shareholders of a company are liable to a creditor only to the extent of their unpaid stock. An insolvent company may be liquidated by order of a judge of the supreme court upon the petition of a creditor under the Dominion Winding-up Act, or voluntarily under the Companies Act. Corporations may acquire and hold real estate and may alienate the same as a private individual. Foreign corporations may enjoy the same privileges and carry on any lawful business in the Province where they are licensed and registered as extra-provincial companies, but cannot carry on business unless licensed or registered.

Companies. — An extra-provincial or a foreign corporation which is not registered or licensed here cannot acquire or hold land or any interest therein in the Province and cannot maintain any action, suit, or other proceeding in any court in this Province in respect of any contract made in whole or in part within the Province in the course of or in connection with its business, but on obtaining license or registration can do so even though the debt or account sued on was incurred whilst the company was unregistered or unlicensed.

Courts, Jurisdiction of. — The supreme court of British Columbia has complete cognizance of all pleas whatsoever, and has jurisdiction in all civil cases arising within the Province of British Columbia, and is a superior court of record. Where the rules of law and equity clash, the equity rule prevails.

There is a county court in each county, which is a court of record and has jurisdiction:

1. In all personal actions where the debt or damage does not exceed one thousand dollars.
2. In any action where debt or demand claimed consists of a balance not exceeding one thousand dollars after an admitted set-off.
3. In actions of ejectment where the value of the premises does not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars. It gives relief upon equitable grounds as well as legal.
4. In replevin action where value of goods does not exceed one thousand dollars.
5. In probate where the value of the intestate's personal estate does not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars.
6. In equitable matters when the subject-matter does not exceed in amount or value the sum of twenty-five hundred dollars. The county court has not cognizance of any action for any malicious prosecution or any libel or slander, for criminal conversation or seduction or breach of promise of marriage, or against a justice of the peace for anything done by him in the execution of his office. The county court (mining jurisdiction) has also complete jurisdiction concurrent with the jurisdiction of the supreme court, in the following matters relative to mines, viz.: 1. In all personal actions where the debt or damages claimed arise directly out of the business of mining (other than coal mines), or from the exercise of or interference with any right, power, or privilege given or claimed to be given by the "Mineral Act," or any other act relating to mining (other than coal mining).
2. In all actions between employers and employees, where the employment is directly connected with the business of mining (other than coal mining).
3. In all actions for supplies to persons engaged in mining, where such supplies were bought, contracted for, or supplied, or were alleged to have been bought, contracted for, or supplied, for mining purposes, or for consumption by persons engaged in mining or prospecting.
4. In all actions of trespass on or in respect of mineral claims or other mining property, or upon or in respect of lands entered or trespassed on, or claimed to have been entered or trespassed on, in searching for, mining, or working minerals (other than coal), or for any other purpose directly connected with the business of mining (other than coal mining), or in the exercise of any power or privilege given or claimed to be given by the statutes relating to mining (other than coal mining).
5. In all actions of ejectments from mineral claims or other mining property, or from lands entered or claimed to have been entered in searching for, mining, or working minerals (other than coal), or for any purpose directly connected with the business of mining, or entered or claimed to have been entered under some power, right, or authority given or obtained under the provisions of any statute relating to mining (other than coal mining).
6. In all suits for foreclosure or redemption, or for enforcing any charge or lien, on mineral claims, mines, or other mining property.
7. In all suits for specific performance of or for reforming or delivering up or canceling any agreement for sale, purchase, or lease of any mineral claim, mine, or other mining property.
8. In all suits for the dissolution or winding up of any mining partnership, whether registered or not under the provisions of any statute relating to mining (other than coal mining).
9. In all suits relative to water rights claimed under the provisions of the "Mineral Act, 1896."
10. In all proceedings for orders in the nature of injunctions, where the same are requisite for the granting of relief in any matter in which jurisdiction is given to the county court in respect of the matters hereinbefore mentioned.
11. Provided, that at any time during the progress of any such action or proceeding relating to or concerning any of the classes of subjects aforesaid a judge of the supreme court may transfer such suit, action, or proceeding to the supreme court, if he is satisfied that it is expedient to make such transfer, and all proceedings thereafter are carried on according to the practice and procedure of the supreme court, except that the judge in ordering the transfer may for the purpose of facilitating the trial order that the suit, action, or matter be tried and determined without pleadings. In the county court (mining jurisdiction) issues of fact may be tried by a jury, or the court may decide the question upon the grounds in dispute. It has exclusive jurisdiction in mechanic's lien actions.

The county judges' criminal court is a court of record presided over by the county court judge, or judge of the supreme court acting as a county court judge in any district, for the trial at any time without a jury of any person committed to gaol upon a charge of being guilty of any offense for which such person may be tried at a court of oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery (except such offenses as the Parliament has declared or may hereafter declare shall not be tried by a court of general or quarter sessions), and for which the person so committed consents to be tried by such judge and without a jury.

There are also small debt courts having jurisdiction in contract only up to one hundred dollars. These courts are presided over by a stipendiary magistrate or justice of the peace.

These are, properly speaking, the only British Columbia courts, though mention has been made under Actions of the exchequer court of Canada, of which British Columbia is an admiralty district having jurisdiction in all matters (including cases of contract and tort and proceedings in rem and in personam) arising out of or connected with navigation, shipping, trade, or commerce which may be had or enforced in any colonial court of admiralty under "The Colonial Court of Admiralty Act, 1890." An appeal lies to the exchequer court of Canada from any final judgment, decree, or order of the local judge of the exchequer court of Canada, British Columbia Admiralty District.

Creditors' Relief. — Under the Creditors' Relief Act, 1902, creditors, if judgment creditors, upon issuing execution and proving the amount remaining due under the judgment, and otherwise upon proof of indebtedness by person whose goods have been seized under a writ of execution, may share pro rata with other creditors who have so proved their claims the moneys realized by the sheriff under execution.

Deeds. — Deeds must be under seal, and should be attested by one witness. They must show the detailed address of the parties and their occupation. Acknowledgments and proofs of the execution of instruments entitled to be registered or recorded may be made by: 1. The party executing in person such instrument. 2. The attorney in fact, when such instrument is executed by an attorney in fact. 3. The secretary or other officer of any corporation authorized to affix the seal of the corporation to any instrument when such instrument is executed by such officer. 4. A subscribing witness to such instrument except in cases of deeds executed by a married woman or an attorney in fact. The acknowledgment may be made, within the Province, to a stipendiary magistrate or justice of the peace, or to any judge or registrar of a court having a seal, to any notary public practicing within the Province, or to a commissioner for taking affidavits for use in British Columbia. Without the Province but within British dominions, to any judge of a court, or clerk or registrar of any court having a seal, or to any notary public, or to any magistrate of any town or district within the said Dominion, having a seal of office, or to any person commissioned in that behalf by the lieutenant-governor; without British dominions, to any British ambassador, chargé d'affaires, minister, consul, or consular agent appointed to reside in the country where such acknowledgment of proof is made, or to any judge of any court of record having a seal, or to any notary public practicing in such country, duly certified to be a notary public by some British ambassador, chargé d'affaires, minister, consul, or consular agent, or governor of the State, Province, or Territory, or clerk of a court of record having a seal.

Depositions and Commissions. — Directions for executing commissions and taking depositions are fully set out in the commission, and the form of oath to be taken by the commissioner, witness, clerk, and interpreter are indorsed on the commission.

Descent of Property. — Real estate descends, first, to lineal descendants and those claiming by or under them per stirpes; second, to the father; third, to the mother; fourth, to the collateral relatives. If a deceased dies intestate leaving him or her surviving a husband or wife, such husband or wife takes one half of the real estate absolutely when the intestate has left no lawful descendants, and in case the intestate has left lawful descendants, then one third for life. Relatives of the half blood share equally with those of the whole blood. The personal estate is liable before the real estate for the payment of debts and testamentary and funeral expenses, and the surplusage after payment of such debts and expenses is divided in the following manner: one third to the widow, the remainder among the descendants per stirpes equally, unless portions have been advanced during the lifetime of the deceased. If no descendants, then to the widow and next of kin in equal shares. If no widow, then the whole equally to the descendants and those claiming under them per stirpes. If neither widow nor descendants, then equally among the next of kin in the same degree: provided, however, that nothing hereinbefore contained shall be held to impair the right of a widow of an intestate to have dower out of her deceased husband's lands or the right of a husband to a life interest out of the deceased wife's lands. The husband can defeat his wife's dower by conveyance or by will. See Inheritance Taxes, and Probate Law.

Divorce. — An ordinance was passed in 1867 by the legislature of the Province by which it was enacted that the civil laws of England, as the same existed on the 19th of November, 1858, and so far as the same from local circumstances were not inapplicable, should be in force in the Province save so far as modified by legislation. Under this ordinance, jurisdiction to exercise all the relief and powers given, under the English Divorce Act, 20 and 21 Vict. c. 85, has been assumed and is still exercised by the supreme court of British Columbia.

Dower. — The widow is entitled to dower out of the lands which her husband may die seized of, which have not been disposed of by will. See Married Women.

Estates, Intestate. — Where the personal estate does not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars, the county court has jurisdiction as to the administration. The supreme court has jurisdiction, no matter what the personal estate amounts to. The administrator (other than the official administrator) must furnish security to the satisfaction of the registrar of the court, usually in a sum of double the amount of the personalty. The primary fund out of which the debts should be paid is the personal estate, and should the same be insufficient the court will order the real estate to be sold, leased, or incumbered, also for the benefit of infants. Application is usually made by way of petition, and must be by heir, administrator, creditor, or some one interested.

Evidence. — See Statutes of Canada, 1906, c. 31. The evidence of a child of tender years, if in the opinion of the presiding judge the child possesses sufficient intelligence to justify the reception of the evidence, even though not given under oath, may when corroborated by other material evidence be accepted. No witness is excused from answering any question on the ground that the answer may tend to incriminate him, or may tend to establish liability to a civil proceeding, it being provided, however, that the answer to such question shall not be used in evidence in any criminal proceeding against him other than prosecution for perjury in giving such evidence. Husbands and wives are competent as witnesses in civil proceedings, though communication between them during marriage need not be disclosed. In actions by or against lunatics, or by or against representatives of a deceased person, the evidence of the opposite party must be corroborated by some other material evidence.

Executions. — Executions against lands have been abolished, though writs of delivery, attachment, and sequestration are still enforced. Priority as between execution creditors has also been abolished, and the sheriff distributes pro rata the amount he realises upon execution, after payment in full of costs of first execution creditor. Writ of execution requires renewal yearly.

Exemptions. — Personal property to be selected by the debtor to the value of five hundred dollars is exempt from execution. This does not apply to the stock in trade of a debtor, or to goods and chattels seized in satisfaction of a debt contracted for such identical goods and chattels. Under the Homesteads Act lands to the value of twenty-five hundred dollars may be registered as a homestead, and are then exempt from seizure or sale. At a distress for rent lodgers' goods are exempt, except to amount owing by such lodger to the tenant, and certain goods sold under hire receipt or conditions of sale to a tenant.

Garnishment. — See Attachment of Debts.

Homestead. — An owner of real estate may cause same to be registered in the land registry office as a homestead, and after such registration the same shall, if it does not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars in value, be free from forced seizure or sale by any process at law or in equity for or on account of any debt or liability incurred after the registration. If, however, it exceeds twenty-five hundred dollars in value, then only the excess shall be liable to seizure or sale. Goods and chattels of a debtor to the extent of five hundred dollars are exempt from execution. No goods and chattels, however, are exempt from seizure in satisfaction of a debt which was contracted for or in respect of such identical goods or chattels.

Infants. — A person under age of twenty-one years can prosecute suit in county court for sum not greater than five hundred dollars, which may be due to him for wages.

Inheritance Taxes. — The Succession Duty Act (cap. 217, R. S. B. C. 1911) does not apply to any estate when the value of the property does not exceed five thousand dollars; nor does it apply to estates passing to the father, mother, husband, wife, child, daughter-in-law, or son-in-law of the deceased when the property does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars; where the will or intestacy is to or for the use of father, mother, husband, wife, child, grandchild, daughter-in-law, or son-in-law, and exceeds twenty-five thousand dollars, then as to such excess it pays succession duty in addition to probate duty on a sliding scale at the following rates: Where said value is above twenty-five thousand dollars and does not exceed in value one hundred thousand dollars, at the rate of one per cent. When it so passes and value is between one hundred thousand dollars and two hundred thousand dollars, at the rate of two and one half per cent. Where it exceeds two hundred thousand dollars and so passes, at the rate of five per cent. Where the aggregate value of the property of the deceased exceeds five thousand dollars, and passes in whole or in part to the use of the grandfather, grandmother, or other lineal ancestor of the deceased except father and mother, or to any brother or sister of the deceased, or to any descendant of any such brother or sister, or to a brother or sister of father or mother of deceased, or to any descendant of such last-mentioned brother or sister, the same or so much as so passes in excess of five thousand dollars pays duty at the rate of five per cent. If the estate exceeds five thousand dollars and passes to any other person or persons than those above named, then the succession duty is ten per cent. upon such excess. The act applies to all property situate in the Province and any interest therein or income therefrom, whether the deceased person be domiciled in the Province or elsewhere. In cases where reciprocity in respect thereof exists, no duty is payable where the duty has been paid elsewhere, if such duty paid be equal to the duty payable in this Province; where the duty paid elsewhere is less, the difference up to the amount payable in this Province only is charged. The Minister of Finance for British Columbia should be addressed relative to assessments. (See Descent of Property, and Probate Law.)

Interest. — Five per cent. is the legal rate of interest, although by agreement between parties any rate may be paid. (See Rev. Stat. Can. c. 127, the Interest Act and amending acts, and c. 120, the Bank Act and amending acts.)

Judgments. — Judgment from the time application is made for registration in the Land Registry Office operates as a charge on and binds the interest of the debtor in any lands in the registry district in which the application for registration is made. Judgment must be for one hundred dollars or more. Judgments must be re-registered every two years. Since July 1, 1902, all judgments registered rank pari passu. When seeking to enforce judgment against lands a judgment creditor makes application to the supreme court or a judge thereof calling upon the debtor or any persons having a legal interest in the lands in question to show cause why the lands against which judgment has been registered, or the interest of the debtor therein, or a competent part thereof, shall not be sold to realize the amount due under the judgment, and an order may be made for the sale of said lands by the registrar of the court.

Land Laws of British Columbia. — The law as to acquiring crown lands is found in the Revised Statutes of British Columbia, 1911, c. 129. Lands may be acquired from the Crown in three different ways: 1st, by preëmption; 2d, by purchase; 3d, by lease. The following parties, being British subjects, may acquire one hundred and sixty acres of unoccupied and unreserved crown lands for agricultural purposes only, namely, the head of a family, a widow, a woman deserted by her husband, a woman whose husband has not contributed to her support for two years, or a spinster over eighteen years of age who is self-supporting, or a bachelor over the age of eighteen years. An alien is eligible by making a declaration of intention to become a British subject.

To preëempt the applicant must place at one corner of the land a legal post and place on said post notice of intention to apply. He must then apply to the nearest government agent for a preëmption record and within sixty days from receipt of record must enter into occupation. The occupation by himself or family must be continuous, subject to right of absence for two months in any year, which may on cause being shown be extended to six months. Within five years the preëemptor must survey his land and pay the government price of one dollar per acre, and if he has made improvements to the extent of two dollars and fifty cents per acre may then obtain a crown grant. This grant can be obtained within two years from date of occupation. A crown grant will not be executed in favor of an alien until he has become a British subject.

A person desiring to purchase unsurveyed, unoccupied, and unreserved crown lands must place a legal post at one corner of the land and on said post must give a notice of his intention to apply. A copy of this notice must be filed in the nearest government office and must also appear in the Gazette and a local paper within thirty days from the date of location, if not more than ten miles from the government office, an additional day being allowed for every additional ten miles. Within three months from publication in the Gazette application must be made to the government agent and fifty cents per acre paid. If the application is accepted the applicant has six months within which to survey his land and pay the balance of purchase-price, which will be ten dollars per acre for first class land and five dollars for second class, to be increased in the discretion of the minister. Purchasers are limited to one tract not exceeding six hundred and forty acres.

Crown lands may be leased for the purpose of cutting hay for a term of ten years or for any other purpose for a term not exceeding twenty-one years, applicants being limited to one lot. Applicants for a lease locate in the same manner as under purchase and make application to the minister of lands within thirty days from the date of location. These leases are granted on such terms as the lieutenant-governor in council may determine.

Timber on crown lands is now sold only by public competition according to the terms of the Forest Act, being chapter 17 of the Statutes of British Columbia, 1912.

Libel. — When actual damages have been sustained by reason of the publication of a libel in a newspaper, and the defendant proves that such publication was in good faith and for the public benefit, actual damages only may be recovered when the imputation is not a criminal charge. In mitigation of damages evidence may be given that a written apology was offered to the plaintiff before the institution of the action.

Liens. — See Mechanics' Liens.

Limitations. — All actions for the recovery of rent upon an indenture of demise, and all actions of covenant or debt upon any bond or other specialty, and all actions of debt upon any recognisance, shall be commenced within twenty years after the cause of action arose, unless in the mean time there has been a payment on account or some acknowledgment in writing. All actions of detinue, trover, and replevin for taking away goods or chattels, all actions for accounts and actions for debt without specialty, must be commenced within six years after the cause of action arose, unless in the mean time there has been a payment on account or some acknowledgment in writing. In case of persons laboring under disability of infancy, coverture, or lunacy, time runs from the time of the removal of the disability. A foreign statute of limitation is a good defense to a suit commenced in this Province in respect of a cause of action which arose in such foreign country. No claims of a cestui que trust against his trustees for any property held on an express trust or in respect of any breach of such trust shall be held to be barred by any statute of limitations.

Lodgers. — Lodgers' goods are exempt from distress for rent, except in the extent to which the lodger is indebted to his immediate landlord for board and lodging. An immediate landlord has the right to hold possession of a lodger's goods until any unpaid debt for board or lodging has been satisfied.

Married Women. — A married woman is capable of acquiring, holding, and disposing, by will or otherwise, of any real or personal property as her separate property in the same manner as if she were a feme sole, without the intervention of any trustee. She may bind her separate estate by contract, and may sue or be sued alone in respect of her separate estate, but can only bind herself by contract to the extent of her separate estate. Every woman married after 7th April, 1887, is entitled to hold as her separate property, all property which belonged to her at the time of her marriage or which is acquired afterwards, including any wages, earnings, money, and property gained or acquired by her in any employment, trade, or occupation in which she is engaged, or which she carries on separately from her husband, or by the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill. Every woman married prior to 7th April, 1887, is entitled to hold as her separate property any property her title to which accrued after 7th April, 1887, including wages, etc. De-

by other material evidence be accepted. No witness is excused from answering any question on the ground that the answer may tend to incriminate him, or may tend to establish liability to a civil proceeding. It being provided, however, that the answer to such question shall not be used in evidence in any criminal proceeding against him other than prosecution for perjury in giving such evidence. Husbands and wives are competent as witnesses in civil proceedings, though communication between them during marriage need not be disclosed. In actions by or against lunatics, or by or against representatives of a deceased person, the evidence of the opposite party must be corroborated by some other material evidence.

Executions. — Executions against lands have been abolished, though writs of delivery, attachment, and sequestration are still enforced. Priority as between execution creditors has also been abolished, and the sheriff distributes pro rata the amount he realizes upon execution, after payment in full of costs of first execution creditor. Writ of execution requires renewal yearly.

Exemptions. — Personal property to be selected by the debtor to the value of five hundred dollars is exempt from execution. This does not apply to the stock in trade of a debtor, or to goods and chattels seized in satisfaction of a debt contracted for such identical goods and chattels. Under the Homesteads Act lands to the value of twenty-five hundred dollars may be registered as a homestead, and are then exempt from seizure or sale. At a distress for rent lodgers' goods are exempt, except to amount owing by such lodger to the tenant, and certain goods sold under hire receipt or conditions of sale to a tenant.

Garnishment. — See Attachment of Debts.

Homestead. — An owner of real estate may cause same to be registered in the land registry office as a homestead, and after such registration the same shall, if it does not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars in value, be free from forced seizure or sale by any process at law or in equity for or on account of any debt or liability incurred after the registration. If, however, it exceeds twenty-five hundred dollars in value, then only the excess shall be liable to seizure or sale. Goods and chattels of a debtor to the extent of five hundred dollars are exempt from execution. No goods and chattels, however, are exempt from seizure in satisfaction of a debt which was contracted for or in respect of such identical goods or chattels.

Infants. — A person under age of twenty-one years can prosecute suit in county court for sum not greater than five hundred dollars, which may be due to him for wages.

Inheritance Taxes. — The Succession Duty Act (cap. 217, R. S. B. C. 1911) does not apply to any estate when the value of the property does not exceed five thousand dollars; nor does it apply to estates passing to the father, mother, husband, wife, child, daughter-in-law, or son-in-law of the deceased when the property does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars; where the will or intestacy is to or for the use of father, mother, husband, wife, child, grandchild, daughter-in-law, or son-in-law, and exceeds twenty-five thousand dollars, then as to such excess it pays succession duty in addition to probate duty on a sliding scale at the following rates: Where said value is above twenty-five thousand dollars and does not exceed in value one hundred thousand dollars, at the rate of one per cent. When it so passes and value is between one hundred thousand dollars and two hundred thousand dollars, at the rate of two and one half per cent. Where it exceeds two hundred thousand dollars and so passes, at the rate of five per cent. Where the aggregate value of the property of the deceased exceeds five thousand dollars, and passes in whole or in part to the use of the grandfather, grandmother, or other lineal ancestor of the deceased except father and mother, or to any brother or sister of the deceased, or to any descendant of any such brother or sister, or to a brother or sister of father or mother of deceased, or to any descendant of such last-mentioned brother or sister, the same or so much as so passes in excess of five thousand dollars pays duty at the rate of five per cent. If the estate exceeds five thousand dollars and passes to any other person or persons than those above named, then the succession duty is ten per cent. upon such excess. The act applies to all property situate in the Province and any interest therein or income therefrom, whether the deceased person be domiciled in the Province or elsewhere. In cases where reciprocity in respect thereof exists, no duty is payable where the duty has been paid elsewhere, if such duty paid be equal to the duty payable in this Province; where the duty paid elsewhere is less, the difference up to the amount payable in this Province only is charged. The Minister of Finance for British Columbia should be addressed relative to assessments. (See Descent of Property, and Probate Law.)

Interest. — Five per cent. is the legal rate of interest, although by agreement between parties any rate may be paid. (See Rev. Stat. Can. c. 127, the Interest Act and amending acts, and c. 120, the Bank Act and amending acts.)

Judgments. — Judgment from the time application is made for registration in the Land Registry Office operates as a charge on and binds the interest of the debtor in any lands in the registry district in which the application for registration is made. Judgment must be for one hundred dollars or more. Judgments must be re-registered every two years. Since July 1, 1902, all judgments registered rank pari passu. When seeking to enforce judgment against lands a judgment creditor makes application to the supreme court or a judge thereof calling upon the debtor or any persons having a legal interest in the lands in question to show cause why the lands against which judgment has been registered, or the interest of the debtor therein, or a competent part thereof, shall not be sold to realize the amount due under the judgment, and an order may be made for the sale of said lands by the registrar of the court.

Land Laws of British Columbia. — The law as to acquiring crown lands is found in the Revised Statutes of British Columbia, 1911, c. 129. Lands may be acquired from the Crown in three different ways: 1st, by preëmption; 2d, by purchase; 3d, by lease. The following parties, being British subjects, may acquire one hundred and sixty acres of unoccupied and unreserved crown lands for agricultural purposes only, namely, the head of a family, a widow, a woman deserted by her husband, a woman whose husband has not contributed to her support for two years, or a spinster over eighteen years of age who is self-supporting, or a bachelor over the age of eighteen years. An alien is eligible by making a declaration of intention to become a British subject.

To preëempt the applicant must place at one corner of the land a legal post and place on said post notice of intention to apply. He must then apply to the nearest government agent for a preëmption record and within sixty days from receipt of record must enter into occupation. The occupation by himself or family must be continuous, subject to right of absence for two months in any year, which may on cause being shown be extended to six months. Within five years the preëmtor must survey his land and pay the government price of one dollar per acre, and if he has made improvements to the extent of two dollars and fifty cents per acre may then obtain a crown grant. This grant can be obtained within two years from date of occupation. A crown grant will not be executed in favor of an alien until he has become a British subject.

A person desiring to purchase unsurveyed, unoccupied, and unreserved crown lands must place a legal post at one corner of the land and on said post must give a notice of his intention to apply. A copy of this notice must be filed in the nearest government office and must also appear in the Gazette and a local paper within thirty days from the date of location, if not more than ten miles from the government office, an additional day being allowed for every additional ten miles. Within three months from publication in the Gazette application must be made to the government agent and fifty cents per acre paid. If the application is accepted the applicant has six months within which to survey his land and pay the balance of purchase-price, which will be ten dollars per acre for first class land and five dollars for second class, to be increased in the discretion of the minister. Purchasers are limited to one tract not exceeding six hundred and forty acres.

Crown lands may be leased for the purpose of cutting hay for a term of ten years or for any other purpose for a term not exceeding twenty-one years, applicants being limited to one lot. Applicants for a lease locate in the same manner as under purchase and make application to the minister of lands within thirty days from the date of location. These leases are granted on such terms as the lieutenant-governor in council may determine.

Timber on crown lands is now sold only by public competition according to the terms of the Forest Act, being chapter 17 of the Statutes of British Columbia, 1912.

Libel. — When actual damages have been sustained by reason of the publication of a libel in a newspaper, and the defendant proves that such publication was in good faith and for the public benefit, actual damages only may be recovered when the imputation is not a criminal charge. In mitigation of damages evidence may be given that a written apology was offered to the plaintiff before the institution of the action.

Liens. — See Mechanics' Liens.

Limitations. — All actions for the recovery of rent upon an indenture of demise, and all actions of covenant or debt upon any bond or other specialty, and all actions of debt upon any recognizance, shall be commenced within twenty years after the cause of action arose, unless in the mean time there has been a payment on account or some acknowledgment in writing. All actions of detinue, trover, and replevin for taking away goods or chattels, all actions for accounts and actions for debt without specialty, must be commenced within six years after the cause of action arose, unless in the mean time there has been a payment on account or some acknowledgment in writing. In case of persons laboring under disability of infancy, coverture, or lunacy, time runs from the time of the removal of the disability. A foreign statute of limitation is a good defense to a suit commenced in this Province in respect of a cause of action which arose in such foreign country. No claims of a cestui que trust against his trustees for any property held on an express trust or in respect of any breach of such trust shall be held to be barred by any statute of limitations.

Lodgers. — Lodgers' goods are exempt from distress for rent, except in the extent to which the lodger is indebted to his immediate landlord for board and lodging. An immediate landlord has the right to hold possession of a lodger's goods until any unpaid debt for board or lodging has been satisfied.

Married Women. — A married woman is capable of acquiring, holding, and disposing, by will or otherwise, of any real or personal property as her separate property in the same manner as if she were a feme sole, without the intervention of any trustee. She may bind her separate estate by contract, and may sue or be sued alone in respect of her separate estate, but can only bind herself by contract to the extent of her separate estate. Every woman married after 7th April, 1887, is entitled to hold as her separate property, all property which belonged to her at the time of her marriage or which is acquired afterwards, including any wages, earnings, money, and property gained or acquired by her in any employment, trade, or occupation in which she is engaged, or which she carries on separately from her husband, or by the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill. Every woman married prior to 7th April, 1887, is entitled to hold as her separate property any property her title to which accrued after 7th April, 1887, including wages, etc. Deposits in banks and public stocks of funds, etc., may be held by her as if she were a feme sole. A married woman is liable for her ante-nuptial debts and liabilities to the extent of her separate estate. She can effect insurance on her own life or that of her husband. She can convey land without consent or concurrence of her husband. She shall have as her separate property her own earnings and wages and the earnings and wages of her minor children, living with her or in her custody, if she has a decree for alimony against her husband, or is obliged to leave him for cruelty or other justifiable cause, or if her husband is a lunatic or undergoing sentence of imprisonment, or neglects or refuses to support her and his family, or has never been in the Province, or if she is deserted or abandoned by him. A wife is entitled to dower out of the lands of which her husband may die seized if he dies intestate.

Master and Servant. — No contract for service is valid for a period of over nine years. A workman injured by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment in or about the industries of lumbering, mining, quarrying, excavation, well-drilling, fishing, manufacturing, printing, construction, building, engineering, transportation; operation of railways or tramways; operation of telegraph or telephone systems; operation of lumber, wood or coal yards; operation of steam-heating plants, power plants, electric-light and electric-power plants or systems, gasworks, waterworks, or sewers; operation of municipal police forces or municipal fire departments; operation of theatre stages or kinematographs; operation of power laundries, stockyards, packing-houses, refrigerating or cold-storage plants, docks, wharves, warehouses, freight and passenger elevators, grain-elevators, boats, ships, tugs, ferries, or dredges; navigation, stevedoring, teaming, horse-shoeing, scavenging, street-cleaning, painting, decorating, renovating, dyeing and cleaning; and in and about any occupation incidental to or immediately connected with any of the said industries, is entitled to receive compensation during disability from the Government Compensation Fund which is maintained by assessment levies on the different employers. In case of death from such accident the dependents receive compensation on a certain scale set out in the Statute. In all other cases, the common law of England prevails and damages may be claimed where negligence is proven.

Mechanics' Liens. — Every contractor, sub-contractor, laborer, and furnisher of material doing or causing work to be done upon, or placing or furnishing any materials to be used in or for the construction, erection, alteration, or repair of any building, etc., or doing or causing work to be done in connection with, or the placing or furnishing of materials to be used in or for the clearing, excavating, grading, draining, etc., of any land in respect of a railway, mine, sewer, ditch, etc., or other work, or improving any street, etc., at the request of the owner, has a lien for the same upon the building, etc., and the land and premises occupied thereby or enjoyed therewith; such lien, however, is limited to the extent of the owner's interest in such land. Every lien must be filed in the nearest county court registry in the county wherein the land is situate, within thirty-one days, except in the case of a claim for wages owing for work in, at, or about a mine, in which case the lien shall cease after the expiration of sixty days, after the works or improvements shall have been completed or the claimant has ceased to work thereon, or place or furnish materials therefor. Every lien absolutely ceases to exist at the expiration of thirty-one days after being filed, unless in the mean time proceedings are commenced by the claimant. Suppliers of material in order to have a lien must give notice to the owner or agent of their intention to claim a lien before delivery or within ten days thereafter. A mechanic who has become entitled to a lien on any chattel may sell same if amount to which he is entitled remains unpaid for three months, but he must first publish notice of his intention to sell in a newspaper. A woodman has a lien for wages on logs and timber on which such woodman has bestowed labor. Such lien must be filed in the nearest county court within thirty days from the last day on which such labor has been performed, and an action must be commenced in the county or supreme court within thirty days from the filing of such lien.

Mining and Mineral Lands. — In connection with any work done in or about any mine or mineral claim workman has lien for twenty-five days' wages, prior to a mortgage or any other incumbrance. A free miner's license may issue to any one over eighteen years of age, entitling the holder thereof to prospect, locate, and mine, other than by placer mining, upon crown lands for all minerals other than coal. The person holding such license must be a British subject. Placer claims vary in size, but in general are one hundred feet square or have one hundred feet frontage, but location must determine extent. Other locations are fifteen hundred feet by fifteen hundred feet, and as nearly as possible rectangular in shape. Leases of land for hydraulic purposes are issued by the government upon certain conditions, as are coal prospecting licenses; extra lateral rights have been abolished.

Mortgages. — Mortgages need not be under seal, and should be registered in the land registry office. See Registration of Deeds. A mortgage may be foreclosed by action, or the property may be sold under the power of sale contained in the mortgage deed. The registration of a mortgage in the land registry office is canceled on production of a release signed by the mortgagee. The short statutory form of mortgage is as follows: —

This indenture, made the day of one thousand nine hundred and in pursuance of the act respecting short forms of mortgages, between (here insert names of parties and recitals, if any), witnesseth, that in consideration of of lawful money of Canada, now paid by the said (mortgagee or mortgagees) to the said (mortgagor or mortgagors), the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, the said (mortgagor or mortgagors) doth (or do) grant and mortgage unto the said (mortgagee or mortgagees) his (her or their) heirs and assigns forever, all (parcels) (here insert provisos, covenants, and other provisions).

In witness whereof, the said parties hereto have hereunto set their hands and seals. The usual long form of mortgages, containing any covenants desired by the parties, is most commonly used.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — The law as to promissory notes and bills of exchange is almost identical with that which exists in England. Bills and notes which fall due on a legal holiday are payable on the day after such holiday. The legal holidays are Sundays, New Year's Day, Good Friday, Easter Monday, Christmas Day, King's Birthday, Dominion Day (1st July), and special days appointed by proclamation for a public holiday, a general fast, or thanksgiving. The Bills of Exchange Act, 1890, is a Dominion statute which is uniform to all the Provinces.

Practice. — The practice and proceedings of the courts are similar to the practice of the English courts, except as modified by the local statutes. The rules of the supreme court are copies or modifications of the English rules.

Probate Law. — The supreme court has jurisdiction in all questions relating to the testacy or intestacy or validity of wills of persons dying in the Province of British Columbia, no matter what the value of the estate of the deceased, and the county court in its proper territorial jurisdiction has jurisdiction concurrently with the supreme court in such matters where the personal estate of the deceased shall not exceed twenty-five hundred dollars, with power to grant probate of wills or to order administration under the Official Administrator's Act or to grant letters of administration of the personal estate and effects. Ancillary probate or administration may be had by producing form of probate or administration or exemplification thereof, purporting to be under the seal of the court by which the same has been granted, and the necessary affidavits as to value of the estate within the Province, grant of probate or administration elsewhere, value of the total estate of the deceased, relationship of those taking under the will, etc., but ancillary probate or administration is limited to grants of probate or administration made in Great Britain, Ontario, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, and the North-west Territories of Canada. Executors are not required to furnish security, but administrators must furnish security in double the value of the estate, usually with two sureties who must justify. Grants of probate and administration pay probate duty of one per cent. on the value of an estate going to father, mother, husband, brother, or sister of the deceased, and in case of other legatees or next of kin, except wife or children, five per cent. on the value of the estate. See Descent of Property, and Inheritance Taxes.

Proof of Claims. — Full particulars of the claim and of the christian names, surnames, and residences of all the proposed plaintiffs and defendants should be furnished to a solicitor. If the claim is on a foreign judgment, an exemplification or certified copy of the judgment under the seal of the foreign court is required. When the plaintiff resides out of the jurisdiction of the court the defendant is entitled to security for costs in such an amount as the court or a judge may direct, not to exceed two hundred dollars. In the county court, where the plaintiff is resident out of the Province, security for costs may be ordered in the discretion of the judge. In actions in the supreme court the amount of security given is usually one hundred and fifty dollars. If a claim is disputed it must be proved in the ordinary way, or if the witnesses reside abroad a commission may be obtained to take their evidence. See Actions.

Redemption. — See Mortgages; Taxes.

Registration of Deeds. — Conveyances, mortgages, and other documents affecting lands are to be registered in the registry office of the district in which the lands are situated. No instrument executed after, and taking effect after, the 30th day of June, 1905, and no instrument executed before the 1st day of July, 1905, to take effect after the 30th of June, 1905, purporting to transfer, charge, deal with, or affect land or any estate or interest therein, except leasehold interest in possession for a term not exceeding three years, shall pass any estate or interest, either at law or in equity, in such land until the same shall be registered in compliance with the provisions of the Land Registry Act, but such instrument shall confer on the person benefited thereby, and on all those claiming through or under him, whether by descent, purchase, or otherwise, the right to apply to have the same registered.

Replevin. — Whenever any personal property has been wrongfully distrained or otherwise wrongfully taken or detained, it may be replevied by the owner in an action commenced by a writ of summons by applying for an order of the court or a judge, or on a præcipe, the person making an affidavit as required by schedule to Replevin Act, 1911, upon his giving to the sheriff a bond in double the value of the property. Goods seized in execution cannot be replevied.

Revision. — The statute law of the Dominion was revised and consolidated in 1906. The statute law of the Province was consolidated in 1888, and was revised in 1897 and revised and consolidated in 1911. The revised statutes of British Columbia contain all the statute law now in force in the Province, all the English statutes prior to 1858 and not repealed by the Province or substituted having been adopted and brought down to date.

Sales in Bulk. — The purchaser of any stock of goods, wares, or merchandise in bulk, either for cash or upon credit, shall require from the vendor a statutory declaration of all the vendor's creditors from whom the goods were purchased and the amounts owing them, and shall apply the purchase price to the satisfaction of their claims. In default of which the sale is void as against such creditors: provided, that the purchaser may pay the creditors' claims and hold his vendor liable. Provided that if amount of purchase price is less than amount owing creditors the consent of sixty per cent. of the number and amount must be first obtained to such sale.

Service. — Service of a writ of summons wherever practicable should be personal, but the court may order substituted or other service by advertisement or otherwise when it appears that prompt personal service cannot be affected.

Stay of Execution. — Executions may be stayed by the court or a judge pending an appeal to the court of appeal upon satisfactory security being given by the appellant. An appeal does not stay execution without order of court appealed from.

Supplementary Proceedings. — When a judgment or order has been obtained for the recovery or payment of money, the party entitled to enforce it may apply to the court for an order to examine the debtor as to what debts are owing to him, and as to what means he has of satisfying the judgment or order and what property he had at time the debt was incurred. Judgments for the payment of money may be enforced by execution against goods and chattels and lands and hereditaments. In the county court and small debts court the judge may order weekly or monthly payments, and imprison for default of payment if it be proved that the judgment debtor was able to pay the amount ordered to be paid. See, also, Attachment.

Taxes. — A municipal by-law may be passed for the sale of lands on which municipal taxes have been in arrears for two years prior to the passing of such by-law. The owner has one year from the date of the order confirming the sale or before the delivery of the conveyance to the purchaser at the tax sale within which to redeem the land so sold. In non-municipal districts distress may be levied on goods and chattels of any one who neglects to pay his taxes, or the land of the person owing such taxes may be sold, the owner having two years within which to redeem. Taxes are a special lien upon lands and take priority over all liens except those of the Crown.

Testimony. — See Evidence.

Wills. — Must be in writing and signed at the foot thereof by the testator in the presence of two attesting witnesses, both present at the same time, who must subscribe their names as witnesses in the presence of each other and in the testator's presence and at his request. An executor or a devisee is a competent witness, but the devise to an attesting witness becomes void. Persons under age of twenty-one years cannot make a valid will. Marriage revokes will. A person may devise, bequeath, or dispose of, by his properly executed will, all real estate and personal property which he shall be entitled to, either at law or in equity, at the time of his death, and which, if not so devised, bequeathed, or disposed of; would devolve upon the heir at law or customary heir of him, or, if he became entitled by descent, of his ancestor, or upon his executor or administrator. See Probate Law.

MANITOBA LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Aikins, Loftus, Aikins & Fisher, of Winnipeg.

NOTE. — The Statutes of Manitoba were consolidated in 1913 under the title "The Revised Statutes of Manitoba, 1913."

By agreement between the Dominion and Provincial governments, the boundaries of this Province were extended northerly and easterly to Hudson Bay, and the laws of the Province were made to apply to the added territory from May 15, 1912. Only a small portion of the new territory is yet settled, and that portion has been organized as the electoral division of Le Pas.

Actions. — County Court. — County courts have jurisdiction in personal actions of tort and replevin up to five hundred dollars, and in personal actions ex contractu up to five hundred dollars. Actions are commenced by a writ of summons. A defendant served with a writ for a liquidated claim or demand must within ten days from service on him file a dispute note, otherwise judgment by default may be signed against him, and execution may be issued against his goods in six days after judgment. Provision is made for examination of a party and production of documents for discovery relating to matter in question.

King's Bench. — When a defendant is or claims to be entitled to indemnity or other remedy for relief over against any person not a party to the action, he may serve notice to that effect within time limited for delivery of statement of defense, stating his grounds of claim. The defendant who is served with this notice must file a statement of defense to such notice within time limited for filing the statement of defense. If third party defendant makes default in filing statement of defense, in case party giving notice suffer judgment by default, he shall be entitled to enter judgment against third party defendant.

On or before the third day before holding the courts the party entering action for trial shall deliver a certified copy of the whole of the pleadings and particulars in the action for use of the judge at that trial. A person making improvements on land under belief that it is his own is entitled to a lien for the amount of value of his improvements.

Actions which are not within the competence of the county courts must be brought in the court of king's bench. Actions are commenced in the king's bench by statement of claim. No judgment can be obtained in less than sixteen days from service on defendant. A defendant served in Manitoba must file his defense within sixteen days from the date of service. If such service is effected within any part of the Dominion of Canada or the United States of America he is to have four weeks after the service for filing statement of defense. If served within any part of the United Kingdom or Newfoundland, he is to have eight weeks after the service, and if served elsewhere than within the limits above designated, he is to have twelve weeks after the service. Security to the amount of two hundred dollars or bond in four hundred dollars (subject to increase by order of a judge) for costs can be required where the plaintiff resides out of Manitoba, unless the plaintiff has assets within the province to the amount of more than two hundred dollars, but as a partial compliance with the order the plaintiff may, where the claim is for a debt or liquidated demand, or for the recovery of land, pay fifty dollars into court and make a motion for leave to sign judgment. Moneys realized under a writ of execution are to be retained by the sheriff for a period of three months and to be then divided ratably among the persons then having unsatisfied executions in force. Sheriffs are to give notice in the "Manitoba Gazette" of any moneys realized under execution.

Actions may be brought against persons without the Province in the following cases: where the whole subject-matter of the action is land in Manitoba; where any act, deed, will, contract, obligation, or liability affecting land or hereditaments situate within Manitoba is sought to be construed, rectified, set aside, or enforced in the action; where any relief is sought against any person domiciled or ordinarily resident within Manitoba; where the action is for the administration of the personal estate of any deceased person, who at the time of his death was domiciled within the jurisdiction, or for the execution (as to property situate within the jurisdiction) of the trusts of any written instrument of which the person to be served is a trustee, which ought to be executed according to the law of Manitoba; where the action is founded on any breach or alleged breach within Manitoba of any contract wherever made, which, according to the terms thereof, ought to be performed within Manitoba; where any injunction is sought as to anything to be done within Manitoba; or any nuisance within Manitoba is sought to be prevented or removed, whether damages are or are not also sought in respect thereof; where any person out of the jurisdiction is a necessary or proper party to an action properly brought against some other person duly served within the jurisdiction, where the defendant has two hundred dollars in assets liable to judgments within Manitoba and it appears to the court or a judge that the plaintiff has a good cause of action.

In actions for foreclosure of mortgages or of agreements for sale, the defendant may, before judgment or after judgment and before sale or foreclosure or recovery of possession, move to dismiss the action or stay proceedings, on paying into court the amount then due for principal, interest, and costs, notwithstanding an acceleration clause.

Every debt or chose in action arising out of contract is assignable at law by any form of writing. The bonds or debentures of corporations made payable to bearer may be transferred by delivery alone. The transfer vests the property in the holder thereof, and such holder may bring action in his own name.

Obligations may be satisfied by part performance accepted in writing or rendered in pursuance of an agreement, as satisfaction, though without any new consideration.

The statute governing the practice in the court of king's bench came into operation on the first day of October, A. D. 1895. Its intention was to assimilate such practice to that of the superior courts in England and Ontario under the Judicature Acts. It abolished the separate administration of law and equity, and provides that the same shall be administered concurrently, and that the rules of equity shall prevail.

Costs. — Successful party in an action can only tax three hundred dollars (exclusive of disbursements). This amount includes all interlocutory costs. On appeals the amount is limited to one hundred dollars (exclusive of disbursements). A judge may increase the costs if an application is made for that purpose.

Administration. — See Probate.

Affidavits. — Affidavits made in Manitoba for use in provincial courts may be made before any notary public or commissioner for taking affidavits for use in any of the Manitoba courts, any judge, clerk of any county court, registrar, district registrar, or his deputy.

A solemn affirmation may be made instead of an affidavit by any person who is unwilling to be sworn on the ground of conscientious scruples, and declarant should so state in the affirmation itself.

A statutory declaration, attesting the truth of any fact or account or the execution of any writing, deed, or other instrument, may be made before any of the above functionaries or before a justice of the peace, police or stipendiary magistrate, recorder or mayor, or commissioner for taking affidavits for any Dominion or provincial court.

Affidavits, declarations, etc., made out of Manitoba for use here may be made before, 1, any commissioner authorized by the lord chancellor (The Commissioners for Oaths Acts, 1889); 2, any notary public, certified under his hand and official seal; 3, the mayor or chief magistrate of any city, borough, or town corporate in Great Britain or Ireland, or in any of his Majesty's dominions without Manitoba or in any foreign country, certified under the corporate seal; 4, judge of any court of superior jurisdiction in his Majesty's dominions without Manitoba; 5, a consular agent of his Majesty exercising his functions in any foreign place; 6, any commissioner for taking affidavits for use in this Province; 7, a colonel or major in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces on active service out of Canada.

Aliens. — Real and personal property of every description may be taken, acquired, held, and disposed of by an alien as if a natural-born British subject, and the title to real and personal property may be derived through, from, or in succession to, an alien.

Appeals. — Any person dissatisfied with a decision of a judge or jury in any action in the county court, when the amount or the value of the goods in question is twenty dollars or more may appeal to the Court of Appeal, and any person on obtaining an order from the trial judge or judge of appeal may appeal a question of law, or law and fact, no matter what the amount in issue. An appeal lies in all cases from the Court of King's Bench to the Court of Appeal and from it to the Supreme Court of Canada, and in certain cases direct to His Majesty's Privy Council (England).

Arrest — For debt is abolished.

Assignments. — Assignments may be made by a debtor for the benefit of his creditors generally, and if the property assigned is properly described, the assignment vests in the assignee all the real and personal estate, rights, property, credits, and effects belonging at the time of the assignment to the assignor, except such as are by law exempt from seizure or sale under execution or other legal proceedings, subject, however, as regards lands, to the provisions of The Registry Act and The Real Property Act as to the registration of the assignment. All assignments must be made either to the official assignee, or, with the consent of a majority of the creditors, having claims of one hundred dollars and upwards, computed according to the provisions of section 22 of the Assignments Act, to any person. A majority in number and value of the creditors who have proved claims to the amount of one hundred dollars or upwards may, at their discretion, substitute any other person for any assignee to whom assignment has been made. Mistakes, defects, or imperfections in the assignment may be amended by any judge of either the county court in the office of which the assignment is registered, or of the Court of King's Bench. Within ten days of the execution of the assignment notice of the assignment must be given in the "Manitoba

Gazette," and twice in one newspaper in the judicial district in which the property assigned is situate. A counterpart of every assignment must within ten days of its execution be registered in the office of the county court of the judicial division in which the assignor, if a resident of Manitoba, resides at date of assignment, or, if not a resident, then in the office of the clerk of the county court of the judicial division in which the personal property is at the date of the assignment. Meetings of creditors are provided for by statute. All questions at meetings are to be decided by a majority of votes calculated according to the amount of each creditor's claim. Creditors in proving claims must state whether they hold security. Employees are paid three months' wages in priority to other claims. Landlords have a preferential lien for rent for one year or three months according as rent is payable less frequently than quarterly or not. Fraudulent and preferential assignments are void.

Attachment. — An order of attachment may be made in an action in the court of king's bench against any debtor against whom there is a cause of action, if the debtor aforesaid is possessed of property in Manitoba not exempt from seizure under execution, or to answer a judgment upon such cause of action, and, if he is liable, in one of the following cases: 1. Where, being an inhabitant, he departs with intent to defraud his creditors, or to avoid being arrested or served with process, or conceals himself with the like intent. 2. Where, not being a resident of the Province, he shall be indebted to a person residing within this Province. 3. Where, being a resident of this Province or not, he is about to remove or transfer any of his property from this Province with intent to defeat his creditors. A judge's order may be made directing the attachment, upon the affidavit of the creditor or his agent stating the facts. Every order of attachment at and from delivery to sheriff binds goods and chattels of party against whom same is issued. To bind lands a certificate of the issue of such order must be obtained and duly registered in a registry office or land titles office. Such certificate lapses unless within one year from date thereof some proceeding for the sale of the land be commenced and a certificate of lis pendens registered in proper registry office or land titles office. Execution creditors share ratably in proceeds of property attached and sold.

Bills of Exchange and Promissory Notes. — Laws are the same as in the Province of Ontario and are governed mainly by the Dominion Bills of Exchange Act.

Chattel Mortgages. — Every mortgage or conveyance, intended to operate as a mortgage of goods and chattels, not accompanied by an immediate delivery and an actual and continued change of possession, is absolutely void against creditors of the mortgagor or subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith for valuable consideration, unless the mortgage or a true copy thereof is filed with the clerk of the county court in the judicial division where the chattels mortgaged are situate within twenty days from date of same. Mortgages thus filed cease to be valid as against the creditors of the persons making same, and as against subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith for valuable consideration after two years from the filing thereof, unless within thirty days next preceding the expiration of the said term of two years a statement exhibiting the interest of the mortgagee in the mortgaged property, and a full statement of the amount still due and of all payments made, be again filed with an affidavit by the party filing the same that the mortgage has not been kept on foot for any fraudulent purpose. This re-filing must take place every two years to retain priority as aforesaid. A mortgage, bill of sale, or other security may be made to apply to or bind growing crops or crops to be grown for the purpose only of securing purchase price of seed-grain, and such mortgage, etc., must contain an affidavit by the mortgagee or his agent that it is for such purchase, and takes priority to any prior bill of sale, chattel mortgage, or existing execution. Mortgages may be given to secure the repayment of future advances for the purpose of enabling the borrower to enter into and carry on business with such advances, the time of repayment not being longer than two years. Assignments and discharges of chattel mortgages may be filed, but the discharge has no validity till it is filed except as between the parties to such mortgage.

In case the grantee of a mortgage is a corporation the affidavit may be made by any official of the company who has been given power to make affidavits by that company. His affidavit must state that he is aware of the circumstances, has a personal knowledge of facts deposed to.

Mortgages of chattel property of a railway company are filed in the office of the provincial secretary instead of in the county court. No renewals of mortgages of chattels in trust for debenture holders need be filed where a certified copy of by-law authorizing debentures is filed with the mortgage or conveyance, and when such a mortgagor is a company whose head office is not in Manitoba thirty days are allowed for registration instead of twenty.

Corporations. — Corporations are created by special charter, by act of the provincial legislature or federal parliament, or by letters patent under the joint stock company's act. Shareholders are generally liable only to the amount remaining uncalled or the amount of their shares.

On and after June 1, 1913, the name of any company incorporated prior to that date is deemed to be changed so as to include the word " Limited " or " Ltd. " at the end of it.

Foreign corporations, with a few unimportant exceptions, must obtain a license to carry on business in Manitoba.

Extra-Provincial Corporations. — Corporations applying for license in Manitoba shall file in the office of the provincial secretary of Manitoba a certified copy of the charter or act of incorporation, etc., with declaration that said corporation is still in existence and legally authorised to transact business under its charter. And in addition produce evidence to show that similar licenses or privileges are granted to Manitoba corporations in the Province where the head office of such company is situate. The said corporation shall file a power of attorney to some person resident in this Province, signed by president or vice-president, managing director or two directors, and by the secretary, sealed with the corporate seal verified by a statutory declaration of one of its principal officers, which power of attorney shall show the exact place of business, or residence, of person so appointed. Must expressly authorize person named to accept service of process of all suits and proceedings against such company within said Province and must declare service on such person legal and binding on company to all purposes. The provisions hereof shall not apply to any company having its head office in Manitoba. On increase of capital by extra-provincial corporations an additional fee pro rata is payable. Companies incorporated under private acts must now file an annual summary.

The government may appoint inspectors to examine into the affairs of any company upon application of one fifth of the shareholders, or, if such examination is deemed in the interests of justice, and such inspectors have full powers for obtaining information. It is unlawful to sell any shares, stocks, bonds, or other securities of any company, subject to certain exceptions, without the consent of the Public Utility Commission. Such permission cannot be obtained until the company consents to certain rules facilitating the trial of actions against it in the courts of this Province. The taxes payable by loan, land, trust, insurance, and other companies were revised in 1912. See, also, Public Utilities.

Courts, Jurisdiction of. — There are three courts, viz.: The court of appeal, the court of king's bench, and the county court. The court of king's bench is a court of record of original jurisdiction corresponding in powers and authorities to a superior court of record of England. The jurisdiction of this court is the same as existed in England on July 15, 1870, except as modified by our statutes. The court of appeal is a court of appellate jurisdiction and original and appellate jurisdiction in criminal matters. County courts are also courts of record and have jurisdiction, 1, in all personal actions of tort and replevin up to five hundred dollars, and, 2, in all personal actions relating to debt, covenant, and contract up to five hundred dollars. As to surrogate courts, see Probate.

Deeds. — See Real Property.

Depositions and Commissions. — The court or a judge may order a commission to issue for the examination of witnesses on oath at any place or places out of the jurisdiction of the court, by interrogatories or otherwise, when it appears to be conducive to the due administration of justice, and shall give directions touching the time, place, and manner of such examinations.

Distress. — A mortgagee's right to distrain for interest due upon a mortgage is limited to the goods and chattels of the mortgagor only, and such goods and chattels must not be exempt from seizure under execution. A landlord's right to distrain is limited to goods of tenant, with certain exceptions. A landlord may claim as against any writ of execution or attachment three months' arrears of rent when same is payable quarterly, or more frequently, and one year's arrears of rent when same is payable less frequently than quarterly. When a superior landlord levies a distress on the goods or chattels of a boarder or lodger for arrears of rent due from the immediate tenant, such boarder or lodger may serve the superior landlord or his agent with a declaration setting forth his possession of the goods and chattels, and such lodger or boarder may then pay to the superior landlord the amount due by himself to the immediate tenant, and this payment to the superior landlord shall be deemed a valid payment on account of any amount due from him to the said immediate tenant.

It is not necessary that a sheriff be present to assist in any distress or seizure for rent. For the purpose of sale the goods and chattels shall be at the request in writing of the tenant or owner removed to some fit place for sale. Costs for removal shall be paid by the person requesting it.

Divorce. — By a recent decision of the Court of Appeal of Manitoba, the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Act, 20 & 21 Vic. (1857), ch. 85 (Imperial), is in force in Manitoba. It was introduced by 51 Vic. (1888), ch. 33 (Dominion), § 1 (now § 6, ch. 99, R.S.C. 1906), which provides that "Subject to the provisions of the next following section the laws of England relating to matters within the jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada, as the same existed on the fifteenth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, were from the said day and are in force in the Province of Manitoba, in so far as the same are applicable to the said Province and in so far as the same have not been or are not hereafter repealed, altered, varied, modified or affected by any Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom applicable to the said Province, or of the Parliament of Canada."

The Court of King's Bench of Manitoba possesses the jurisdiction and the machinery requisite to carry out the powers contained in the Divorce and Matrimonial Causes Act and such jurisdiction may be exercised by a single judge. See Walker vs. Walker, 1918 W.W.R., vol. 2, p. 1.

Dower. — The Manitoba Dower Act was assented to March 6, 1918, to come into force on September 1, 1918.

Every disposition by will of a married man, and every distribution upon his death intestate, is, as regards the homestead of such married man, subject and postponed to an estate for the life of such married man's wife in said homestead, declared by the Act vested in the wife so surviving.

Every married woman has, upon the death of her husband, in case her husband has made a disposition by will and has not provided for her by such will to the extent of at least one third of his estate, both real and personal, in addition to any interest in her husband's homestead, a one third interest in the total value of his estate, including such homestead after all debts, funeral and testamentary expenses have been paid.

Estates. — See Intestates' Estates.

Estoppel. — Covenants for title in any deed, mortgage, or lease made since the year 1875 operate as an estoppel against the covenantor and all persons claiming title under him.

Evidence. — The law of England up to July 15, 1870, prevails except as modified by our statutes. See, also, Laws of Ontario. The judge may during trial exclude all or some of the witnesses proposed to be called. Copies of certain documents may be given in evidence by giving the opposite party ten days' notice. Such copies will be received as sufficient evidence unless the party receiving notice gives notice within three days that he will dispute same. Protests of bills of exchange and promissory notes shall be received in all courts of Manitoba as prima facie evidence of the allegations and facts therein contained. Copies of public documents of Canada or Manitoba and copies of by-laws and proceedings of incorporated companies and municipal corporations duly certified by the proper officers are competent evidence. In the county court, in any action for debt or demand not being for tort, the judge may receive in evidence the books of the plaintiff, or, in case of defense or set-off, the books of defendant, also the affidavit or affirmation of any party or witness out of the judicial division in which the action is brought or out of the Province.

Executions. — Writs of fieri facias may be issued against goods only. They remain in force for two years from the teste and must be renewed every two years, and they bind the debtor's property, with few exceptions, from the time of their delivery to the sheriff in the court of king's bench. Wages for three months take priority to the claims of execution creditors, and the costs of execution creditors pro rata are preferential to the dividend upon the actual claims.

Exemptions.— 1. Bedding and furniture not exceeding five hundred dollars. (This exemption does not apply, where claim, for which distress warrant has issued, is for wages.) 2. Necessary clothing for judgment debtor and his family. 3. Twelve volumes of books and the books of a professional man, one axe, one saw, one gun, six traps. 4. Food for judgment debtor and family for eleven months if in possession. 5. Three horses, mules, or oxen, six cows, ten sheep, ten pigs, fifty fowl, and food for the same during eleven months, provided that the exemption as to horses over four years of age shall apply only in case they are used by the judgment debtor in earning his living. 6. Tools and implements up to five hundred dollars. 7. Farm lands up to one hundred and sixty acres actually resided upon, cultivated by the judgment debtor, or used for grazing or other purposes, and the houses, stables, barns on the farm lands resided upon by judgment debtor. 8. The actual residence or house of any person other than a farmer, provided the same does not exceed in value fifteen hundred dollars. 9. All the necessary seeds of various varieties or roots for proper seeding and cultivation of eighty acres. 10. Insurance on exemptions also exempt. 11. Chattel property of any municipality or school district. There are no exemptions in cases of judgments for board and lodging. No article is exempt when judgment was for purchase price of article seized.

Garnishment. — All debts, obligations, and liabilities due, owing, payable, or accruing due to a debtor may be attached to answer the claim of the creditor. Debts may be garnished both before and after judgment. In the court of king's bench a garnishee order cannot be obtained until an action has been commenced. In the county court the garnishee proceedings and the action may be commenced together. Any debt due to a mechanic, laborer, servant, clerk, or employee for wages or salary shall be exempt to the extent of forty dollars, and at the rate of forty dollars per month if less than one month's salary due. There is no exemption in case of a judgment for amount due for board and lodgings.

Goods, Sale of. — Law as to, is codified by "The Sale of Goods Act." No merchant or manufacturer may sell the whole or substantially the whole of his stock or an interest therein without the assent of his creditors unless the payment therefor is ratably distributed among his creditors; otherwise the sale is void. All objections to the validity of bulk sales must be raised within sixty days of notice of same.

Inheritance Taxes. — All property within Manitoba of deceased persons is liable to payment of succession duty.

Affidavits to be filed with provincial treasurer, Winnipeg, Manitoba, showing all property of the deceased situate within and without Manitoba and the persons entitled to same. The rate of taxation is controlled by the value of the total estate, but the tax is levied only on property situate within Manitoba. No executor or administrator shall transfer any debentures, bonds, stocks, or shares of any corporation having its head office in Manitoba, standing in the name of the deceased person, until succession duty is paid. Succession duty must be paid or security given before letters of probate or of administration can issue.

Insolvency. — Insolvency belongs to the exclusive legislative authority of the parliament of Canada, which in 1880 repealed all insolvent acts previously in force except as to cases where the estate of an insolvent had been vested in an official assignee before the passing of the act. In this Province assignments made by persons in insolvent circumstances, or on the eve of insolvency, with intent to defraud creditors, shall as against their creditors be void. See Assignments.

Insurance. — The classification of companies was revised in 1912 and provision made for licenses to carry on various kinds of insurance other than life. Service of process in all actions may now be made upon the inspector of insurance and shall be binding upon all foreign companies carrying on business in Manitoba.

Interest. — Legal rate, for Province, five per cent. Any rate may be collected which parties contract in writing to pay, provided in accordance with Dominion Usury Act, 1906.

Interpleader. — Relief by way of interpleader may be granted where the person seeking relief is under liability for any debt, money, goods, or chattels for or in respect of which he is or expects to be sued by two or more parties making adverse claim thereto. Where the applicant is a sheriff or other officer charged with the execution of process, and claim is made to any moneys, goods, or chattels, taken or intended to be taken in execution, he may apply for relief by way of interpleader within thirty days of notice of adverse claim. Where the applicant is a defendant, application may be made at any time after service of the statement of claim. The applicant must satisfy the court that he claims no interest in the subject-matter in dispute other than for charges or costs, and does not collude with any of the claimants, and is willing to pay or transfer the subject-matter into court or to dispose of it as the court or a judge may direct. Any common carrier or other bailee of goods and chattels upon whom any adverse claim to any goods or chattels in his possession is made may at any time upon affidavit showing how the said goods and chattels came into his possession, the nature and extent of his lien, the value of the goods, who the claimants are, the nature of the claims, that he has good reason to believe that if he delivers said goods to either of the claimants he will be sued by the other, and that he colludes with neither, apply to any judge of the king's bench; or where the value of the goods does not exceed four hundred dollars, to any judge of the county court of the judicial division in which such goods are at the time of the application for relief by way of interpleader. Where the value of the goods does not exceed four hundred dollars, the issue is usually tried in the county court. Interpleader issues may be tried by a jury.

Intestates' Estates, Devolution of. — If an intestate die leaving a widow and child or children, one third of his real and personal estate goes to his widow and two thirds to his child or children in equal shares, and, in case of decease of any of his children, to such as legally represent them. There is no distinction of half blood, and posthumous children share equally with children born during lifetime of the intestate. If no issue, the whole estate, real and personal, goes to the widow; if issue and no widow, to the issue; if no widow or issue, to his father; if no widow, issue, or father, to his mother, brothers, and sisters in equal shares; if no widow, issue, father, brothers, or sisters, to his mother; if no widow, issue, father, or mother, to his brothers and sisters in equal shares; or if any of his brothers or sisters be dead, their children take the parent's share. All these failing, to his next of kin; but in no case are representatives admitted among collaterals after brothers' or sisters' children. The separate property of a married woman dying intestate is to be distributed in the same manner as the property of a husband dying intestate. Real estate vests in the personal representatives since July 1, 1885, in same manner as personal estate, and may be sold to pay debts or to distribute among those entitled, whether there are debts or not. See Dower.

Judgments. — Immediately upon any judgment being recovered, a certificate of such judgment may be recorded in any and all the registration districts, and henceforth the judgment will bind all the lands of the judgment debtor in whatever districts certificates are registered. After such registration the creditor may proceed in the King's Bench to sell said lands, if not exempt. (See Exemptions, 7 and 8.) Certificates of judgment to be kept in force must be renewed every two years from the date of last registration. A certificate of judgment cannot be registered when the amount recovered is less than forty dollars.

In any action upon foreign judgments the defendant may plead to the action on the merits, and set up any defense which might have been pleaded to the original cause of action for which such judgment was recovered. Barred by limitations after ten years. See Exemptions.

Jury. — Actions for libel, slander, breach of promise of marriage, illegal or excessive distress, illegal or excessive seizure, criminal conversation, seduction, malicious arrest, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment, breach of warranty, and for the recovery of damages under "The Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act," shall be tried by a jury, unless the parties in person or by their solicitors or counsel expressly waive such trial. Except in cases of libel and slander, the right to a jury shall be held to be abandoned, and the case shall be tried without a jury on non-payment of the jury fee of twenty-five dollars. Subject to the foregoing provisions, trial by jury may be had upon the order or direction of a judge: such order or direction being usually only given where the case practically turns on questions of fact.

Limitations. — Actions for land must be commenced within ten years after the accrual of right of action. Actions for arrears of rent, or interest upon any sum of money charged upon or payable out of any land or rent, or in respect of any legacy or any damages in respect of such arrears of rent or interest, must be commenced within six years after the amounts become due or after a written acknowledgment.

Actions to recover money secured by mortgage, judgment, lien, or otherwise, charged upon or payable out of any land or rent or any legacy must be brought within ten years next after a present right to receive the same shall have accrued.

The mortgagor's right to redeem ceases ten years after the mortgagee obtains possession, or ten years after the mortgagee's last written acknowledgment of mortgagor's title. Persons under disability are to be allowed five years from the removal of their disability, but no action as regards persons under disability shall be brought except within twenty-five years next after the right of action accrued; and as regards persons absent from Manitoba, the time to bring an action is limited to fifteen years after the right accrued. There is no prescription as to the access and use of light to any building whatever in this Province. Except as above, the period of limitation in the case of simple contracts is six years; contracts under seal twenty years. Title by prescription cannot be acquired to land under the Torrens or new system. Law as to, codified by "The Real Property Limitations Act."

Married Women. — A married woman without any marriage contract or settlement may have, hold, and enjoy all her real and personal property, whether belonging to her before marriage or acquired after marriage, otherwise than from her husband, as fully as if a feme sole subject to her husband's interest in the homestead in her name. If married before May 14, 1875, the law is the same as to property not reduced into possession by her husband. Her wages and personal earnings are her separate property, and are free from the debts and control of her husband, and in general she may make contracts in respect of her separate estate, and sue and be sued on same as if feme sole. If twenty-one years of age she may, without any concurrence of her husband or father or other formality, contract and make herself liable in respect of her real estate. She may, if twenty-one, devise separate estate as she may see fit. She may effect insurance on her life, and may hold stocks and vote on same. A husband may convey his land to his wife and vice versa, without the intervention of a trustee. A female becomes of age at twenty-one. Law as to, is codified by "The Married Women's Property Act."

A contract or conveyance by a wife for the benefit of or to her husband is voidable, if made without independent advice.

Mechanics' Liens. — Unless he shall have agreed to the contract, every mechanic, machinist, builder, miner, laborer, or other person doing work upon, or furnishing materials to be used in, the construction of any building, at request of the owner, shall have a lien for the same upon such building and the lands occupied thereby to the extent of the owner's interest. There shall be no lien for a claim under twenty dollars. A statement of the claim, verified by affidavit, must be registered before or during the progress of the work, or within thirty days from its completion. The lien ceases to exist ninety days after completion, unless in the mean time proceedings are taken to realize the claim and a certificate of lis pendens is registered. Workmen have a special lien for thirty days' wages, and, subject to the provisions of "The Mechanics' and Wage-Earners' Lien Act," it takes priority over other liens and charges on the property and contract price. The lien may now be realized in the county court of the division in which the land is situated.

Mortgages. — See Real Property, and "The Mortgage Act."

Moratorium (affecting only contracts relating to land entered into prior to July 31, 1914.) — No proceedings to sell or foreclose under any mortgage, or other instrument charging land, may be taken until after some interest, taxes, or premiums of fire insurance are unpaid and in arrear for one year. Action on the covenant as to principal moneys is stayed for a similar period. Where interest, taxes, or insurance premiums are in arrear, action on the covenant may be taken on default, but the party liable may show that the rentable value of the property for a similar period is less than the amount of interest, taxes, or insurance premiums proceeded for, in which case there shall be a stay of proceedings, as to the amount by which the rentable value falls short of the amount sued for, for a period of one year from maturity of such interest, taxes, or insurance premiums, with the right of the creditor to obtain judgment for the amount in respect of which said proceedings are not stayed, and upon expiration of said period of one year for the amount in respect of which proceedings were stayed. All rentable values of real property shall, by written notice served on the tenant, be payable to and recoverable by any mortgagee or vendor to the extent of all interest due and all taxes and premiums, said rental values to be recoverable by mortgagee or vendor by any remedy or proceedings as between landlord and tenant, but mortgagor or purchaser shall not be dispossessed from his residence until after a lapse of a period of one year.

Practice. — See Actions, K. B.

Probate. — The Province is divided into six judicial districts, Eastern, Western, Northern, Southern, Central, and the Surrogate District of Saint Boniface, each of which has a surrogate court to which application for probate or administration is made. Ancillary probate or administration may be had by producing the foreign probate or administration, or an exemplification thereof (a certified or notarial copy is not sufficient), purporting to be under the seal of the court by which the same has been granted, and the necessary affidavits. Ancillary probate or administration is limited to Canada, the United Kingdom, or any British Province. Executors are not required to give security, but an administrator must furnish usually two sureties, each in double the value of the estate. The sureties must reside, or justify on property, within this Province. Where an applicant cannot find sureties, he may apply to have the official administrator appointed. Law as to, codified by "The Surrogate Court Act."

Under a recent amendment to the Trustee Act, administrators or executors may, on sufficient cause being shown, be removed, and a judicial trustee appointed in their place, to act either with any remaining executor or administrator or as a sole judicial trustee.

Public Utilities. — By an act of 1912, all telegraph, telephone, railway, street railway, water, gas, heat, light and power companies are brought under the control of a public utility commission. The act applies to all utilities operated by the provincial government and to municipal undertakings at the option of the municipality. The commissioner has wide powers over the tolls and service of the company, the right to use public streets and as to extensions. The utilities carried on by the city of Winnipeg and by all companies therein have been brought under the act. The scope of the Public Utilities is further defined and extended by the 1913 amendments.

Real Property. — The system known as the Torrens or Australian system of land transfer was introduced into the Province July 1, 1885. Land titles districts have been formed throughout the Province, each district being presided over by a district registrar. All land in each district may be brought under the Torrens system by making application in form prescribed by the statute, and a certificate of title shall issue to the applicant or his directee upon satisfactory proof being given of the title of the applicant. Every certificate of title shall, so long as the same remains in force and uncanceled, be conclusive evidence at law and in equity, as against his Majesty and all persons whomsoever, that the person named in such certificate is entitled to the land described in such certificate for the estate or interest therein specified. Subject to certain trifling exceptions mentioned in the statute, any person aggrieved must look to the assurance fund. When a certificate of title issues subject to a mortgage or other incumbrance (except a lease), the certificate of title shall be deposited with the district registrar, who shall retain the same on behalf of all persons interested in the land mentioned in the certificate. The district registrar shall, if desired, furnish the owner with a certified copy of the certificate of title, and the incumbrance with a certificate of charge, and before any subsequent dealings with said land or incumbrance such certified copy or certificate of charge must be delivered up to be canceled.

Transfers. — When land under the Torrens system, or any portion of such land, is intended to be transferred, the registered owner may execute a memorandum of transfer in form prescribed by statute, which shall contain an accurate statement of the estate or interest intended to be transferred, and a memorandum of all mortgages and other incumbrances. The certificate of title must be delivered to the district registrar, when the transfer is registered, that he may indorse on it a memorandum of the interest transferred. Every instrument presented for registration under the Torrens system may be in duplicate except a transfer, and shall, unless a crown grant, order in council, instrument under the seal of a corporation, or certificate of judicial proceedings, be attested by a witness who shall make an affidavit of execution. Transfers need not be under seal, and do not pass the estate until registered; the printed form of transfer should always be used.

Mortgages. — Whenever any land under the Torrens system is to be made security in favor of any mortgagee, the mortgagor shall execute a memorandum of mortgage in form prescribed by statute, and if it is subject to any other mortgage or incumbrance the mortgage shall state so. A mortgage under the Torrens system shall not operate as a transfer of the land charged. It shall only have effect as security. Mortgages, incumbrances, and leases may be transferred by form of transfer provided by statute. A mortgage is discharged by the production of the mortgage having thereon an indorsement signed by the mortgagee and attested by a witness, or of any separate discharge duly executed. If mortgagor be entitled to pay off mortgage money and mortgagee be absent, he (the mortgagor) may pay amount due to the provincial treasurer, who shall hold same in trust for the mortgagee. If default be made in payment of the principal, etc., and continue for one calendar month, the mortgagee may, after giving written notice to the mortgagor, enter into possession, and take the rents, etc. If default continue for another month from the date of service of the notice, the mortgagee may sell the property. When default continues for six months the mortgagee may apply to the district registrar for an order of foreclosure. And the registrar appoints a time within which redemption may be made, which shall not be less than one month from the service of notice to redeem. Mortgages under this system need not be under seal. The mortgagor in default for payment of principal may within three months without bonus or notice pay the same with interest to date of payment; after three months he may pay the same with three months' bonus and interest to date, or he may pay with three months' notice in lieu of bonus and interest to date of payment fixed by such notice. A mortgage repayable over a period greater than five years may be paid off with three months' bonus any time after five years have expired.

A power of attorney may be given by the registered proprietor of any land, estate, or interest under the Torrens system authorizing any person to act for him in respect of the transfer or other dealing with the same. The power of attorney must be duly executed and attested and verified by affidavit and deposited with the district registrar. Power of attorney remains in force until revocation or notice of death registered.

A caveat may be lodged at any time by any person claiming any interest in the land, forbidding the issue of a certificate of title.

When a caveator has withdrawn his caveat the district registrar may at his discretion allow a new caveat to be filed in the same matter. All land subsequently added to Manitoba is to be under the operation of "The Real Property Act." Where a patent to land is issued after February 20, 1914, and any instrument is sought to be registered in connection therewith, the land shall thereby come under the operation of "The Real Property Act." "Instrument" in this connection shall not include agreements for sale.

There is also the ordinary system of registration as to land not under the Torrens system. Conveyances, mortgages, and leases are statutory in form and are to be registered to preserve priorities, and the abstract or record of instruments registered is the guide upon examination of title. The provisions of the registry act as to lands not under the Torrens system are very much the same as prevail in Ontario.

Deeds and mortgages under this system are to be sealed and in duplicate for the purpose of registration.

A foreign company cannot legally hold land unless licensed by the provincial government.

Recording Deeds, Mortgages, etc. — All instruments excepting wills, sheriffs' deeds, and tax deeds affecting lands in Manitoba, whether there has been a crown grant or not, shall be adjudged fraudulent and void against any subsequent purchaser or mortgagee for valuable consideration without actual notice, unless registered in the proper office before the registering of the instrument under which such subsequent purchaser or mortgagee may claim.

Replevin. — Whenever any personal property has been wrongfully distrained, or otherwise wrongfully taken or detained, an action of replevin may be brought for the recovery thereof. An order for replevin may be obtained in such action. The order is returnable on the tenth day after service; but the sheriff shall not serve the order until he has replevied the property. The sheriff shall take a bond in double the value of the property to be replevied before he acts on the order.

Supplementary Proceedings. — In the county court any party having an unsatisfied judgment may, on showing that an execution against the goods and chattels of the judgment debtor has been returned nulla bona, procure from the clerk of the court a judgment summons calling on the judgment debtor to appear and submit to an examination touching his estate and effects. The summons may be obtained from a judge upon a proper affidavit. If defendant has means to pay the debt and refuses to do so, the judge may commit him to the common gaol for not more than forty days. The examination shall be in the judge's chambers. In the court of a king's bench a judgment debtor may be examined as to his estate and effects, etc., and if he does not attend, or attending does not answer satisfactorily, he may be committed to gaol for twelve months. The imprisonment in each case does not extinguish the debt or cause of action.

Volunteers. — During the continuance of the war, and until one year after the termination of the war, it shall not be lawful to bring any action or take any proceedings either in any of the civil courts or outside such courts against a person who since the first day of August, 1914, has enlisted and been mobilized as a volunteer, or against the wife or any dependent member of the family of any such person, for the enforcement of payment by any such person of his debts, liabilities, and obligations, or for the enforcement of any lien or incumbrance, or for the recovery of possession of any goods and chattels or lands and tenements. The act shall not apply to debts for necessities. The running of all statutes of limitations in favor of persons for whose benefit the act is passed are suspended.

Taxes. — Lands are liable to be sold for taxes when any portion of the tax has been due for more than one year. The owner may redeem within two years from the sale.

Wages. — Assignments of or orders on wages or salary to be earned in the future given in consideration of a present loan, advance, or payment are void unless (1) the consideration exceeds ninety-five per cent. of the wages or salary so assigned; (2) said assignment or order is accepted by the employer and a copy is filed with the county court clerk of the division where the assignor resides or is employed; (3) in case the assignor is married, the written consent of the wife inclosed or attached. But these provisions do not apply to assignments for necessities supplied or to be supplied.

Wills. — Wills must be in writing, signed at or near the end thereof by the testator, or by some other person in his presence and by his direction, and such signature shall be made or acknowledged by the testator in the presence of two or more witnesses present at the same time, who shall attest and subscribe the will in presence of the testator. No form of attestation is necessary. Testator must be twenty-one years of age. A will wholly written and signed by the testator does not require a witness. An executor, a creditor, a devisee or legatee is a competent witness, but the devise or legacy to the witness or to the husband or wife of the witness is void. Every will is revoked by marriage except a will made in the exercise of a power of appointment where the estate appointed would not in default of appointment pass to the testator's heir, executor, administrator, or next of kin.

Legacies or gifts for charitable purposes of lands or moneys to be derived from lands are void except subject to certain conditions. Property may be all willed away from the family, and children may be disinherited.

Workmen. — An act inaugurating a new policy in regard to workmen's compensation was passed in 1916. Claims for compensation for injuries are to be heard by the Workmen's Compensation Board and right to compensation shall be in lieu of all rights of action; the Board to assess the amount of compensation to be paid by employers to workmen injured in their employment. The employer is compelled to insure his workmen, and upon failure to do so the Board may cause employees to be so insured and order employer to recompense the Board to the extent of the cost of such insurance. Orders of the Board are to be of the same effect as an order of the Court of King's Bench. Provision is made for an accident fund by contributions by insurance companies and underwriters and by employers carrying their own insurance. The Board may make and enforce regulations for prevention of accidents and the installation of special safety appliances. Employers are compelled to notify the Board in case of accidents. The Employers' Liability Act (ch. 61, Revised Statutes of Manitoba, 1913) and the Workmen's Compensation Act (ch. 209, Revised Statutes of Manitoba, 1913) are both repealed, but Lord Campbell's Act is still in force.

NEW BRUNSWICK LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by Messrs. Weldon & McLean, of St. John.

Absconding Debtor. — See Attachment.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Accounts. — The names in full of plaintiffs should be furnished; also, when claim belongs to a copartnership, the full names of the members composing it.

Where the plaintiff is a corporation under a special act, it should be stated, and if incorporated under general acts of either Dominion, Province, or State, it should be so stated.

Actions. — Actions are commenced by writ of summons unless the defendant is to be arrested, when a writ of capias is issued on an affidavit of indebtedness made by the plaintiff or his agent.

Parish commissioners have jurisdiction in contract claims to eighty dollars; city court to the same amount. County courts have jurisdiction to four hundred dollars except where title to land is in question. Supreme court has jurisdiction to any amount.

In supreme court where plaintiff seeks to recover a debt or liquidated demand arising on a contract express or implied, a bond or contract under seal for payment of a liquidated amount, etc., the writ may be specially indorsed with a statement of the claim; and, on default of appearance within ten days after service, final judgment may be signed without further proof; while on ordinary summons and default of appearance being made within ten days, the plaintiff may enter interlocutory judgment, and a writ of inquiry shall issue to assess the amount unless the court orders another method. Where the defendant appears to a writ specially indorsed, and has no defense, the plaintiff may on an affidavit of himself or of any person who can swear positively to the facts, verifying the cause of action, and stating that in his belief there is no defence to the action, apply to a judge for liberty to enter final judgment, and such judge may order judgment unless the defendant satisfies him he has a good defense; on an ordinary summons, if defendant appears, the plaintiff delivers a statement of claim; the defendant within ten days delivers his statement of defense, and the plaintiff within ten more days his reply. Where the plaintiff resides out of the Province the defendant may demand from him a bond as security for costs, which is generally two hundred dollars if suit is in the supreme court, and one hundred dollars if in the county court.

In the county court the defendant has ten days in which to appear and plead, and the cause is at issue on the plea pleaded. In the county court, if the defendant appears in any action on a bill, note, check, or bond or contract under seal for payment of a liquidated amount of money, the plaintiff may take the same steps for signing summary judgment as are outlined above in the case of a specially indorsed writ.

Practice. — This is now regulated by the Judicature Act, cap. 5, 9 Edw. VII, which, with the rules of the supreme court, 1909, came into force on May, 1, 1910. The rules conform as far as possible to the English Judicature Rules of 1883 and the Rules of Practice of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario of 1897.

Affidavits. — Affidavit includes affirmation or declaration wherever by law an affirmation may be substituted for an oath or affidavit.

Affidavits to be used in any court in the Province or authorized to be administered or taken by any law in force therein may be sworn to before a judge of the supreme or county courts or any commissioner for taking affidavits. Where a statute requiring or authorizing an affidavit does not designate a person who shall take the same, such affidavit may be made before a justice of the peace for the county where it is made, except where it is to be used in the supreme, county, divorce, or probate courts.

Affidavits without the Province for use in the courts may be sworn to before a commissioner for the Province duly appointed for taking such affidavits, or before the several officials and persons authorized to take the proof or acknowledgment of the execution of any conveyance out of the Province. See Deeds.

A statutory declaration may be made attesting facts or accounts.

Aliens. — Aliens can now take, hold, and sell real and personal property, with the exception of ships, as if they were native-born citizens. When resident within the Province and served with process there, an alien may be sued in its courts; or if the cause of action arises within the Province, though the alien be not resident or served with process there, he may be sued in its courts. Land can be held by a foreign corporation when duly licensed. See Corporations.

Appeals. — The supreme court sitting en banc is the highest court in the Province, but an appeal can be taken from it to the supreme court of Canada, and in certain cases to his majesty's privy council in England.

Arrest. — A writ of capias can be issued on an affidavit of indebtedness, when sum is certain, and by order of a judge when cause of action is for an unliquidated amount or for damages. There is no arrest for debt after judgment except in the petty courts having jurisdiction under eighty dollars.

Assignments or Insolvent Laws. — There is a provincial act respecting assignments and preferences. It makes any assignment with preferences void, unless preference be given for present actual bona fide advance of money or goods. It is necessary to assign to the sheriff of the county unless consent be given by majority in value of creditors, when it may be made to any resident within the Province. The assignment under the act takes precedence of all judgments and of all executions not completely exhausted by payment. It is the duty of the assignee to give notice of meeting to all creditors within five days of date of assignment; such meeting to be held within twelve days after giving such notice. The creditors then have an opportunity of directing disposal of estate. Claims must be proved by affidavit. It is the assignee's duty to prepare a statement of accounts, and of his doings as assignee, within one month of the first creditors' meeting, and at intervals of three months thereafter. There is no priority among execution creditors.

Attachments. — Proceedings by way of attachment may be taken against the property of any person severally or any persons jointly indebted in the sum of forty dollars above all discounts, who depart from or keep concealed within the Province with intent to defraud his or their creditors. In no other case can an attachment issue until after judgment. See, also, Garnishment.

Chattel Mortgages and Bills of Sale. — Every mortgage or conveyance intended to operate as a mortgage of goods and chattels, which is not accompanied by delivery and an actual and continued change of possession, must be registered within thirty days from date of execution. There must be an affidavit by the witness of the due execution of the mortgage, and of the mortgagee or his agent, that the mortgagor is justly and truly indebted to him in the sum mentioned in the mortgage, that it was executed in good faith and for the express purpose of securing the payment of money justly due, and not for the purpose of protecting the goods mentioned therein against the creditors of the mortgagor, or of preventing the creditors of such mortgagor from obtaining payment of any claims against him.

The act also requires a bill of sale to be renewed every year by filing affidavits and statement set forth therein. In default and on thirty days' notice to mortgagee, calling on him to file affidavits, etc., the bill of sale is void as against subsequent purchasers.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — No distinction exists between judgment debts and other debts, in administering the estate.

Conditional Sales. — Where condition of the bailment is such that the possession of the chattel passes without any ownership being acquired by the bailee until the payment of the purchase-money, it is necessary that the receipt note, hire receipt, order, or other instrument evidencing such conditional sale, shall be filed in the registry office of the county in which the purchaser resided at the time of the bailment, within fifteen days from the delivery of possession of the chattel mentioned in the agreement, to be valid against subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith for valuable consideration. The manufacturer, bailor, or vendor shall also leave a copy of such receipt note, hire receipt, order, or other instrument by which a lien on the chattel is retained or which provides for a conditional sale with the conditional vendee at time of execution or within twenty days after.

Every manufacturer, bailor, or vendor shall on demand of any creditor or interested person file with the registrar, within twenty days from the making of such demand, a sworn statement of the amount due thereon, and on failure to so file said statement shall forfeit all rights under same as against such creditor or interested person. Also provision in act for sale on breach of conditions. Where the goods or chattels are affixed to the realty without the consent in writing of the owner of the goods or chattels, they shall not be or become part of the realty, but the owner of the realty shall as against the manufacturer, bailor, or vendor, have the right to retain the same upon payment of the amount due and owing thereon.

Corporations. — Companies are incorporated by special act of the legislature, or under the provisions of "The New Brunswick Joint Stock Companies' Act, 1916." Under that act any number of persons, not less than three, may apply for incorporation. A special act of incorporation is necessary for railway and insurance companies, building societies, and similar associations. The applicants for letters patent must sign a petition stating: 1. The corporate name. 2. The objects for which incorporation is sought. 3. The chief place of business or office within the Province. 4. The amount of its capital stock. 5. The number of shares, and the names in full, address and calling of each of the applicants. The shares may have no nominal or par value at the option of the applicants. The applicants also sign a memorandum of association or stock book. No previous advertising is necessary. The act closely follows that of the Dominion.

Licensing Extra-Provincial Corporations. — Chapter 18, Con. Stat. 1903, provides for the imposition of an annual tax upon certain corporations therein enumerated as follows: Fire, life, accident, and guarantee insurance companies, express companies, telephone

NEW BRUNSWICK LAWS.

Accounts. — The names in full of plaintiffs should be furnished; also, when claim belongs to a copartnership, the full names of the members composing it.

Where the plaintiff is a corporation under a special act, it should be stated, and if incorporated under general acts of either Dominion, Province, or State, it should be so stated.

Actions. — Actions are commenced by writ of summons unless the defendant is to be arrested, when a writ of capias is issued on an affidavit of indebtedness made by the plaintiff or his agent.

Parish commissioners have jurisdiction in contract claims to eighty dollars; city court to the same amount. County courts have jurisdiction to four hundred dollars except where title to land is in question. Supreme court has jurisdiction to any amount.

In supreme court where plaintiff seeks to recover a debt or liquidated demand arising on a contract express or implied, a bond or contract under seal for payment of a liquidated amount, etc., the writ may be specially indorsed with a statement of the claim; and, on default of appearance within ten days after service, final judgment may be signed without further proof; while on ordinary summons and default of appearance being made within ten days, the plaintiff may enter interlocutory judgment, and a writ of inquiry shall issue to assess the amount unless the court orders another method. Where the plaintiff resides out of the Province the defendant may demand from him a bond as security for costs, which is generally two hundred dollars if suit is in the supreme court, and one hundred dollars if in the county court.

In the county court the defendant has ten days in which to appear and plead, and the cause is at issue on the plea pleaded. In the county court, if the defendant appears in any action on a bill, note, check, or bond or contract under seal for payment of a liquidated amount of money, the plaintiff may take the same steps for signing summary judgment as are outlined above in the case of a specially indorsed writ.

Practice. — This is now regulated by the Judicature Act, cap. 5, 9 Edw. VII, which, with the rules of the supreme court, 1909, came into force on May, 1, 1910. The rules conform as far as possible to the English Judicature Rules of 1883 and the Rules of Practice of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario of 1897.

Affidavits. — Affidavit includes affirmation or declaration wherever by law an affirmation may be substituted for an oath or affidavit.

Affidavits to be used in any court in the Province or authorized to be administered or taken by any law in force therein may be sworn to before a judge of the supreme or county courts or any commissioner for taking affidavits. Where a statute requiring or authorizing an affidavit does not designate a person who shall take the same, such affidavit may be made before a justice of the peace for the county where it is made, except where it is to be used in the supreme, county, divorce, or probate courts.

Affidavits without the Province for use in the courts may be sworn to before a commissioner for the Province duly appointed for taking such affidavits, or before the several officials and persons authorized to take the proof or acknowledgment of the execution of any conveyance out of the Province. See Deeds.

A statutory declaration may be made attesting facts or accounts.

Aliens. — Aliens can now take, hold, and sell real and personal property, with the exception of ships, as if they were native-born citizens. When resident within the Province and served with process there, an alien may be sued in its courts; or if the cause of action arises within the Province, though the alien be not resident or served with process there, he may be sued in its courts. Land can be held by a foreign corporation when duly licensed. See Corporations.

Appeals. — The supreme court sitting en banc is the highest court in the Province, but an appeal can be taken from it to the supreme court of Canada, and in certain cases to his majesty's privy council in England.

Arrest. — A writ of capias can be issued on an affidavit of indebtedness, when sum is certain, and by order of a judge when cause of action is for an unliquidated amount or for damages. There is no arrest for debt after judgment except in the petty courts having jurisdiction under eighty dollars.

Assignments or Insolvent Laws. — There is a provincial act respecting assignments and preferences. It makes any assignment with preferences void, unless preference be given for present actual bona fide advance of money or goods. It is necessary to assign to the sheriff of the county unless consent be given by majority in value of creditors, when it may be made to any resident within the Province. The assignment under the act takes precedence of all judgments and of all executions not completely exhausted by payment. It is the duty of the assignee to give notice of meeting to all creditors within five days of date of assignment; such meeting to be held within twelve days after giving such notice. The creditors then have an opportunity of directing disposal of estate. Claims must be proved by affidavit. It is the assignee's duty to prepare a statement of accounts, and of his doings as assignee, within one month of the first creditors' meeting, and at intervals of three months thereafter. There is no priority among execution creditors.

Attachments. — Proceedings by way of attachment may be taken against the property of any person severally or any persons jointly indebted in the sum of forty dollars above all discounts, who depart from or keep concealed within the Province with intent to defraud his or their creditors. In no other case can an attachment issue until after judgment. See, also, Garnishment.

Chattel Mortgages and Bills of Sale. — Every mortgage or conveyance intended to operate as a mortgage of goods and chattels, which is not accompanied by delivery and an actual and continued change of possession, must be registered within thirty days from date of execution. There must be an affidavit by the witness of the due execution of the mortgage, and of the mortgagee or his agent, that the mortgagor is justly and truly indebted to him in the sum mentioned in the mortgage, that it was executed in good faith and for the express purpose of securing the payment of money justly due, and not for the purpose of protecting the goods mentioned therein against the creditors of the mortgagor, or of preventing the creditors of such mortgagor from obtaining payment of any claims against him.

The act also requires a bill of sale to be renewed every year by filing affidavits and statement set forth therein. In default and on thirty days' notice to mortgagee, calling on him to file affidavits, etc., the bill of sale is void as against subsequent purchasers.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — No distinction exists between judgment debts and other debts, in administering the estate.

Conditional Sales. — Where condition of the bailment is such that the possession of the chattel passes without any ownership being acquired by the bailee until the payment of the purchase-money, it is necessary that the receipt note, hire receipt, order, or other instrument evidencing such conditional sale, shall be filed in the registry office of the county in which the purchaser resided at the time of the bailment, within fifteen days from the delivery of possession of the chattel mentioned in the agreement, to be valid against subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith for valuable consideration. The manufacturer, bailor, or vendor shall also leave a copy of such receipt note, hire receipt, order, or other instrument by which a lien on the chattel is retained or which provides for a conditional sale with the conditional vendee at time of execution or within twenty days after.

Every manufacturer, bailor, or vendor shall on demand of any creditor or interested person file with the registrar, within twenty days from the making of such demand, a sworn statement of the amount due thereon, and on failure to so file said statement shall forfeit all rights under same as against such creditor or interested person. Also provision in act for sale on breach of conditions. Where the goods or chattels are affixed to the realty without the consent in writing of the owner of the goods or chattels, they shall not be or become part of the realty, but the owner of the realty shall as against the manufacturer, bailor, or vendor, have the right to retain the same upon payment of the amount due and owing thereon.

Corporations. — Companies are incorporated by special act of the legislature, or under the provisions of "The New Brunswick Joint Stock Companies' Act, 1916." Under that act any number of persons, not less than three, may apply for incorporation. A special act of incorporation is necessary for railway and insurance companies, building societies, and similar associations. The applicants for letters patent must sign a petition stating: 1. The corporate name. 2. The objects for which incorporation is sought. 3. The chief place of business or office within the Province. 4. The amount of its capital stock. 5. The number of shares, and the names in full, address and calling of each of the applicants. The shares may have no nominal or par value at the option of the applicants. The applicants also sign a memorandum of association or stock book. No previous advertising is necessary. The act closely follows that of the Dominion.

Licensing Extra-Provincial Corporations. — Chapter 18, Con. Stat. 1903, provides for the imposition of an annual tax upon certain corporations therein enumerated as follows: Fire, life, accident, and guarantee insurance companies, express companies, telephone companies, street railway companies, trust, loan, and building companies, telegraph companies, and banks. A statement is required before May 1st, from fire, accident, or guarantee insurance companies of gross premiums and also a report of agencies. A like report of agencies is demanded from banks.

With the exception of companies hereinbefore enumerated, corporations not having gain for their object, and certain other corporations, no extra-provincial corporation can carry on business within the Province unless a license to do so is taken out. Application for same is made to the lieutenant-governor-in-council. The fee is fifty dollars a year where the capital stock does not exceed one hundred thousand dollars; if over one hundred thousand dollars, the fee is one hundred dollars a year.

Taking orders for or selling goods, wares, or merchandise by travelers or by correspondence, if the corporation has no resident agent or representative and no office or place of business within the Province, is not deemed a carrying on of business within the meaning of the act. Corporations not required to take out licenses as above may obtain a license to acquire or dispose of real estate. Corporations that are required to take out licenses cannot acquire or hold real or personal property within the Province without being duly licensed. Cap. 26, of 1 George V., 1911, imposes an annual tax of one hundred dollars on traveling fire insurance agents, except such agents as have a permanent residence and an office or fixed place of business within the Province during employment as such agent.

Deeds. — Deeds must be under seal for registration, acknowledged by the person executing the same, or be proved by the oath of a subscribing witness as follows: When within the Province, may be made before a judge of the supreme or county court or a member of the executive or legislative council, or before any registrar of deeds, or any notary public appointed and resident in the Province, and certified under his hand and official seal or before any justice of the peace of the county in which the conveyance is to be registered. When without the Province, before any commissioner for taking affidavits under ch. 36, Cons. Stat., or before any commissioner authorized by the lord chancellor to administer oaths in chancery in England, or before any notary public, certified under his hand and official seal, or before the mayor or chief magistrate of any city, borough, municipality, or town corporate, and certified under the common or corporate seal of such city, or the seal of such mayor or chief magistrate, or before any British minister, ambassador, consul, vice-consul, etc., exercising his function in any foreign place, or before the governor of a State, and certified under the hand and seal of office of such minister, consul, etc. Deeds by corporations must be under the corporate seal attested by the proper officer and the seal, signature, and authority to execute verified by affidavit.

Depositions. — Depositions and commissions are taken without the Province by a commission duly issued by the court in which the action is pending. Full instructions for taking of the same always accompany it.

Descent. — Real estate is divided equally to and among the children of the intestate, then to the next of kin and their representatives.

Personal property is divided as follows: One third shall go to the widow of the intestate, and the residue in equal portions to the children, or, if dead, to their lineal descendants; if there be no children or legal representatives subsisting, the widow then takes one moiety, and the other moiety shall go to the next kindred in equal degree, and if there be neither widow nor children, all to next of kin in equal degree, and their representatives.

Divorce. — There is a provincial court having power to grant divorce, or of dissolving and annulling marriages. Divorce is granted for the following causes: Adultery, consanguinity within the degrees prohibited by act of Parliament made in 32 Henry VIII., and impotence.

Dower. — A widow is entitled to dower in all real property of her husband.

Evidence. — No person is disqualified as a witness by reason of interest as a party or otherwise. In criminal cases the prisoner may give evidence. Husbands and wives of parties are competent and compellable witnesses except as to communications made during marriage, and except that no husband shall be competent or compellable to give evidence for or against his wife, or any wife competent or compellable to give evidence for or against her husband in any proceedings upon summary conviction, or in any civil proceeding instituted in consequence of adultery. See Proof of Claims.

Executions. — Writs of fieri facias bind the debtor's property from the time of their delivery to the sheriff. Concurrent writs may be issued to any county. The debtor's goods must be exhausted before resort can be had to his lands.

Exemptions on Executions. — Wearing apparel, bedding, kitchen utensils, and tools of trade and calling to the value of one hundred dollars.

Garnishment. — Attachment of debts due a judgment debtor in the supreme or county courts may be made in any action when the amount remaining due on such judgment exceeds the sum of eighty dollars.

Money in the hands of an official or servant of the Crown, due or payable by the Crown to an individual and given to such officer for that purpose, is exempt. A judgment debtor may be examined as to his property, when any debts found to be due to him may be garnished, except wages or salary for personal labor and services to the extent of twenty dollars. In no case shall garnishment issue on judgments obtained for debt unless such judgment, independent of costs incurred in the suit, shall exceed forty dollars.

Interest. — There are no usury laws in the Province. Provision is made under the general banking act of Canada as to the rate of interest a bank can legally charge. Any person may stipulate for, allow, and exact on any contract or agreement whatsoever any rate of interest or discount which is agreed upon. Whenever interest is payable either by law or agreement of the parties and no rate is fixed, the rate is five per cent. per annum.

Judgments. — Priority of judgments is abolished. A judgment is good for twenty years, and a memorial of the same, when placed on record at the registry office, binds lands for five years, but can be renewed while judgment is in force. In case of assignment, judgments only take rank with other claims.

Limitations of Personal Actions. — Actions on contracts, notes, and debts must be commenced within six years after the cause of action arose. Actions for slander, assault and battery, wounding, and imprisonment shall be commenced within two years. In case of a plaintiff being under disability of infancy, coverture, or lunacy, or being absent from the Province, the time runs from the removal of the disability.

Real Actions. — Actions to recover land must be brought within twenty years after the right of action accrues. Where the party is under disability of infancy, lunacy, or absent from the country, then such person or the party claiming through him may, notwithstanding the period of twenty years hereinbefore limited shall have expired, make an entry or bring an action to recover such land any time within ten years next after the time at which the person to whom such right shall have first accrued shall have ceased to be under any such disabilities or shall have died. Limitation as against the Crown does not run until sixty years' adverse possession.

Persons under the disability of infancy, lunacy, or coverture, or absence from the Province, and their representatives, are allowed ten years from the termination of their disability or death, notwithstanding the expiration of the period of twenty years in which to bring the action, but no such action can be brought except within forty years next after the right of action accrued.

Examination of Judgment Debtor. — A judgment creditor who has recovered judgment in one of the Provincial courts may by application to the judge of any county court or clerk of the peace obtain an order that the judgment debtor shall be orally examined on oath before such judge or clerk as to any and what property he has which by law is liable to be taken in execution on such judgment, and as to the disposition he has made of his property.

Lien Leases. — See Conditional Sales.

Liens. — A lien is given to mechanics, machinists, laborers, contractors, or other persons doing work upon or furnishing materials to be used in the construction, alteration, or repair of any building or erection, or erecting, furnishing, or placing machinery of any kind in, upon, or in connection with any building for the price of the work, machinery, or materials upon such buildings and the lands occupied thereby.

A similar act gives a lien to lumbermen.

Married Women. — A married woman has rights about equal to a feme sole to carry on any business, make contracts, and dispose of her property generally.

Mortgages. — Mortgages must be under seal, and are executed in the same manner as deeds. A mortgage is foreclosed in the equity court, and sold under its decree, which passes all the mortgagor's property in the premises. Mortgaged property is sometimes sold under power of sale, if such power is in the mortgage.

A mortgage is discharged by the registration of a certificate signed by the mortgagee, his assignee or representative, stating that mortgage has been paid; or it may be discharged by mortgagee signing on margin of mortgage registered in office of registrar of deeds, and in his presence, a receipt for the money.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — The law as to notes and bills of exchange is codified, and follows the English act of 1882 very closely. Bills and notes which fall due on Sunday or a legal holiday are payable and must be presented the day following such holiday. The legal holidays are Sundays, New Year's Day, Christmas, Good Friday, Dominion Day, July 1st, May 24th, birthday of reigning sovereign (now June 3), Labor Day (1st Monday in September), and special days appointed by either the governor-general or lieutenant-governor as public holidays.

Practice. — See Actions.

Proof of Claims. — A solicitor should be furnished with all the christian names and surname of the proposed plaintiff. If the claim is contested it must be proved in the usual way, or by taking the evidence on commission when the witnesses reside abroad.

Recording Deeds, Mortgages, etc. — Every instrument affecting lands except leases not exceeding three years, where the actual possession goes along with the lease, must be registered in order to be valid as against subsequent purchasers for valuable consideration whose conveyances are previously registered.

Replevin. — Whenever any personal property has been wrongly distrained or otherwise wrongly taken or detained, it may be replevied under writ issued, upon the plaintiff giving a bond to the sheriff in double the value of the property.

Reports, Judicial. — The only cases reported are those in the supreme court sitting en banc, cited as N. B. R., and reports of the supreme court in equity, starting in 1895.

Taxes. — No provincial law requiring statements to be filed regarding either real or personal estate.

Wills. — Wills must be in writing, signed at the foot or end thereof by the testator (or by some other person in his presence and by his direction), in the presence of two attesting witnesses, both present at the same time, who shall attest and subscribe the will in the presence of the testator and in the presence of each other. No form of attestation is necessary.

An executor is a competent witness, but any devise or legacy to a witness or to the husband or wife of a witness is void, though the execution of the will itself is good.

Persons under the age of twenty-one years cannot make a valid will.

Every will is revoked by marriage except a will made in the exercise of a power of appointment where the estate appointed could not in default of appointment pass to the testator's heirs or next of kin.

A man may will away his entire property from his family, and may disinherit his children. He may leave his whole estate to charity.

NEWFOUNDLAND LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Herbert Knight, Esq., of St. John's.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Affidavits. — Examinations and affidavits in matters depending in the supreme court may be taken without the jurisdiction but within his Majesty's dominions, before any court, judge, notary public, commissioner, or person lawfully authorized to administer oaths in such country. In places outside his Majesty's dominions they may be taken before a commissioner of the supreme court of Newfoundland, or any British consul or vice-consul. For affidavits in proof of deeds, see Deeds.

Arrest. — In any action against a person not privileged from arrest, where fifty dollars or upwards is sought to be recovered, a judge shall have power to order a warrant for his arrest at any time after service of a writ of summons, upon an affidavit on behalf of the plaintiff sufficient to satisfy the judge that there is good cause to believe that such person has made or is about to make some disposition of his property, or is about to leave the colony with intent to defraud creditors or the plaintiff, or that he is about to quit the colony and that his absence will materially prejudice the prosecution of the action, or is possessed of means of payment which he withholds from his creditors. The defendant shall thereupon be arrested and held to bail to the intent that he shall pay the judgment and costs or surrender himself to the sheriff within four days after judgment. Members and officers of the legislature while in session, barristers, jurors and witnesses and parties to a suit while going to, remaining in, or returning from court, clergymen, and females are exempt from arrest under civil process.

Assignments. — Every charge, mortgage, conveyance, assignment, or grant of the property of an insolvent, and every gift, delivery, or transfer of his goods, and every payment made by him in money, and every cognovit, warrant of attorney, judgment, or other security paid, made, or given by any insolvent within two months prior to his declared insolvency and with a view to give an undue preference to any creditor, shall be null and void in case the person taking or receiving the same had notice of the insolvency.

Attachments. — At any time after the issue of a writ of summons a warrant of attachment of the property of a defendant may issue upon the filing of a sufficient affidavit showing an indebtedness in a liquidated sum of not less than twenty dollars, or showing in case of unliquidated damages that there is ground to believe that the defendant is about to make some disposition of his property or to sell or dispose of property the subject-matter of the suit, or remove the same beyond the jurisdiction. The property attached shall not be released except by the termination of the suit in defendant's favour or until bonds are given to the sheriff to pay any judgment that may be given. Perishable goods attached may be ordered by the court to be sold. Implements of a person's trade, his fishing skiff, cooking apparatus, wearing apparel and bedding are exempt from attachment.

Board of Trade. — The board shall have power to appoint committees of arbitration for the settlement of matters in difference voluntarily submitted by members or outsiders, and the award of such committee shall be final. When a final award is made in writing and filed of record in the supreme court, such award shall have the effect of a judgment of the court and execution may issue thereon.

Claims against the Estates of Deceased Persons.—Executors, administrators of the estate of a deceased person, shall by advertisement in the Royal Gazette newspaper call upon all persons having claims against the estate of the deceased to file the same within such time as in the opinion of the supreme court, or one of the judges thereof, shall be sufficient for creditors and others, duly attested to by the party, or in his absence by his agent, before a commissioner of affidavits. The affidavit of attestation shall be in the following form:—

I, A. B. of make oath and say that the foregoing paper writing contains a true and correct account of my demand against the estate of C. D., late of deceased, and that all the credits to which the deceased was honestly and justly entitled, so far as deponent believes, have been given on said account, and that the balance of is justly and truly owing to me.

Sworn before me at this day of A. D. 19 .
(Signed)

A. B.

Commissions. — Commissions issue by order of the court for the examination of witnesses abroad.

Companies Law. — The law is essentially the same as that of England, the Companies Acts being introduced here with some modifications. Foreign corporations can hold titles to land. Foreign corporations doing business here may be wound up compulsorily by the court whenever they are unable to pay their debts, or have dissolved or ceased to carry on business, or under any circumstances affording just cause for winding up. Locally registered companies are not compelled to file an annual balance sheet.

Courts, Jurisdiction of. — The supreme court has plenary jurisdiction in all matters save divorce, and including admiralty. The central district and Harbour Grace district courts have jurisdiction to any amount in wages, to the extent of fifty dollars in all causes involving not more than fifty dollars, save those affecting title to land, replevin, malicious prosecutions, and actions against public officers. Stipendiary magistrates have jurisdiction to try actions involving not more than two hundred dollars, save actions for malicious prosecution and against public officers. Appeals lie from the magistrates' courts and district courts to the supreme court, and from the supreme court to the privy council.

Deeds. — All deeds, decrees, judgments, conveyances affecting land shall be registered in the office of the registrar of deeds. Deeds may be proved within the colony upon the oath of a subscribing witness or upon the acknowledgment under oath of the parties, to be taken before a commissioner, justice, judge, or registrar. Without the colony proof may be made by affidavit of a subscribing witness or acknowledgment under oath by parties taken before a judge of a court of record under the seal of the court, the mayor or chief magistrate of a town, under the seal of the town, a notary public under his official seal, a British consul or vice-consul, or a commissioner of the supreme court of Newfoundland. Before a deed will be received for registration the signature of every person from whom an interest passes must be proved.

Depositions. — Generally, no deposition shall be given in evidence in a cause without the consent of the party against whom it is tendered, unless the court is satisfied that the deponent is dead or beyond the jurisdiction, or in Labrador, or is unable from sickness or other cause to be present at the hearing.

Divorce. — Our courts have no jurisdiction in divorce or power to dissolve marriages. Protection, however, is afforded deserted wives by magisterial order.

Evidence. — The English law is generally followed.

Inheritance Taxes. — By recent statutes, death duties (in addition to the probate fees, which are roughly twenty cents per one hundred dollars) are imposed upon estates of deceased persons leaving property within Newfoundland jurisdiction. Probate or administration will not now be granted until the Minister of Finance has certified that the duties have either been paid or that sufficient bonds have been given to secure payment. Applicants for probate or administration must furnish the minister with accounts verifying the value of the estate of deceased, and the minister has power to summon witnesses and examine documents for the purpose of verifying the accounts submitted. An appeal from the minister's certificate lies to the supreme court. Interest also at six per cent. per annum is charged from date of death to date of payment. Double duties are exacted if probate or administration has not been taken out within a year of death, unless the personal representatives of deceased can show that the delay was unavoidable. For the purposes of death duties, the estate of a deceased consists of property as well without as within the jurisdiction at the time of his death, and of property disposed of by him by donatio mortis causa, of property disposed of by donatio inter vivos, if so done within two years prior to his death, of property so disposed of in his lifetime with intent to operate after his death, and of property so dealt with as to permit his interest to pass by survivorship upon his death. Succession duties paid on property situate abroad are refunded. Shares in Newfoundland companies held by non-residents are fully liable to death duties. Registered companies must, under penalties, communicate to the Minister of Finance all particulars of shares held by persons deceasing, and must pay the death duties upon such shares within a year of the death of such persons, with right, however, to recover sums so paid from the estates of such persons. The duties are as follows: one per cent. from one thousand dollars to twenty-five hundred dollars; two per cent. from twenty-five hundred dollars to five thousand dollars; three per cent. from five thousand dollars to twenty-five thousand dollars; four per cent. from twenty-five thousand dollars to fifty thousand dollars; five per cent. from fifty thousand dollars to one hundred thousand dollars; six per cent. from one hundred thousand dollars to two hundred thousand dollars; seven per cent. from two hundred thousand dollars to three hundred and fifty thousand dollars; eight per cent. from three hundred and fifty thousand dollars to five hundred thousand dollars; nine per cent. from five hundred thousand dollars to seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars; ten per cent. from seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars to one million dollars; and eleven per cent. over one million dollars.

Address the Minister of Finance and Customs, St. John's.

Interest. — Any rate may be contracted for. Interest on judgments is five per cent.

Limitation of Actions. — All actions for rent upon indenture or demise, upon any bond or recognizance, within twenty years. Actions upon any award where the submission is not by specialty, or for an escape, or for money levied; actions upon any case other than slander; actions for account; actions for trespass, debt, detinue, trover, and replevin; actions or suits on the admiralty side of the supreme court for seamen's wages, within six years; actions for trespass, or assault, menace, battery, wounding, imprisonment, within four years; actions for penalties, damage, or sums of money by the parties aggrieved two years; actions for words, within two years after the words spoken.

Married Women's Property Act. — Under this act married women may carry on separate business and hold separate estate. A female becomes of age at twenty-one.

Mechanics' Lien. — A lien on behalf of a mechanic, machinist, builder, miner, contractor, or other person doing work or furnishing material for construction of a building may acquire a lien by registering the same within thirty days after completion of the work, which ceases, however, unless enforced within ninety days after completion.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — The law as to promissory notes and bills of exchange may be said to be the same as that which prevails in England; no stamps are required.

Patents. — Oaths in verification of applications for letters patent must be taken before a commissioner of the supreme court of Newfoundland, a judge of a court of record, under the seal of the court, the mayor or chief magistrate of a town, under the seal of the town, a British ambassador, consul, vice-consul, or consular agent or notary public.

Practice. — By the Judicature Act the practice of the supreme court has been assimilated to that of the high court of justice.

Proof of Claims. — No proof is of any avail except upon writ taken, but solicitors should be furnished with full particulars. Security for costs is enforced where plaintiff is out of jurisdiction.

Real Estate. — All real estate in Newfoundland is held to be a "chattel real" and goes to the executor or administrator of the deceased and not to the heir. The widow has no right of dower in Newfoundland.

Stamp Duties. — By recent enactment, stamp duties are collected at the rate of two cents for each cheque, promissory note, bill of lading, and shipping receipt. Bills of exchange pay five cents per one hundred dollars or fraction. Charter parties pay one dollar.

Wills. — Wills must be either holograph or signed in presence of at least two witnesses. Where testator is a marksman the will must be read over and explained to him in the presence of the signatory witnesses. Executors are competent witnesses, but legatees can only prove a will by forfeiting their legacy. There are no statutory restrictions upon a testator's power to dispose of his property. Executors are not required to give bonds, but administrators must give bonds in double the amount of the gross value of the estate.

Workmen's Compensation. — The English Employer's Liability Act and Workmen's Compensation Act have been substantially embodied in local enactments.

Upon the 1st of January, 1917, a law prohibiting the manufacture, importation, and sale of intoxicating liquors comes into operation.

NOVA SCOTIA LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. McInnes, Jenks, Lovett, Fulton & Kenney, of Halifax.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Affidavits. — Affidavits may be sworn abroad, before any judge of a court of record, British consul, notary public, or a commissioner authorized to administer oaths out of the Province, duly appointed by the government of the Province.

Arrest. — Where plaintiff, by affidavit, proves to the satisfaction of a judge or a commissioner that plaintiff has a good cause of action to the amount of twenty dollars or upwards, and swears that the deponent has probable cause for believing and does believe that the defendant, unless he is arrested, is about to leave the Province, the judge, without inquiring into the ground of belief, will make an order directing that such defendant be arrested and held to bail. When the amount is less than eighty dollars and more than four dollars, an order for arrest may be obtained from a magistrate upon an affidavit of the plaintiff setting forth the indebtedness, the deponent's belief that unless defendant is arrested the debt will be lost, and that defendant is about to leave the country, setting forth particularly the grounds for such belief.

Assignments. — Assignments which, made by an insolvent person, give a preference to one creditor over another, or are made to any person other than the official assignee, are voidable.

Attachment. — In suits against absent or absconding debtors, the writ of summons shall be in the usual form, and may describe the defendant as absent or absconding out of the Province. The plaintiff may sue out a writ of attachment to take defendant's property, or issue a summons to any agent having money or credits due defendant, on making an affidavit showing a cause of action for twenty dollars or upwards, stating amount of debt or damage sustained, and that defendant is absconding or absent out of the Province. The sum so sworn should be indorsed on the writ of attachment. The sheriff shall levy for amount indorsed on writ, with one hundred and twenty dollars for probable costs, in actions to recover eighty dollars or upwards; twenty-eight dollars in actions for less. Defendant's personal property is not bound by the writ of attachment until levy is made; lands are bound when a copy of the writ of attachment and a description of the lands are recorded. Perishable goods may be sold under an order of the court unless defendant's agent gives security for their value within three days after notice of appraisement; the affidavit may be sworn out of the Province if the court has jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the claim.

Bill of Sale. — Every bill of sale of personal chattels, or a true copy thereof, and every schedule annexed or referred to in such bill of sale, must be filed with the registrar of deeds of the county or district in which the maker resides, at the time of the execution thereof, or if he be not a resident of Nova Scotia, then in the registration district in which the goods are situate, accompanied by an affidavit by the grantor of the execution of the bill of sale and the bona fides thereof; otherwise such bill of sale, as against purchasers and judgment creditors, shall only take effect and have priority from the time of such filing. Bills of sale given as security for advances, indorsements, or liability incurred, or to be incurred by the grantee for the grantor, must contain a recital setting forth the terms, nature, and effect of the transaction, and be accompanied by an affidavit of the grantor of the truth thereof. A bill of sale remains in force for three years from the filing thereof, and may be renewed by filing a renewal statement, showing amount due, payments made, etc., within thirty days next preceding the expiration of the bill of sale. Hiring agreements by which the property in the goods remains in the hirer must be signed by and accompanied by an affidavit by the person hiring, and must be filed with the registrar of deeds for the district in which the person hiring resides.

"The Bulk Sales Act," 1913, provides that traders, commission merchants, and manufacturers must upon transferring their stock in bulk, furnish a list of their creditors with the amount due each, verified by a statutory declaration.

Chattel Mortgages. — See Bills of Sale.

Claims against the Estates of Deceased Persons. — Executors or administrators of the estate of a deceased person shall, by advertisement in the Royal Gazette newspaper, call upon all persons having claims against the estate of the deceased to file the same within one year from the date of the advertisement duly attested to by the party, or in his absence from the Province by his agent, before the registrar of probate for the county, a commissioner of the supreme court, or a justice of the peace. The affidavit shall be in the following form: —

I, A. B. of in the county of make oath and say, that the foregoing paper writing contains a true and correct account of my demand against the estate of C. D., late of in the county of Province of Nova Scotia, deceased, and that all the credits to which the deceased was honestly and justly entitled, so far as I believe, have been credited on said account; and that the balance of is justly and truly owing to me.
Sworn before me at in the county of this day of A. D. 19 .

(Signed) A. B.

Courts, Jurisdiction. — Magistrates, debt up to eighty dollars; county courts, contracts from twenty to eight hundred dollars; torts, from twenty to four hundred dollars; supreme court, from twenty dollars upwards.

The county court has no cognisance of any action: 1. When title of land is brought in question. 2. In which the validity of any devise, bequest, or limitation is disputed, except in certain cases. 3. Criminal conversation or seduction. 4. Breach of promise of marriage.

Deeds. — All deeds, judgments, attachments, leases for any time exceeding three years, and all vesting orders, affecting lands, shall be registered in the office of the registrar of deeds appointed by the governor in council for the county or district in which the lands lie. Deeds may be proved within or without the Province by the acknowledgment under oath by the parties executing any such instrument of the execution thereof or by the oath of a subscribing witness that the parties thereto executed the same in his presence, such oath to be administered within the Province by any registrar, a judge of the supreme or county court, a notary public, a barrister of the supreme court, a justice of the peace, or a commissioner of the supreme court, or without the Province by a commissioner appointed for taking affidavits without the Province for use in the courts of the Province, a judge of any court of record, the mayor or recorder of any city or incorporated town, a notary public or any minister, consul, vice-consul, or consular agent of his majesty. The person taking such acknowledgments or administering such oath shall sign a certificate, indorsed on or attached to the instrument, of such acknowledgment having been made or oath administered, and such certificate shall be registered together with the instrument. Every instrument shall, as against any person claiming for valuable consideration and without notice under any subsequent instrument affecting the title to the same land, be ineffective unless such instrument is registered before the registering of such subsequent instrument. When any instrument is signed under a power of attorney, such power of attorney must be registered. A release of mortgage may identify the land thereby released by reference to the registry of the mortgage.

Aliens and foreign corporations may hold title to lands in Nova Scotia.

Registered judgments and writs of attachment may be discharged by an entry made by the registrar on the margin of the registry thereof on the filing with him of a release of such judgment or attachment proved as above, or of a certificate under the seal of the court in which the judgment was obtained or out of which the attachment issued that the judgment has been satisfied or discharged, or that the action in which the attachment was issued has been discontinued or otherwise terminated in favor of the defendant.

Deeds of married women are as valid and effectual as if made by an unmarried woman if the husband of such married woman joins in the deed, or by a separate instrument expresses his concurrence therein; and the married woman acknowledges that the deed is her free act and deed and was executed freely and voluntarily without fear, threat, or compulsion of, from, or by her said husband. Such acknowledgment may be made before, and certified upon the instrument by any of the following persons: if within the Province before a judge of the supreme or county court, a justice of the peace, notary public, or barrister of the supreme court, and if without the Province before any of the persons mentioned above as qualified to prove deeds without the Province. A married woman whose husband is confined in a penitentiary or other prison for criminal offense or whose husband has ceased to live with her without sufficient legal cause, or whose husband is a minor, or insane, or idiotic, or otherwise legally incapacitated from executing a deed, or whose husband's interests in her real estate may have been sold under execution or otherwise disposed of, may obtain a judge's order enabling her to execute a power of attorney, deed, or other conveyance as if she were unmarried. A certified copy of such order must be registered with such deed or other conveyance. A Short Forms Act was enacted in 1912, similar to the act in force in Ontario. It gives validity to deeds and documents of conveyance following the statutory form, without affecting the validity of the common law forms now in use. The object is to shorten and simplify the existing forms of conveyance and to give certainty to transfers of land. It is optional with conveyancers to use the common law forms or the short statutory forms.

Depositions and Commissions. — Directions for executing commissions and taking depositions. — Commissioners appointed to take the depositions of witnesses must first take the oath of office, according to the form indorsed on the writ of commission. Each of the commissioners may administer such oath to the other. When only one is appointed, or in the absence of any other commissioner, a commissioner may himself take the oath.

When the examination, which is upon interrogatories and cross-interrogatories and viva voce on the subject-matter arising out of the answers thereto, is reduced to writing by a clerk sworn by the commissioner to take down questions and answers, it is to be annexed with the affidavit, exhibits, and other papers to the writ of commission, and the commissioners are to sign and seal the "Form of Return" indorsed on the commission. Full instructions as to the execution of the commission are always contained in the writ.

Descent of Real and Personal Estate. — Real Estate. — When a person dies intestate, any real estate to which he may be entitled at the time of his death shall descend as follows: 1. In equal shares to children and issue of deceased children according to the right of representation. If no child living, to his other lineal descendants, who shall share equally if in same degree, otherwise according to the right of representation. 2. If no issue, one half to father, one half to widow in lieu of dower; if no widow, the whole to father. 3. If no issue nor father, one half to widow, other half in equal shares to mother, brothers and sisters, and the children of deceased brother or sister by right of representation; if no widow, whole to mother, brothers, and sisters, and children of any deceased brother or sister by right of representation. 4. If none of foregoing, in equal shares to his next of kin in equal degree, excepting where two or more collateral kindred in equal degree, but claiming through different ancestors, those claiming through nearest ancestor shall be preferred, but in no case shall representatives be admitted among collaterals after brother's and sister's children. 5. If person deceased unmarried and under age, estate inherited from either parent goes to children of same parent and issue equally, if of same degree, otherwise according to right of representation; if no children of same parent, to all the issue of the other children of the same parent equally, if in same degree, otherwise according to right of representation. Degrees of kindred computed by civil law, and kindred of half blood inherit equally with those of whole blood in same degree.

Personal Property descends in the same way, except that after the payment of debts, funeral expenses, etc., if the intestate leave no lawful issue, one half of such residue shall go to his widow. If he leave issue, one third shall go to his widow, and if the intestate leave no kindred, the whole of such residue shall go to his widow for her own use. The widow is allowed all her paraphernalia, wearing apparel, etc., and sustenance for family for ninety days after death of husband.

Where a married woman dies intestate, leaving issue, her husband in addition to his estate as tenant by the curtesy shall take one third of her personal property and the residue shall be divided among her issue in like manner as if she had left no husband her surviving. And where she dies intestate without issue, one half of her personal estate shall go to her husband and the other half to her father, or if she have no father, then to her mother, brothers, and sisters in equal shares, and the issue of any deceased brother or sister by right of representation, and if there be no issue, father, mother, brother, or sister, the whole shall go to her husband.

Dower. — A wife is entitled to dower out of all lands (with a few exceptions) of which her husband was seized at and after their marriage, in which she did not bar dower during his lifetime; but a husband can only be tenant by the curtesy of lands of which his wife died seized. There is no dower in any separate tract of unimproved lands.

Executions. — Writ of execution (fi fieri facias) may issue upon a judgment or order for the payment of any moneys or transfer of real or personal property, and if unexecuted shall remain in force for one year only from its issue, but may be renewed at any time before date of expiration for one year from date of renewal, and so on from time to time. A writ issued against personal property binds the same from the time of the delivery of the writ to the sheriff to be executed, except in the case of a bona fide purchaser for value without notice, in which case the writ binds the property only from the time of the actual seizure thereof under such writ before the sale to such purchaser. A levy may be made under an execution at any time within one year from its issue. After levy and due advertising the property shall be sold. Execution may issue at any time within six years from the signing of the judgment and afterwards by leave of the court. Real estate of debtor cannot be sold under a judgment until it has been registered in the registry of deeds for the county or district in which said lands lie for one year. The sheriff having made such levy, he shall give thirty days' notice of sale in a newspaper and by posters, when he shall sell the lands at public auction. By chapter 14 of the Acts of 1903 priority among execution creditors is abolished, except as therein provided. It is by that act provided that if a debtor permits an execution issued against him which is indorsed to levy for one hundred dollars or upwards to remain unsatisfied in the sheriff's hands till within two days of the time fixed by the sheriff for the sale, or for twenty days after the seizure, other creditors may take the proceedings specified in the act in respect of their debts, whether the same are overdue or not. The proceeds of the sale are then to be ratably divided by the sheriff among the creditors who have established claims as provided in the act. Provision is made for the contestation of claims by the execution debtor, or by a creditor interested in contesting the same.

Exemptions. — The necessary wearing apparel and bedding and bedsteads of the debtor and his family, and the tools and instruments of his trade or calling to the value of thirty dollars, one stove, and his last cow, cooking utensils, six each of knives, forks, plates, cups, saucers, spoons, chairs, one shovel, one table, teapot, jug, spinning-wheel, weaving loom, ten religious volumes, food and fuel for thirty days, two sheep, one hog and food for same and cow for thirty days shall be exempt from execution.

Imprisonment for Debt. — On the twelfth day of February, 1894, an act of the provincial legislature respecting the collection of debts came into operation. Under the provisions of this act no person shall be arrested or imprisoned upon any judgment of the supreme, county, or magistrate's courts, except, upon an examination of the debtor being held before a commissioner, it is made to appear to such commissioner that the debt was fraudulently contracted, or without reasonable expectation of its being paid, that the debtor made any fraudulent disposition, or in cases of tort that such tort was willful and malicious; then in such cases the debtor may be committed to gaol for a period not exceeding twelve months if the debt is not sooner paid. A judgment creditor is entitled to an order for such examination upon an affidavit by himself, his agent or solicitor, setting forth the judgment and the date of recovery thereof, and the name and residence of the debtor, and the amount due thereupon, and stating that he has endeavored but has been unable to procure satisfaction of such judgment by execution. The commissioner must if required direct an absolute assignment of all real and personal property from the debtor to the creditor, in trust for the payment of the debt or payment by installments if it is made to appear to him that the debtor is in a position to so pay the debt.

Inheritance Taxes. — The law relating to inheritance taxes is embodied in the Succession Duty Act of 1917. A duty is payable on all property situate in Nova Scotia passing on the death of any person, whether the deceased was at the time of his death domiciled in Nova Scotia or elsewhere, except in the following cases: (a) when the estate does not exceed five thousand dollars; (b) where property is left for religious, charitable, or educational purposes, to be carried out in Nova Scotia; (c) where property passes to a grandfather, grandmother, father, mother, husband, wife, child, daughter-in-law, or son-in-law, if the aggregate value of the estate wheresoever situate does not exceed twenty-five thousand dollars; (d) where monies are received under a contract of life insurance payable to any of the persons mentioned in (c) when the aggregate of such insurance does not exceed five thousand dollars; (e) where the whole value of any property passing to any one person does not exceed three hundred dollars.

Duty is payable in respect to bonds and debentures and shares or stock of corporations incorporated by or under the laws of Nova Scotia or having their head offices in Nova Scotia.

The executor or administrator of an estate liable to succession duty should file with the Deputy Provincial Secretary a statement under oath showing: (a) a full itemised statement of all the property of the estate and its market value; and (b) the persons to whom such property will pass under the will or intestacy, the degree of relationship in which they stand to the deceased, and the age, address, and occupation of each of them.

The proper official to be addressed in reference to succession duties is the Deputy Provincial Secretary, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Interest. — Legal rate, five per cent. A contract may be made for any rate. Every judgment debt shall bear interest at the rate of five per cent. per annum until satisfied.

Judgments. — See Executions.

Limitation of Actions. — On all contracts not under seal, six years: judgments and contracts under seal, twenty years. No arrears of dower, rent, or interest can be recovered after six years. Real estate actions, twenty years.

Married Women's Property Act. — Under this act a married woman is capable of holding, acquiring, and disposing of, by will or otherwise, real or personal property as her separate property, in the same manner as if she were a feme sole. If the married woman by her will leaves her husband more than he would be entitled to if she died intestate, there should be an acknowledgment similar to that to be made by her in the case of deeds. A married woman has power to enter into contracts and render herself liable in respect of and to the extent of her separate property; she may also sue and be sued.

Under this act a married woman, by registered consent of her husband, may carry on business in her own name.

If husband leaves wife less than she would be entitled to if he died intestate (see Descent of Real and Personal Estate), she has the right to elect whether she will take what the will gives her or what an intestacy would give her.

Mortgages. — (See Deeds.) — A mortgage is foreclosed by an action in the supreme court, and is discharged by a release in which reference may be made to the registry of the mortgage, and same must be executed and recorded as an ordinary deed. There is no statutory form of mortgage. If no interest paid for twenty years, mortgagee's right barred.

Partnerships. — The English code on this subject is now on the Nova Scotia statutes. For the most part it is declaratory of the common law.

Proof of Claim. — An attorney should be furnished with the christian and surnames and residences of all proposed plaintiffs and defendants, and with duplicate itemised particulars of the claim.

Reviver. — Part payment or acknowledgment in writing.

Sales. — The law relating to sales of goods is codified by a statute passed in 1910. This is substantially the English Act.

Wills — Must be in writing, signed at the foot or end thereof by the testator or by some other person in his presence and by his direction, and such signature shall be made or acknowledged by the testator in the presence of two or more witnesses present at the same time; and such witnesses shall attest and shall subscribe the will in the presence of the testator; but no form of attestation shall be necessary. Executors are competent witnesses. Wills of minors are invalid. There is no restriction upon the amount which may be willed to charity or to others than the testator's family. Children may be disinherited.

ONTARIO LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Messrs. Aylesworth, Wright, Moss & Thompson, of Toronto.

Acknowledgments. — See Deeds.

Actions. — In the supreme court and county courts, actions are commenced by writ. The defendant, if served in Ontario, must appear within ten days after service inclusive of the day of service. If served out of Ontario the time for appearance is limited, having regard to the place of service. If the defendant appears, the plaintiff delivers a statement of claim. The defendant within ten days delivers a statement of defense, set-off, or counter-claim, and thereafter the plaintiff his reply. When the action is for a debt or a liquidated demand in money the writ may be specially indorsed with particulars of claim. In such case the defendant shall with his appearance file and serve an affidavit by himself or any one having knowledge of the facts stating that the defendant has a good defense upon the merits and showing the nature of his defense and the facts and circumstances which entitle him to defend the action. If the defendant fails to file and serve such affidavit judgment may be signed as on default of appearance. If the defendant appears to such a writ and files his affidavit the plaintiff may move for final judgment, and if the court is satisfied that there is not a good defense on the merits, judgment may be given for the plaintiff. Execution may issue forthwith after judgment.

In the division courts the plaintiff files a statement of his claim, and a summons is thereupon issued, and the case tried at the court held on the eleventh day after service on the defendant, if he resides in the county in which the action is brought; in case none of the defendants resides in the county in which the action is brought, but one of them resides in an adjacent (i. e. bordering) county, the case is tried at the court held on the sixteenth day after service; and if none of the defendants resides in the county in which the action is brought, or an adjoining county, the case is tried at the court held on the twenty-first day after service. If the claim be for any debt or money demand where the particulars of the claim with reasonable certainty and detail are indorsed on or attached to the summons, and it be not disputed, judgment may be obtained at the expiration of eight days from service on defendant (where the service is required to be ten days before the return), or at the expiration of twelve days from such service (where the service is required to be fifteen or twenty days before the return), and execution may issue forthwith. If the claim is disputed, execution cannot issue till the fifteenth day after judgment without special order.

Every debt or chose in action arising out of contract is assignable in law by any form of writing, but subject to such conditions or restrictions with respect to the right of transfer as may be contained in the original contract, and the assignee may sue thereon in his own name. Notice of assignment should be given to the debtor or obligor. The bonds and debentures of corporations made payable to bearer may be transferred by delivery, and the transfer vests the property in the holder thereof, and enables him to maintain action thereon in his own name.

In case of an assignment of a debt arising out of contract and not assignable by delivery, the defendant may avail himself of any defense or set-off arising before notice of the assignment which might have been made to a suit brought by the assignor.

This does not apply to bills of exchange or promissory notes.

It is not necessary to bring separate suits against the several parties to a bill or note; they may all be included in one action. See Proof of Claims.

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Affidavits. — Within the Province affidavits may be made before any notary public or commissioner appointed by the court for taking affidavits. A statutory declaration may be made attesting facts or accounts, etc. (Rev. Stat. Can. (1906), c. 145, § 36.)

Affidavits made out of Ontario for use in the courts of the Province may be made before any commissioner for oaths in the supreme court in England or Ireland, or a judge of that court, or of the session or the judiciary court in Scotland; or a county court judge in Great Britain or Ireland within his county; or a notary public certified under his hand and official seal; or the mayor or chief magistrate of any city, borough, or town corporate, certified under the corporate seal; or a judge of any court of record or of supreme jurisdiction; or, if made in British India, any magistrate or collector certified to have been such under the hand of the governor of the Possession; or, if made in Quebec, a superior court judge or prothonotary, or the clerk of the circuit court; or any British consul, vice-consul, or consular agent exercising his functions in any foreign place; or a commissioner authorized by commission to take affidavits in and for the courts of Ontario. See Deeds.

Aliens. — Aliens can take, hold, and sell real and personal property as if they were native born citizens. Aliens, although not residents in Ontario, may in certain cases be sued in its courts if they are served with process. Any person resident in Ontario may be sued in its courts upon a cause of action arising in a foreign country. Any person not resident within the Province, and not possessed of property in the Province, who brings an action in its courts, may be ordered to give the opposite party security for costs of the suit.

Appeals. — The appellate division of the supreme court of Ontario is the court of last resort in the Province. An appeal lies in certain cases to the supreme court of Canada. Appeals may be taken with certain limitations to the imperial privy council in England. An appeal lies to the appellate division of the supreme court of Ontario which is always in session, except during vacation, from any final judgment or order of the high court division of the supreme court of Ontario, from county court trial judgments and from a judge in chambers in certain cases and from the surrogate and division courts when the amount involved is over one hundred dollars. See Courts.

Arrest. — An order for arrest is granted only when a party or plaintiff, being a creditor of, or having a cause of action against, some person liable to arrest, satisfies a judge by affidavit that he has such a cause of action to the amount of one hundred dollars or upwards, and also shows that there is a good and probable cause for believing that such person, unless he be forthwith apprehended, is about to quit Ontario with intent to defraud his creditors generally or the plaintiff in particular. And such an order is granted to a plaintiff who has recovered judgment to the amount of one hundred dollars or upwards, and shows that there is a good and probable cause, etc., or that the defendant has parted with his property, or made some secret or fraudulent conveyance thereof in order to prevent its being taken in execution.

A married woman is not liable to arrest. Where a debtor who is a foreigner has absconded from his own country to Ontario and does not intend returning, and intends to go to some other country, the creditor may follow and arrest him.

Assignments. — Assignments for the benefit of creditors must be made to the sheriff of the county in which the debtor resides or carries on business, or with the consent of a majority of his creditors having claims of one hundred dollars and upwards to a person resident in Ontario other than the sheriff. Provision is made by statute for a pro rata distribution between creditors of the property assigned, and the act applies to an assignment, whether expressed to be made under it or not. Meetings of creditors are provided for by the statute. All questions at meetings are to be decided by a majority of votes calculated as provided by statute. Creditors in proving claims must state whether they hold security. If the security be on the estate of the debtor, or on the estate of a third party for whom the debtor is secondarily liable, the creditor must value the security, and the creditors may consent to his ranking, after deducting such valuation, or an assignment may be required of the security at an advance of ten per cent., to be paid out of the estate as soon as the assignee has realized the security, and the creditor in such case may rank for the difference. If the creditor claims on a negotiable instrument on which the debtor is only indirectly or secondarily liable, and which is not mature or exigible, such creditor is to value the liability of the party primarily liable; but after the maturity of the liability and its non-payment the creditor may amend and revalue his claim. Claims must be proved by affidavit and vouchers must be furnished. A creditor holding a claim not accrued may prove and vote. Interest is to be deducted in fixing the amount of such a claim. The law of set-off applies to claims against the estate. Employees are paid three months' wages in priority to other claims. A landlord's preferential lien is restricted to the arrears for the year previous to and three months following the assignment. See Executions; Insolvency.

Attachment. — If any person resident in Ontario, indebted to any other person, absconds from Ontario with intent to defraud the plaintiff, or to avoid arrest or service, and is at the time of departing possessed of property not exempt from seizure, he is deemed an absconding debtor, and his property may be taken, attachment for which a judge's order must be obtained upon affidavits stating the facts. Other creditors, if they place attachments in the sheriff's hands within six months from the date of the first writ, share pari passu with the attaching creditor. If a debtor absconds from the Province leaving personal property liable to seizure in any county of Ontario, or attempts to remove such personal property either out of the Province or from one county to another, or keeps concealed to avoid service of process, a plaintiff whose claim is more than four dollars and does not exceed one hundred dollars may obtain an attachment against the debtor's personal property in the division court.

Creditors of the same class with the plaintiff share pari passu if within one month after the issue of the first attachment they give notice of their claims to the clerk of the division court out of which the first attachment issued or in which it was made returnable.

Bulk Sales. — The Bulk Sales Act, 1917, imposes a duty upon the purchaser of stock in bulk to obtain, and upon the vendor thereof to furnish, before any part of the purchase price is paid or notes or security given, a written statement verified by statutory declaration of the vendor or his authorized agent, containing the names and addresses of all the vendor's creditors and the amounts due or payable to each. The purchaser however may pay fifty dollars on account for the purpose of binding the bargain before obtaining such statement. Failure to comply with these requirements will render any such sale fraudulent and void.

as against the creditors of the vendor unless all the creditors are paid in full out of the proceeds of such sale. Upon obtaining such declaration the purchaser shall either obtain a written waiver from the creditors or shall pay the whole of his purchase money or deliver his notes or securities into the hands of a trustee for distribution pro rata among the creditors. No action shall be brought to set aside any such sale for failure to comply with these provisions unless within sixty days from the date thereof or from the date when the attacking creditor first received notice of the transaction.

Chattel Mortgages and Bills of Sale. — All sales and mortgages of personal property are void as against creditors and subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith for valuable consideration, if not accompanied by an immediate delivery and followed by an actual and continued change of possession of the goods mortgaged or sold, unless registered in the office of the clerk of the county court of the county where the property is at the time of execution of the instrument, within five days from the execution thereof, together with an affidavit of such execution by a subscribing witness, and an affidavit of the mortgagee or purchaser, or his agent, as to the bona fides of the mortgage or bill of sale. Within thirty days next preceding the term of one year from the filing of the mortgage, a statement exhibiting the mortgagee's interest in the property and showing the amount still due for principal and interest and all payments on account thereof and an affidavit of the mortgagee (or one of the mortgagees), or his agent duly authorized in writing (a copy of which authority is to be filed therewith), that such statement is true, and that the mortgage has not been kept on foot for any fraudulent purpose, must be filed in the clerk's office, or the mortgage will be void as against creditors and subsequent purchasers or mortgagees in good faith. A similar statement is thereafter to be filed yearly. An agent may be authorized generally to take and renew all or any mortgages. Assignments and discharges of chattel mortgages may be registered.

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons — Are enforced by action against the executor or administrator, who is appointed by or receives his letters probate or letters of administration from the surrogate court of each county. In administering the estate no distinction exists between judgment debts and other debts; all are to be paid pari passu. Wage-earners are entitled to three months' wages in priority to other creditors.

Claims, Proof of. — See Proof of Claims.

Corporations — Are created by special charter, by act of parliament, or under the general law relating to incorporation of companies by letters patent. Shareholders are in most instances liable only to the amount of their shares, and when these are paid in full are discharged from further liability except as to the debts due to the servants of the company. By statutes, provision is made for winding up companies.

Courts, Jurisdiction of. — The supreme court of Ontario is a superior court of record and has civil, criminal, and equitable jurisdiction.

There is a county court in each county which is a court of record and which has jurisdiction in (a) actions arising out of contract, expressed or implied, where claim does not exceed eight hundred dollars; (b) personal actions, except criminal conversation and libel, where claim does not exceed five hundred dollars; (c) actions for trespass or injury to land, where claim does not exceed five hundred dollars, unless the title be in question, and in that case also where value of land does not exceed five hundred dollars and claim does not exceed that amount; (d) actions for interference with easement, where claim does not exceed five hundred dollars, unless title to easement be in question; and in that case, where value of land over which easement claimed does not exceed five hundred dollars; (e) actions for recovery of property, real or personal, including replevin and detinue actions where value of property does not exceed five hundred dollars; (f) actions for enforcement or redemption of mortgages, charges, or liens, where sum claimed does not exceed five hundred dollars; (g) partnership actions where joint stock or capital of partnership does not exceed two thousand dollars; (h) actions by legatees for payment or recovery of legacy not exceeding five hundred dollars out of estate not exceeding two thousand dollars; (i) all other actions for equitable relief where subject-matter does not exceed five hundred dollars in value; (j) actions and contestations to determine right of creditors to rank on an insolvent estate where creditor's claim does not exceed five hundred dollars; (k) summary proceedings against overholding tenant. If jurisdiction is to be disputed it must be done when entering appearance to the writ of summons.

Exchequer Court of Canada, Admiralty Side. — This court has jurisdiction to enforce the same rights and remedies as in any existing British vice-admiralty court. No right or remedy in rem given by the act creating the court except for wages is enforceable as against any subsequent bona fide purchaser or mortgagee of a ship, unless the proceedings for the enforcement thereof are begun within ninety days from the time when the same accrued; and no such right or remedy is enforceable against any bona fide mortgagee under a mortgage duly executed and registered prior to October 1, 1878; nor is such right or remedy in respect of claims for towage or for damage by collision enforceable against any bona fide mortgage duly executed and registered at an Ontario or Quebec port. The court has no jurisdiction in any prize cause, nor in other specified causes involving imperial interests. There is an appeal to the supreme court of Canada from all decisions of the court having the effect of a final order.

Division Courts. — These courts are presided over by the judge of the county court of each county. They hold jurisdiction (subject to certain exceptions): 1st. In all personal actions where the debt or damages claimed do not exceed sixty dollars, or by consent of parties up to one hundred dollars; 2d. In all claims and demands of debt, account, or breach of contract or covenant, or money demand, where the amount or balance claimed does not exceed one hundred dollars; and 3d. In all claims for the recovery of a debt or money demand, the amount or balance of which does not exceed two hundred dollars and the amount or the original amount of the claim is ascertained by the signature of the defendant, or of the person whom, as executor or administrator, the defendant represents. In actions coming within the third class, interest may be recovered on a principal sum which does not exceed two hundred dollars, although the total exceeds that amount. See Appeals.

Deeds. — Instruments affecting land are registered either under the old system in the registry office or under the Land Titles Act, according to the system under which the land is held. The common forms may be used. A short form for registered lands is provided by statute, and is as follows: —

This indenture, made the day of one thousand nine hundred and in pursuance of the Short Forms of Conveyances Act, between (here insert names of parties, and recitals, if any), witnesseth, that in consideration of dollars, of lawful money of Canada, now paid by the said (grantee or grantees) to the said (grantor or grantors) (the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged by him or them), he (or they) the said (grantor or grantors) doth (or do) grant unto the said (grantee or grantees) in fee simple (or otherwise as the case may be), all, etc. (parcels). (Here insert covenants or any other provisions.)

In witness whereof, the said parties hereto have hereunto set their hands and seals.

Forms of Covenants. — The said grantor covenants with the said grantee: 1. That he has the right to convey the said lands to the said grantee notwithstanding any act of the said grantor. 2. And that the said grantee shall have quiet possession of the said lands. 3. Free of all incumbrances. 4. And the said grantor covenants with the said grantee that he will execute such further assurances of the said lands as may be requisite. 5. And the said grantor covenants with the said grantee that he will produce the title deeds enumerated hereunder, and allow copies to be made of them, at the expense of the said grantee. 6. And the said grantor covenants with the said grantee that he has done no act to incumber the said lands. 7. And the said grantor releases to the said grantee all his claims upon the said lands. 8. And the said (A. B.), wife of the said grantor, hereby bars her dower in the said lands.

Where the land is held under The Land Titles Act, the following form of deed or transfer may be used: —

[Land Titles Act.]

I, the registered owner of the freehold land, registered in the Office of Land Titles at as parcel in the Register for in consideration of the sum of dollars paid to transfer to of the of in the of the land hereinafter particularly described, namely, being of the said parcel.

And I, wife of the said hereby bar my dower in the said land.

Witness.

Deeds must be under seal (see Mortgages), and should be in duplicate for the purpose of registration. In conveying the estate of a married woman the husband should be a party to the deed, but no acknowledgment or separate examination of the wife is required. See Married Women.

Proof of deeds, mortgages, etc., for registration is to be made by affidavit on the instrument, or securely attached to it, as follows: Within the Province, before any commissioner for taking affidavits, a notary public, the registrar of deeds or his deputy of the county in which the lands lie, or a judge of the supreme court of judicature, or a judge of the county court within his county, or a justice of the peace for the county in which the affidavit is sworn. In Great Britain or Ireland, before a judge of the supreme court of judicature, or of the court of session or of the judiciary court in Scotland, or a county court judge within his county, or the mayor or chief magistrate of any city, borough, or town corporate certified under the corporate seal; or a commissioner for oaths in the supreme court in Great Britain or Ireland; or a commissioner authorized by commission to take affidavits in and for the courts of Ontario; or any notary public certified under his official seal. In the Province of Quebec, before a superior court judge or prothonotary; or the clerk of the circuit court; or a commissioner authorized by commission to take affidavits in and for the courts of Ontario; or a notary public certified under his official seal. In a British Colony or Possession, before a judge of a court of record or of any court of supreme jurisdiction in the Colony, or the mayor of any city, borough, or town corporate, certified under the corporate seal; or a notary public, certified under his official seal; or, if made in British India, any magistrate or collector certified to have been such under the hand of the governor of the Possession; or a commissioner authorized by commission to take affidavits in and for the courts of Ontario. In the United States or any Foreign Country, before the mayor of any city, borough, or town corporate, certified under the corporate seal; or any British consul, vice-consul, or consular agent resident therein; or a judge of a court of record or a notary public, certified under his official seal; or a commissioner authorized by commission to take affidavits in and for the courts of Ontario.

PROVINCE OF

COUNTY OF To wit.

I, (here insert (1) name, (2) residence, (3) addition, occupation, or calling of the subscribing witness in full), make oath and say: 1. That I was personally present and did see the within (or annexed) deed (mortgage, discharge of mortgage, or other instrument), and a duplicate thereof (if the fact) duly executed, signed, sealed, and delivered, by A. B. and C. D., the parties (or two of the parties) thereto. 2. That the said instrument and duplicate were executed by the said party (parties) at (state place of execution). 3. That I know the said parties so executing the said instrument (if such be the fact, or such one or more of them, according to the fact). 4. That I am a subscribing witness to the said execution of the said instrument and duplicate. [Signed.] E. F.

Where the land is held under the Land Titles Act the following proof is required: —

I, the transferor named in the above transfer, make oath and say: —

That the above named is my wife, and we are both over the age of twenty-one years.

I, of the of in the of make oath and say: —

D. 19 at the of in the State of . In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal (or the common seal of the said city), the day and year last aforesaid.

[Seal.]

(Signature and official title.)

If different parties sign before different subscribing witnesses, each witness must make a similar affidavit as to the execution by the parties whose execution he attests, or the deed, etc., cannot be registered. The above referred to affidavit of execution is required for the registration of any instrument other than a will, grant from the crown, order in council, by-law, or other instrument under the seal of any corporation, or certificate of judicial proceedings.

Depositions and Commissions. — Directions for Executing Commissions and Taking Depositions. — The commissioners must first take the oath of office, according to the form of oath firstly indorsed on the commission. Each of the commissioners may administer such oath to the other. When there is only one commissioner, the oath may be administered by any person authorized to administer an oath in the place where the commission is to be executed.

The oath to be administered to the clerk, if any employed, to "take, write down, transcribe, and engross" the questions exhibited or put to the witness and the depositions, is that secondly indorsed on the commission. This oath may be administered by the commissioner. And the oath to be administered by the commissioners, or either of them, to the witnesses, is that thirdly indorsed upon the commission.

When the examination, which is either viva voce or upon interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, or partly in one way and partly in the other, is reduced to writing, it is to be annexed, with the affidavit, exhibits, and other papers, to the commission, and the commissioners are to sign and seal the "Form of Return" indorsed on the commission. Full instructions as to the execution of the commission are always contained in it.

The deposition of each witness should be signed by him and by the commissioners. For the caption of the commission the following form may be adopted: —

In the supreme court, or in the county court of or in the division court of the county of

Be it remembered that on this day of in the year of our Lord 19 at in the of in the county of and Province of being the time and place appointed by us for taking the examination of the witnesses named or referred to in the commission hereunto annexed in a certain cause pending in this court, wherein A. B. is plaintiff and C. D. is defendant, we X. Y., O. F., and G. D., the commissioners named in the said commission, having first taken the oath required of us in that behalf before who is a lawfully authorized to administer oaths and affirmations in the said county and State, proceeded to examine such of the said witnesses as appeared before us upon the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories annexed to the said commission (and also upon further viva voce questions, or as the case may be), and caused such examination to be taken down in writing and signed by the said witnesses respectively, and issued the same ourselves as hereinafter follows, that is to say: A. B., one of the said witnesses, being first duly sworn (or, in cases where the witness is by law allowed to declare and affirm, having solemnly declared and affirmed) that he would true answer make to all such questions as should be asked of or put to him upon his examination under and by virtue of the said commission, without favor or affection to either party, and therein should speak the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

To the first interrogatory he saith, etc.

The following viva voce questions were put (setting them out with the answers consecutively).

And so with cross-interrogatories and viva voce cross examination.

All adjournments should be noted.

Full instructions, however, always accompany a writ of commission.

Witnesses in Ontario will be ordered to attend for examination under a commission from a court of competent jurisdiction in a foreign country.

Descent and Distribution of Property. — As to all persons who died before the first day of January, 1852, the rules of descent are substantially the same as in England at that date.

Real estate of persons who died after that date and prior to the first day of July, 1886, descends to, 1st, lineal descendants and those claiming by or under them per stirpes; 2d, father; 3d, mother; and 4th, to collateral relatives, subject to certain rules and regulations prescribed in the statute.

The surplus personal estate of intestates who died prior to the first day of July, 1886, is, after the expiration of one full year from the death of the intestate, to be distributed in the following manner: One third shall go to the widow of the intestate, and the residue in equal proportions to his children, or, if dead, to their lineal descendants; if there are no children or legal representatives subsisting, then the widow takes a moiety, and the other moiety goes to the next of kindred in equal degree, and their representatives; if no widow, all to children; if neither widow nor children, all to next of kin in equal degree, and their representatives. But no representation is admitted among collaterals further than children of intestate's brothers and sisters. Estates of femes covert so dying intestate and without children are left as at common law, i. e. the husband is entitled to the whole; but when she so dies leaving husband and children, her separate personal property is distributed between her husband and children as the personal property of a husband so dying intestate is distributed between his wife and children.

As to all persons dying on or after the first day of July, 1886, the above rules are varied as follows: All real and personal property devolves upon and becomes vested in the legal personal representatives for the period of three years (which may be extended in a prescribed manner), subject to the payment of debts and to the effectual dispositions of deceased. The real and personal property of a married woman in respect of which she has died intestate shall be distributed as follows: One third to her husband, if she leave issue, and one half, if she leave none, and subject thereto shall go as if her husband had predeceased her. The realty and personalty comprised in a residuary devise or bequest is (unless the will otherwise directs) applicable ratably according to their respective value to the payment of the debts. By statute it is provided that the whole estate of a man dying intestate after July 1, 1895, leaving a widow and no issue, if the net value thereof does not exceed one thousand dollars, shall belong to his widow absolutely. Where the net value of the estate exceeds that sum the intestate's widow is entitled to one thousand dollars without prejudice to her interest in the residue.

Degrees of kindred are reckoned according to the computation of the civil law.

Divorce. — There is no divorce court in the Province of Ontario. The only means of dissolving the marriage tie is by a special act of the Parliament of the Dominion passed for each particular case. The procedure is analogous to that prescribed in the case of private bills. The application comes first before the senate, and the evidence is heard before a committee of that house. The bill must be passed by both the senate and the house of commons.

Dower. — See Married Women.

Evidence. — No person is disqualified as a witness by reason of interest, as a party or otherwise. A witness may be compelled to give evidence even though it is incriminating, but he is protected from the consequences to himself if he claim protection at the time of giving his evidence. Husbands and wives of parties are competent witnesses, but are not compellable witnesses as to communications made during marriage and proceedings consequent on adultery.

A witness may make an affirmation and declaration if the presiding judge is satisfied that an oath would not bind the conscience of the witness.

In suits by or against representatives of a deceased, or by or against a lunatic, the evidence of the opposite party must be corroborated. In criminal proceedings the accused is a competent witness on his own behalf.

The number of expert witnesses is limited to three on either side in civil cases and to five on either side in criminal cases and in cases within the jurisdiction of the Dominion Parliament except by leave of the presiding judge.

Executions. — See Judgments. Writs of fiery facias for the payment of money are issued against both the goods and chattels and the lands of the debtor, and bind his property (with

A wife is entitled to dower out of all lands (with a few exceptions) of which her husband was seized at and after their marriage in which she did not bar her dower during his lifetime; but a husband can only be tenant by the curtesy of such of his wife's lands as she died seized of.

A judge may dispense with the execution of a bar of dower upon a husband conveying when the wife is lunatic, or has been living apart from her husband for two years under such circumstances as disentitle her to alimony. Women attain their majority at twenty-one.

Mechanics' Liens. — Every mechanic, machinist, builder, miner, contractor, or other persons doing work on, or furnishing materials to be used in constructing, any building, etc., at request of the owner, has a lien for the same upon the building, etc., and the land occupied thereby, and usually enjoyed therewith, to the extent of the owner's interest. The lien must be registered in the county registry office during progress of work, or within thirty days after completion, or within seven days after the architect has given his official certificate or has upon application refused to give such certificate, and ceases to exist unless proceedings are taken to enforce it within ninety days from completion, in the supreme court. Mechanics entitled to lien on a chattel for work done may sell the chattel if (after three months) payment is not made.

Mortgages — Must be under seal. A wafer or some other adhesive substance should be used; a scroll is improper. A mortgage is foreclosed by action in the supreme court or in the county court if for less than five hundred dollars. By Rev. Stat. Can. (1906), c. 120, special provision is made for regulating the recovery of interest upon moneys secured by mortgage in certain cases. There is no redemption after sale or foreclosure under the decree. A registered mortgage may be discharged by the registration in the land registry office of a certificate, under the hand of the mortgagee, or his assignee or representative entitled to the money, stating that the mortgage money has been paid. The execution of the certificate for registration is proved in the same manner as that of deeds and mortgages. See, also, Deeds; Chattel Mortgages.

The short statutory form of mortgage for registered lands is as follows: —

This indenture, made the day of one thousand nine hundred and in pursuance of the Short Forms of Mortgages Act, between (here insert the names of parties and recitals, if any), witnesseth, that in consideration of of lawful money of Canada, now paid by the said (mortgagee or mortgagees) to the said (mortgagor or mortgagors), the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, the said (mortgagor or mortgagors) doth (or do) grant and mortgage unto the said (mortgagee or mortgagees) his (her or their) heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns forever, all (parcels). (Here insert provisos, covenants, or other provisions.)

In witness whereof the said parties hereto have hereunto set their hands and seals.

Forms of Covenants. — 1. And the said (A. B.), wife of the said mortgagor, hereby bars her dower in the said lands. 2. Provided, this mortgage to be void on payment of (amount of principal money) of lawful money of Canada, with interest at (rate of interest) per cent., as follows: (terms of payment of principal and interest) and taxes except for local improvements and performance of statute labor. 3. The said mortgagor covenants with the said mortgagee. 4. That the mortgagor will pay the mortgagee money and interest, and observe the above proviso. 5. That the mortgagor has a good title in fee simple to the said lands. 6. And that he has the right to convey the said lands to the said mortgagee. 7. And that on default the mortgagee shall have quiet possession of the said lands. 8. Free from all incumbrances. 9. And that the said mortgagor will execute such further assurances of the said lands as may be requisite. 10. And also that the said mortgagor will produce the title deeds enumerated hereunder, and allow copies to be made at the expense of the mortgagee. 11. And that the said mortgagor has done no act to incumber the said lands. 12. And that the said mortgagor will insure the buildings on the said lands to the amount of not less than currency. 13. And the said mortgagor doth release to the said mortgagee all his claims upon the said lands, subject to the said proviso. 14. Provided that the said mortgagee, on default of payment for months, may on notice enter on and lease or sell the said lands. 15. Provided that the mortgagee may distrain for arrears of interest. 16. Provided that in default of the payment of the interest hereby secured, the principal hereby secured shall become payable. 17. Provided that until default of payment the mortgagor shall have quiet possession of the said lands.

Where land is held under the Land Titles Act, the following form of mortgage or charge may be used: —

I, the registered owner of the land registered in the Office of Land Titles at as parcel in the Register for in consideration of the sum of dollars paid to me, charge the land hereinafter particularly described, namely, being of the said parcel with the payment to of the of in the hereinafter called the mortgagee, of the principal sum of dollars, with interest at the rate of per cent. per annum, payable as hereinafter provided, and with a power of sale as hereinafter expressed.

Provided this charge to be void on payment of the said sum of dollars of lawful money of Canada, with interest at per cent. as follows and taxes and performance of statute labor.

I. the said mortgagor, covenant with the said mortgagee that I will pay the mortgage money and interest and observe the above proviso, and that on default the mortgagee shall have quiet possession of the said lands free from all incumbrances, and that I will insure the buildings on the said lands to the amount of not less than dollars currency.

Provided that the said mortgagee on default of payment for months, may on notice enter on and lease or sell the said lands.

Provided the mortgagee may distrain for arrears of interest.

Provided that in default of the payment of the interest hereby secured, the principal hereby secured shall become payable.

And I, wife of the said hereby bar my dower in the said land.

This charge is made in pursuance of the Act respecting Short Forms of Mortgages.

Dated the day of one thousand nine hundred and Witness.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — The law as to promissory notes and bills of exchange may be said to be the same as that which prevails in England and the United States. Bills and notes which fall due on a legal holiday are payable and must be presented the day after such holiday. The legal holidays are Sunday, New Year's Day, Good Friday, Easter Monday, Christmas Day, Victoria Day (May 24th), Dominion Day (July 1st), Labor Day (first Monday in September), and the King's Birthday, and special days appointed by proclamation for public holidays, fasting, or thanksgiving, the day next following New Year's Day, Christmas Day, Victoria Day, Dominion Day, and the King's Birthday, when such days respectively fall on Sunday.

Practice. — The practice and proceedings of the courts are somewhat similar to and in accordance with the practice of the English courts, except as modified by the general rules of court and the statute laws of the Province.

Proof of Claims. — A solicitor should be furnished with the christian names, surnames, and residences of all the proposed plaintiffs and defendants, and with particulars of the claim, if on an open account. If on a judgment, an exemplification of the judgment, under the seal of the court and hand of the chief judicial officer, is required. Where the plaintiff is resident out of the Province, security for costs may be ordered by the court on the application of the defendant, in which case the bond of two householders in the sum of four hundred dollars must be given, or one half that amount deposited in court to abide the event of the suit. If an action is brought by a foreign plaintiff, and the plaintiff could if an appearance was entered apply for summary judgment on the ground that there is no defense, he may on being required to give security pay into court fifty dollars, and then make the application, and if successful the plaintiff may sign judgment and issue execution.

If the claim is contested, it must be proved in the usual way, or by taking the evidence on commission when the witnesses reside abroad. See Assignments and Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Recording Deeds, Mortgages, etc. — After grant from the crown, every instrument affecting land will be adjudged fraudulent and void against any subsequent purchaser or mortgagee for valuable consideration without actual notice, unless registered in the registry office of the county where the lands lie, before the registering of the instrument under which such subsequent purchaser or mortgagee may claim.

Redemption. — See Mortgages; Taxes.

Replevin. — Whenever any personal property has been wrongly distrained or otherwise wrongly taken or detained, it may be replevied under order upon the plaintiff giving a bond to the sheriff in treble the value of the property.

Reports, Judicial. — The cases decided in the different superior courts of law and equity are reported by authorized reporters who are appointed by the Law Society. Until 1901 there were three different series, as follows: Ontario Appeals Reports (A. R.), containing decisions of the court of appeal; Ontario Reports (O. R.), Ontario Practice Reports (P. R.), containing decisions of the high court. In 1901 a series of reports comprising decisions of all courts was commenced under the name of Ontario Law Reports (O. L. R.). The decisions of the supreme court of Canada are reported in the Supreme Court Reports (S. C. R.). Decisions of the Ontario courts are also found in Ontario Weekly Reports, (O. W. R.) and the Ontario Weekly Notes (O. W. N.). In 1912 a new series of reports comprising every case reported in the courts of every Province and also all the cases decided in the supreme court of Canada, exchequer court, and the railway commission, together with Canadian cases appealed to the privy council, was commenced under the name of the Dominion Law Reports (D. L. R.).

Revision. — The statute law of the Dominion was consolidated in 1906. The statute law of Ontario was consolidated in 1914.

Service. — See Actions.

Stay of Execution. — Executions are stayed on appeal to the appellate division of the supreme court upon the appellant setting down his appeal within the time set by the rules of practice or within the time directed by the trial judge.

Succession Duty. — See Inheritance Taxes.

Supplementary Proceedings. — Upon the return of an execution wholly or partly unsatisfied, or upon a statement from the sheriff in whose hands the writ is, to the effect that, if he were to make a return, it would be one of nulla bona, a judgment debtor may be examined concerning his property, and concerning debts due or owing from third parties to him. These third parties can be proceeded against by process of garnishment. When the debtor has made a conveyance of lands to defraud his creditors, a judge, on the application of an execution creditor, may summarily direct the lands to be sold to realize the amount to be levied under the execution. See Executions.

Taxes. — Lands may be sold for taxes whenever any part of the tax has been due for three years. The sale is made by the county treasurer in counties, and the high bailiff in cities. The owner may redeem the property within one year after sale.

Testimony. — See Evidence.

Trust Deeds. — Deeds of trust are seldom used in this Province for the mere purpose of securing the payment of money loaned.

Wills — Must be in writing, signed at the foot or end thereof by the testator, or some other person, in his presence and by his direction, in the presence of two attesting witnesses, both present at the same time, who shall attest and subscribe the will in the presence of the testator. No form of attestation is necessary.

Executor is a competent witness, and so, also, is a devisee or legatee under the will; but the devise or legacy to the witness, or to the husband or wife of the witness, is void.

Persons under the age of twenty-one cannot make a valid will. See Married Women and "The Wills Act." Every will is revoked by marriage except a will made in contemplation of such marriage, or in the exercise of a power of appointment where the estate appointed could not in default of appointment pass to the testator's heir or next of kin, or where the wife or husband elects to take under the will.

Wills of British subjects made outside of Ontario are valid as to personal property if properly executed according to the law of the place where executed.

A man may will away from his family everything he possesses, and may entirely disinherit all his children. Everything may be left to charity. Personalty may be so absolutely, but land may be held in mortmain by corporations only when they are specially licensed to hold it, and charitable devises to such must be sold by them within two years unless the time is extended by the court, otherwise the land vests in the accountant of the supreme court of judicature for Ontario to sell and pay the proceeds to the charity.

QUEBEC LAWS.

Messrs. McGibbon, Casgrain, Mitchell & Casgrain, of Montreal.

REMARKS. — The civil laws of the Province of Quebec are founded on the Custom of Paris, or old customary law of France, modified by imperial statutes and colonial ordinances and enactments. They were codified in 1866, after the model of the Code Napoléon. The Civil Code contains a comprehensive summary of the civil and commercial law of the Province. It is a great convenience to the practitioner, and contains many improvements on the old law by the introduction — without violating the spirit of the French law — of such portion of the law of England and the United States as experience has shown to be advisable. The criminal law is that of England, and is contained in the Criminal Code (Rev Stat. Canada, c. 146), which applies to the whole Dominion. The Code of Civil Procedure, or practice, was enacted in 1867, and replaced by a new Code in 1897. In all commercial and criminal matters the English rules of evidence are applicable; in others, French.

Acknowledgments. — See Evidence.

Actions. — Any inhabitant of the Province may be sued in its courts, for the fulfillment of obligations contracted by him in foreign countries, even in favor of a foreigner. Non-resident defendants having property in the Province may be sued therein, even when cause of action has not arisen in the Province. Writs of summons must contain the names in full and the occupations and places of residence of the plaintiffs; also, if a firm, the partnership name. If a corporation, it is sufficient to insert its corporate name and to indicate its principal place of business.

Non-resident plaintiffs may be ordered to furnish security for costs and a power of attorney authorizing the proceedings.

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons.

Affidavits — In a foreign country, may be taken before the mayor or chief magistrate of any city, borough, or town under the common seal, or before any consul or consular agent of his Majesty, in office, or before a commissioner appointed to receive affidavits there, for use in the Province of Quebec.

In Great Britain and Ireland, before the mayor, a commissioner to take affidavits for use in Quebec, or a commissioner appointed by the lord chancellor to receive affidavits in England, or a notary public, under his hand and official seal.

In British possessions, before the mayor, a commissioner to take affidavits for use in Quebec, or a judge of a superior court.

Aliens and Non-residents. — Aliens may sue and be sued, and hold and transmit property (except shares in a British ship). Generally aliens have same rights as British subjects, but cannot vote. Aliens may be naturalised after a residence of three years. (Naturalisation is not granted during present war.)

Appeal. — See Courts.

Arrest. — In cases of personal debts, amounting to fifty dollars or over, created or made payable within the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario, a writ of summons and arrest (capias ad respondendum) may be obtained, if defendant is immediately about to leave the said Provinces with intent to defraud his creditors, or plaintiff in particular, or is secreting or making away with, or about to secrete or make away with his property, with like intent, or, being a trader, is insolvent and refuses to make an assignment of his property. The writ is issued on the affidavit of the plaintiff, his bookkeeper, clerk, or legal attorney.

Assignments. — The insolvent acts having been repealed, debtors cannot make any assignment except upon demand of their creditors. See, also, Insolvent Laws.

Attachments. — Simple Attachment. — A creditor in a sum exceeding five dollars may, before judgment, attach debtor's movables, on producing affidavit setting forth the debt and one of the grounds upon which a capias would lie. See Arrest.

Attachment by Garnishment. — Under the same circumstances the property of the debtor may be seized in the hands of a third party.

Attachment in Revendication. — The owner, pledgee, depositary, etc., of a movable may reclaim it from the party illegally detaining the same. The unpaid vendor may, within eight days from delivery, reclaim the possession of goods sold for cash, which are still entire and in the same condition and which have not passed into the hands of a third party who has paid for them. If the debtor is insolvent the delay is thirty days from delivery.

Conservatory Attachment — May be exercised by the party who has sold movables on credit and term for payment has expired, or who is entitled to rank by preference on the proceeds of movable property, or to have the same placed in judicial custody.

All these attachments are issued upon affidavit. Attachments for rent or after judgment require no such formality.

Chattel Mortgages. — Generally speaking there is no such thing in this Province as a chattel mortgage, save as to vessels in the course of construction, which may be mortgaged under the provisions of the act for the encouragement of shipbuilding. Movable property may, however, be pledged, by being placed in the hands of a creditor as security for his debt. The privilege and right to be paid from it subsist only while it remains in the hands of the creditor, or of the person appointed by the parties to hold it, by the contract. Movables are not susceptible of hypothecation except as provided respecting shipping. By a recent amendment, however, corporations have been given the power by trust deed to mortgage and hypothecate their movable property. (Code, § 2022.)

Claims against Estates of Deceased Persons. — If there be no testamentary executor, and none has been appointed by the judge as permitted in certain cases, the execution of the will devolves entirely upon the heir or the legatees who receive the succession. Testamentary executors, for the purposes of the execution of the will, are seized as legal depositaries of the movable property of the succession, and may claim possession of it even against the heir or legatee. The seisin of testamentary executors lasts only for a year and a day from the date of the death of the deceased in the absence of any extension of their powers by will of the deceased. When the duties of a testamentary executor are at an end he must render an account to the heir or legatee. There is no special limitation with regard to claims against such estates.

Claims, Proof of. — See Actions.

Corporations. — Joint-stock corporations (except railway, telegraph, telephone, banking, insurance, and loan companies) may be incorporated under general acts, viz.: The Companies Act of the Dominion of Canada (R. S. C. 1906, c. 79) and the Quebec Companies Act (Que. R. S. 1909, art. 5957 and following). The procedure for obtaining letters patent of incorporation in the Province has been much simplified and assimilated to that obtaining under the Dominion Companies Act. Special charters may be procured from the Dominion Parliament or the Quebec Legislature.

Foreign corporations may transact business and hold real estate necessary for corporate purposes. Foreign corporations doing business in the Province of Quebec are required to obtain a license from the provincial government before commencing business; and to pay a fee proportionate to the capital. See Tax Laws.

Courts, Jurisdiction of. — In civil and commercial matters, the circuit court has jurisdiction in cases under one hundred dollars in the cities of Quebec and Montreal, and in cases under two hundred dollars in the country districts. The superior court has jurisdiction in all matters except those exclusively in jurisdiction of circuit and exchequer courts.

An appeal lies from the superior court to the same court sitting in review, composed of three judges, and thence if judgment is not confirmed, or directly from the superior court, to the appeal side of the king's bench, with six judges, presided over by the chief justice of the Province. This is the highest provincial court; from it an appeal in matters of two thousand dollars is given to the supreme court of the Dominion sitting at Ottawa; and also, in cases of twelve thousand dollars, to His Majesty in his Privy Council in England.

There are no distinctive divisions of courts into law and equity; under the French system they are combined.

Deeds. — Acts and deeds affecting real estate, if passed in the Province, must be executed before a notary public, who retains the original in his repertory (the notary public being a public officer) and issues authentic copies, which make proof in the courts. Deeds made out of the Province of Quebec are valid, if executed according to the laws of the place where they are passed. All deeds affecting real estate must be registered, and if passed out of the Province should be executed in the presence of two or more witnesses, one of whom must execute an affidavit, verifying the fact of execution. See Affidavits.

And I have signed

Sworn to before me at this day of 19 .

(Mayor or consul.)

The above affidavits may be made before any public officer of the country in which the instrument is made; but if the instrument is a power of attorney authorizing the execution of a discharge of a mortgage or other deed requiring registration, it must be proved by affidavit of one of the witnesses before any minister or chargé d'affaires or consul of his Majesty in such foreign country. Acknowledgments, within the Province, as a rule, should be made in writing, either in authentic form before a notary or before witnesses. See Testimony.

Depositions — Are taken stenographically and afterwards typewritten. See Affidavits; Testimony.

Descent of Property, Real and Personal. — Successions devolve to the surviving consorts capable of inheriting, children and descendants of the deceased, and to his ascendants and collateral relations in the order established by law. Children or their descendants succeed to their father and mother, grandfathers and grandmothers, or other ascendants, without distinction of sex or primogeniture, and whether they are the issue of the same or of different marriages. The surviving consort has been included as an heir by a recent amendment to the code. The law makes no distinction between movables and immovables: the whole forms one mass, which is divided as indicated.

If the deceased leave a consort and issue, the surviving consort takes one third and the child or children the remaining two thirds to be divided equally between them.

If the deceased die leaving no issue, but a consort and a father and mother, or either of them, and collateral relations up to nephews and nieces in the first degree, the surviving consort takes one third, the father and mother one third, and the collateral relations the other third. If no collateral relations, in the case supposed, the surviving consort takes one half and the father and mother the other half. If no father and mother, the consort divides the estate with the collateral relations.

Relations beyond the twelfth degree do not inherit. In default of the consort or relations within the heritable degree in one line, the relations of the other line inherit the whole, and in default of the consort or of relations to the twelfth degree in either line, the Crown succeeds.

Divorce. — Divorce can be obtained only for cause of adultery and by means of an act passed by the Dominion Parliament. Separation from bed and board may be obtained from provincial courts, on ground of ill-usage, cruelty, etc.

Dower. — See Married Women.

Evidence. — See Testimony.

Executions. — See Judgments.

Exemptions. — See Judgments.

Garnishment. — See Attachments.

Inheritance Taxes. — (Governed by Statute 4 George V, ch. 9 (1914) "Quebec Succession Duties Act.") All property, movable or immovable, the ownership or enjoyment whereof is transmitted owing to death, is liable to taxes calculated upon the value of the property transmitted, after deducting debts and charges existing at the time of death. Estates not exceeding fifteen thousand dollars pay no tax. Devolutions in the direct line of estates over fifteen thousand dollars pay taxes on an ascending scale ranging from one and one quarter per cent. to five per cent. five thousand dollars being exempt. In the collateral line the rate ascends from five per cent. to nine per cent., and in the case of succession devolving to a stranger is ten per cent. Certain additional duties are imposed in cases of large bequests (from fifty thousand dollars up) to one person. Within thirty days of the death of the testator, a copy of his will must be sent to the collector, and within three months of death, the heir must furnish a declaration as to the value of the estate. The collector of provincial revenue for the district wherein the testator died is the official to be addressed. Corporations with head offices in this Province must, under penalty, notify the provincial treasurer of the death of persons abroad who held shares in such corporation, with a statement of such holdings. Such property pays taxes. Similar taxes are imposed upon transmissions within the Province, owing to death of persons domiciled therein upon movable property locally situate outside the Province. (4 George V, ch. 10.)

Insolvent Laws. — Insolvent traders, who have ceased their payments, may be required to make an abandonment by any creditor for an unsecured claim of two hundred dollars and upwards. The abandonment is made to the superior court, which appoints a curator and inspectors, on the advice of the creditors, to liquidate the estate. The assignment does not discharge the debtor, except to the extent to which creditors are paid by means of a dividend.

Insolvent corporations can be wound up under Dominion and Provincial legislation.

Interest. — The legal rate of interest is five per cent., but any other rate stipulated between parties is recognized and enforced by the courts. Banks cannot recover more than seven per cent. Professional money lenders cannot charge more than twelve per cent. on loans of less than five hundred dollars without making themselves liable to criminal prosecution.

Injunction, Writs of. — Injunctions may be obtained in the usual cases.

Judgments. — Judgments of the court are valid for thirty years. The registration of a judgment against the immovable property of the debtor operates as a mortgage claim thereon in the creditor's favor. It takes about eight days to obtain judgment, if the action be not contested. Judgment creditors have no priority.

Exemptions. — The debtor may select and withdraw from seizure: 1. The bed, bedding, and bedsteads in use by him and his family; 2. The ordinary and necessary wearing apparel of himself and his family; 3. Two stoves and their pipes, one pot-hook and its accessories, one pair of andirons, one pair of tongs, and one shovel; 4. All the cooking utensils, knives, forks, spoons, and crockery in use by the family, two tables, two cupboards or dressers, one lamp, one mirror, one washingstand with its toilet accessories, two trunks or valises, the carpets or matting covering the floors, one clock, one sofa, and twelve chairs, provided that the total value of such effects does not exceed the sum of fifty dollars; 5. All spinning-wheels and weaving looms intended for domestic use, one axe, one saw, one gun, six traps, such fishing-nets, lines, and seines as are in common use, one tub, one washing-machine, one wringer, one sewing-machine, two pails, three flat-irons, one blacking-brush, one scrubbing-brush, one broom; 6. Fifty volumes of books, and all drawings and paintings executed by the debtor or the members of his family, for their use; 7. Fuel and food sufficient for the debtor and his family for three months; 8. One span of plow-horses or a yoke of oxen; one horse, one summer vehicle, and one winter vehicle, and harness used by a carter or driver for earning his livelihood; one cow, two pigs, four sheep, the wool from such sheep, the cloth manufactured from such wool, and the hay and other fodder intended for feeding the said animals; and, moreover, the following agricultural tools and implements: one plow, one harrow, one working sleigh, one tumbril, one hay-cart with its wheels, and all harness necessary and intended for farming purposes; 9. Books relating to the profession, art, or trade of the debtor, to the value of two hundred dollars; 10. Tools and implements or other chattels ordinarily used in his profession, art, or trade to the value of two hundred dollars; 11. Bees to the extent of fifteen hives. Nevertheless, the things and effects mentioned in paragraphs 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 are not exempt from seizure and sale when the suit is to recover the price of their purchase, or when they have been given in pawn.

The following are exempt from seizure: Consecrated vessels and things used for religious worship; family portraits; immovables declared by a donor or testator, or by law, to be exempt from seizure; and sums of money or objects given or bequeathed upon the condition of their being exempt from seizure; old age annuities created by the act of Parliament of Canada, 7 & 8 Edward VII, c. 5; alimentary allowances granted by a court, and sums of money or pensions given as alimony, even though the donor or testator has not expressly declared them to be exempt from seizure (they may, however, be seized for alimentary debts); pensions granted by financial and other institutions to their employees; pay and pensions of persons belonging to the army or to the navy; the salaries and fees of ministers, professors, tutors, school-teachers, and public officers; salaries of some public officers and employees of the Province, and salaries of city and town clerks, and of other municipal officers and employees and of city or town assessors in incorporated cities or towns, are seizable for one fifth of every monthly salary not exceeding one thousand dollars per annum; one fourth of every monthly salary exceeding one thousand dollars, but not exceeding two thousand dollars per annum, and one third of every monthly salary exceeding two thousand dollars per annum. Four fifths of the salary, remuneration, or earnings of members of the Corporation of Pilots for and below the harbor of Quebec for the pilotage of vessels are exempt from seizure. All other salaries and wages are exempt from seizure for four fifths when they do not exceed three dollars per day; three quarters when they exceed three dollars but do not exceed six dollars per day; and two thirds when they exceed six dollars per day. There are also special exemptions in favor of settlers and fishermen.

Liens. — See Chattel Mortgages.

Limitation. — See Prescription.

Married Women. — The law relating to the rights of married women is derived from the French law. Unless varied by antenuptial contract, passed before a notary public of the Province, community of property is established between consorts whose matrimonial domicile is in the Province of Quebec. Under this community system each consort retains his or her rights over the immovable property owned at the time of marriage; all movables then owned, and all movables and immovables acquired after marriage, enter into the community of property. The husband, as head of the community, administers and may dispose of the community property, but can bequeath only one half therein. Antenuptial contracts are usual in cases of Americans and others marrying abroad, but intending, at the time of marriage, to reside in the Province of Quebec, which thereby becomes their matrimonial domicile. The wife may will her half of the community property, and if she dies intestate, it passes to her heirs.

Separation of property, by which each consort retains his or her separate property, may be stipulated by the antenuptial contract, or may be obtained judicially for certain reasons.

Generally, a wife must be authorized in all legal transactions, either by her husband or by the superior court.

Dower. — Dower is either legal or conventional. Legal or customary dower consists in the usufruct for the wife and the ownership for the children of one half of the immovables which belong to the husband at the time of the marriage, or which accrue to him thereafter from his father, mother, or other ascendant relatives. It opens upon the death of the husband and must be registered. It may be excluded or modified in any way by antenuptial agreement. Conventional dower may be stipulated for in the provisions of the marriage contract.

Marriage and Minority. — A man cannot contract marriage before the full age of fourteen years, nor a woman before the full age of twelve.

Persons of either sex remain in minority until they attain the full age of twenty-one years.

Mechanics' Lien. — Laborers, workmen, builders, suppliers of materials, and architects have a right of preference over creditors, only upon the additional value given to the immovable by their work, provided they give notice and they register their claim against the property within thirty days after completion of work, and this privilege lasts for one year, unless suit is taken in interval, or a longer delay for payment has been stipulated in the contract.

Mortgages. — The only way in which property in the Province of Quebec can be charged is by way of hypothec, which differs from the English mortgage. Hypothec is a lien on immovables made liable for the fulfillment of an obligation, in virtue of which the creditor may cause them to be sold in the hands of whomsoever they may be, and have a preference upon the proceeds of the sale, in order of date, as fixed by the code. The legal title to the property remains in the mortgagor. The mortgagee is not entitled to foreclose the mortgage, but must sue on the principal obligation, obtain judgment, bring the property to judicial sale, and then rank upon the proceeds, which are distributed according to privileges, by a judgment of distribution. All mortgages or hypothecs affecting real estate in the Province of Quebec must be executed before a notary public of the Province, under his seal. If foreign parties desire to execute or accept hypothecs, powers of attorney, authorising some resident attorney to appear before a notary public and sign the deed, must be furnished. The formalities respecting hypothecs are sacramental. Trust mortgages, to secure bonds and debentures, must be executed before a provincial notary public, unless the local legislature has specially exempted them from this formality. As to mortgages on movable property, see Chattel Mortgage.

Notes and Bills of Exchange. — The laws on bills of exchange and notes are embodied with Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906, c. 119. They are founded on the English Bills of Exchange Act, and generally in all commercial matters, such as bills and notes, insurance, sales, partnerships, etc., the laws of the Province of Quebec are similar to those of England and the United States. Bills and notes which fall due on a legal holiday must be paid on the day after such holiday. The legal holidays are: New Year's Day, Epiphany, Ash Wednesday, Good Friday, Easter Monday, Victoria Day (May 24), Ascension Day, Dominion Day (July 1), All Saints' Day (Nov. 1), King's Birthday (June 3), Conception Day (Dec. 8), and Christmas Day. Also any day appointed as a Thanksgiving Day, and Labor Day (the first Monday in September).

Partnerships. — All partnerships must be registered in the office of a prothonotary of the superior court for the district and in the registry office for the county, of the place where the partnership business is carried on. Joint stock companies and persons carrying on business alone under a firm name must also be so registered. In all cases where a partnership or firm name or the name of another person is used by any person or persons it must be followed by the word, or an abbreviation of the word, registered. Default of registration within sixty days makes one liable to pay a penalty. Partnerships are general or limited. In limited partnerships the special partners are liable only for the amount they contribute, while general partners are jointly and severally liable for the debts of the partnership. The partnership property is liable for the debts of the partnership in preference to the private debts of the partners. If a partnership property is not sufficient to pay the liabilities of the partnership, then the private property of the partners is liable for the partnership's debts, but only after the private creditors of the partners have been satisfied.

Prescriptions. — Contracts entered into by debtors in fraud of their creditors cannot be set aside at the suit of the latter, unless the action is brought within a year from the discovery of the fraud. Judgments and mortgages are prescribed by thirty years. Thirty years' uninterrupted possession of immovables gives a valid title. Prescription of corporal movables takes place after the lapse of three years, reckoning from the loss of possession in favor of possessors in good faith. Ten years' uninterrupted possession of a property acquired in good faith under a translatory title prescribes the ownership thereof. Ten years prescribes actions for rescission of contracts for error, fraud, violence, or fear. Ten years also prescribes the responsibility of architects and contractors for the warranty of the work they have done. The lapse of five years prescribes notes (except bank notes) and bills of exchange, inland and foreign, and generally any claim of a commercial nature, reckoning from maturity; sales of movable effects, between non-traders, or between traders and non-traders; for price of labor or for the price of manual, professional, or intellectual work and materials furnished; surgeons', physicians', and dentists' accounts, dating from the time the service or medicine is supplied; for professional services of notaries and advocates, and for actions against notaries and advocates for the recovery of papers and titles confided to them, and for all claims for arrears of interest and rent. Arrears of municipal taxes are prescribed by three years, save if there is a special statute. The lapse of two years prescribes actions for seduction and certain classes of injuries and hire of services, and teachers' claims for tuition, board, and lodging. One year prescribes actions for slander or libel, reckoning from the day that it came to the knowledge of the party aggrieved; for wages of domestics or farm servants, merchants' clerks, and other employees engaged for periods less than a year; for hotel or boarding-house charges; and for damages resulting from bodily injuries caused in an accident or duel.

Prescriptions commenced according to the law of the Province are completed according to the same law, without prejudice to the right of invoking those acquired previously under a foreign law, or by a union of periods under both laws.

Proof of Claims. — See Actions.

Records. — At the chief place of each county, or in each registration division set apart by law or by proclamation of the governor, a registry office is established for the registration of all real rights affecting immovables situated within such county or registration division and of all other acts requiring registration. Registration gives effect to real rights and establishes their order of priority.

The following rights are exempt from the formality of registration: 1. The privilege of law costs; the expenses of tilling and sowing; assessments and rates; seigniorial dues and servants' wages, when the movable property has proved insufficient to pay them. 2. The original title by which lands were granted en fief en franc-alleu, or in free and common soccage. 3. Hypothecs in favor of the Crown, created in virtue of the statute 9 Vict. c. 62. 4. Seigniorial rights, and the rents constituted in their stead. 5. The claim of mutual insurance companies for the amounts which the parties insured are liable to contribute.

Reports. — The following are the judicial reports: Canada Supreme Court Reports, cited as S. C. R.; Quebec Official Reports, Superior Court, S. C., or C. S.; Quebec Official Reports, King's Bench, K. B., or B. R.; the Quebec Practice Reports, Q. P. R.; La Revue de Jurisprudence, R. J.; and La Revue Légale, R. L. n. s.

Service. — Service of summons must be made either upon the defendant in person or at his domicile or at his ordinary residence. In the absence of a regular domicile it may be made at his office or place of business, if he has one. In certain cases he may be ordered to appear through the newspapers, within one month from the last publication of the order. The judge may allow another mode of service upon cause shown.

Statutes. — The revision of the statutes of Canada was completed in 1906, and the revision of the statutes of Quebec was completed in 1909.

Stay of Execution. — See Judgments.

Tax Laws. — Incorporated companies are subject to a provincial tax of one tenth of one per cent. on the amount of paid-up capital, up to one million dollars, and fifty dollars on each one hundred thousand dollars or fraction of one hundred thousand dollars on all sums over one million dollars, but never less than fifty dollars in any event. Special rates are provided for banks, insurance companies, loan companies, navigation, telegraph, telephone, express, railway companies, and trust companies. Annual returns must be made before the first of May to the treasurer of the Province. Foreign and domestic companies employing only a portion of their capital in the Province of Quebec may be taxed upon a different proportion. An additional tax of fifty dollars on each place of business in the cities of Montreal and Quebec is provided for, and of twenty dollars for each place of business elsewhere in the Province. A tax of two cents on every one hundred dollars or fraction thereof of the par value is established on all transfers of shares, stock, debentures, etc. Foreign brokers must pay a semiannual license of five hundred dollars; their agent must pay two thousand dollars per license. A special war tax upon corporations and partnerships capitalized at fifty thousand dollars and over taxing generally profits exceeding seven per cent. per annum at twenty-five per cent. expired on December 31, 1917, but will probably be reenacted. An Act imposing an income tax upon all persons and corporations has become law and provides for taxes upon an ascending scale in respect of incomes affected.

Testimony. — See initial Remarks, at the end. The testimony of one competent witness is sufficient in all cases in which proof by testimony is admitted; and all persons are competent to give testimony except insane persons or those of weak understanding, those insensible to the obligation of an oath, or declared infamous by law. Husband and wife cannot be witnesses against each other, except when consorts are separated as to property and one of them as agent has administered property belonging to the other; then the consort who has so administered may be examined as a witness against his or her consort in relation to any fact connected with such administration. Relationship is no objection to giving evidence: it merely affects the witness's credibility.

Any party to a suit may give testimony on his own behalf in every matter, and in such case be examined, cross-examined, and treated as any other witness; he may also be subpoenaed and treated as a witness by the opposite party, and in such case his answers may be used as a commencement of proof in writing. The default by a party to tender his own evidence cannot be construed against him.

Proof may be made by testimony: 1. Of all facts concerning commercial matters. 2. In all matters in which the principal sum of money or value in question does not exceed fifty dollars. 3. In cases of necessary deposits, or deposits made by travelers in an inn, and like cases. 4. In proof of obligations arising from quasi contracts, offenses, and quasi offenses, and all other cases in which the party claiming could not procure proof in writing. 5. In cases in which the proof in writing has been lost, or is, without collusion, in the possession of the adverse party. 6. In all cases in which there is a commencement of proof in writing. 7. In all cases in which real property is held by permission of the proprietor without lease.

In all other matters proof must be made by writing. The testimony of the adverse party forms a sufficient commencement of proof, which avails in lieu of a writing, but even in commercial matters of over fifty dollars proof by testimony cannot be made of, 1. Any promise or agreement to renounce a prescription acquired; 2. Any ratification made by a minor become of age of his acts during minority; 3. Any recommendation to obtain credit, goods, etc., in favor of a third person; 4. In case of a sale, if goods not delivered or accepted; in these cases proof must be made by writings signed by defendant. The English statute of frauds is substantially reenacted under the Code.

Proof by writings is of three kinds: 1. Authentic writings properly executed before a notary public, which make proof of themselves. 2. Certified true copies of notarial originals which make proof of themselves. 3. Private writings which require proof. The following writings executed out of the Province make proof of their contents in our courts; 1. Exemplifications of any judgment or other judicial proceeding of any court out of the Province, under the seal of such court, or under the signature of the officer having the legal custody of the record of such judgment or other judicial proceeding. 2. Exemplifications of any will executed out of the Province under the seal of the court, wherein the original will is of record, or under the signature of the judge or other officer having the legal custody of such will, and the probate of such will under the seal of the court. 3. Certificates of marriage, baptism, or birth, and burial of persons out of the Province under the seal of the clergyman or public officer who officiated, or other officer having the custody thereof. 4. Notarial copies of any power of attorney executed out of the Province in the presence of one or more witnesses, and authenticated before the mayor of the place, or other public officer of the country where it bears date, the original whereof is deposited with the notary public in the Province granting the copy. 5. The copy taken by a prothonotary or clerk of a court in the Province of any power of attorney executed out of the Province in the presence of one or more witnesses, and authenticated before any mayor or other public officer of the country where it bears date, such copy being taken in a cause where a witness refuses to part with it, and being certified and deposited in the same cause. In case of denial of the contents of or signatures to any of the documents mentioned under this head, proof thereof may be obtained by issuing a commission at the instance and cost of the party desiring such proof.

Wills. — The law provides for the most absolute freedom of willing by persons of full age (twenty-one years) and sound intellect; the only restrictions being that the provisions of the will must not be contrary to public order or good morals. So great is this freedom that a testator can leave all his property to charity or even to a stranger, even though he have a family. Wills are of three kinds: the authentic or French will, made before two notaries, or a notary and two witnesses; the English will, made in presence of two witnesses; and the holograph will, which must be wholly written and signed by the testator, and requires neither notaries nor witnesses. The English and the holograph wills require to be probated, whilst the authentic will before a notary does not require probate and stands as complete proof. The English will must be signed at the end with the signature or mark of the testator, made by himself or by another person for him, in his presence and under his express direction, which signature is then or subsequently acknowledged by the testator as having been subscribed by him to his will then produced, in presence of at least two competent witnesses together, who attest and sign the will immediately, in the presence of the testator and at his request, and in presence of each other. Females of full age may serve as attesting witnesses to the English will, but not to the French will.

SASKATCHEWAN LAWS.

Messrs. Allan, Gordon & Gordon, of Regina.

Note: The basis of the law of Saskatchewan is the law of England relating to civil and criminal matters as the same existed on the 15th day of July, 1870. This basic law was conferred upon the North West Territories in 1880 with a court constituted to administer it. Both the law and the jurisdiction of the court were transmitted to Saskatchewan when in 1905 it was carved out of the area known as the North West Territories and constituted a Province of the Dominion with a legislature of its own in accordance with the Confederation Act of 1867. This basic law and the legislative changes in it by Dominion, Territorial, and Provincial enactments have all to be reckoned with in ascertaining the present law of Saskatchewan. Historical treatment of every question is the consequence of this system.

The Statutes of the Province were revised in 1909.

Actions. — 1. Jurisdiction. — Actions are commenced in most cases by writ of summons. The district court has jurisdiction in all personal actions in contract or tort where the damages claimed, or balance due does not exceed five hundred dollars, and in actions of replevin, where the value of the property claimed does not exceed five hundred dollars, with the following exceptions: The district court has no jurisdiction in actions (a) in which the title of land is brought in question; or (b) in which the validity of any devise or bequest is disputed; or (c) for malicious prosecution, malicious arrest, false imprisonment, libel and slander, criminal conversation, seduction, or breach of promise of marriage.

In the district court there is what is called the small debt procedure whereby claims for liquidated demand not exceeding one hundred dollars may be very economically disposed of.

The Court of King's Bench has jurisdiction in all cases, but if an action is brought in the Court of King's Bench, which could properly have been brought in the district court, the plaintiff suffers a set-off of costs.

The plaintiff has the first right to set the case down for trial, but the defendant can move to have the place of trial changed on certain grounds, the usual one being that of convenience to the witnesses.

2. Limitation of Actions. — Actions for the recovery of merchant's accounts, bills and notes and other simple contract debts must be commenced within six years; and Actions upon documents under seal must be commenced within twenty years next after the cause of action arose.

To recover any sum of money secured by mortgage, judgment, or lien, or otherwise charged upon land, action must be commenced within twelve years next after a present right to receive the same shall have accrued to some person sui juris.

In slander or penal actions where the penalty goes to the Crown, action must be brought within two years. Actions by or against executors or administrators of a deceased person for torts to or by him; qui tam actions, and actions for recovery of fire insurance, must be commenced within one year.

No right or title can be acquired by prescription to any light, easement, right in gross or profit à prendre, nor to any land which has been brought under the Land Titles Act.

Limitations of time start afresh in cases of any debt or liquidated demand by part satisfaction thereof, or an acknowledgment in writing.

A foreign judgment is of no more value than a simple contract debt.

3. Foreign Plaintiff. — A foreign plaintiff can bring an action in the same way as a resident plaintiff, but he may be required to give security for the defendant's costs. During the present war, an alien enemy has no legal status.

Administration. — Letters of administration of intestates and probate of wills are issued out of the surrogate court of the district in which the deceased resided at the time of his death, or in which he owned any property. The next of kin resident in the Province in their order of relation, are entitled to letters of administration, but in case no relative resides in the Province, or none who is willing to act, a trust company is usually appointed. There are a great many thoroughly sound trust companies which specialize in this work, and their fees for so doing are very reasonable. Those approved by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council are a preferred class and have special facilities and advantages.

Appeals. — Appeals from judgments of the district court, and from a single judge of the Court of King's Bench, are taken to the Court of Appeal which is composed of four judges. A further appeal can in certain cases be taken to the Supreme Court of Canada at Ottawa.

and sometimes to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in England which is the court of final resort.

Arbitration. — Parties who wish to settle their disputes by arbitration can do so by reference in writing under the provisions of the Arbitration Act, being chapter 70 of the Revised Statutes of Saskatchewan, 1909. The decision of the arbitrators may be made a rule of court and enforced as such.

Assignments. — 1. Assignment of Choses in Action. — Every debt and chose in action arising out of a contract may be assigned, subject of course to the restrictions or limitations which may appertain to the original debt or the original contract, and the assignee may bring an action thereon in his own name. Notice of the assignment is not necessary, but the assignee is liable to any set-off or equities which may intervene until notice is given. This act of course does not apply to negotiable instruments or instruments transferable by delivery.

2. Assignment for the Benefit of Creditors. — These assignments must be made to a trust company authorized to act as such assignee in the Province. Such an assignment covers all property of the debtor, the assignor, which is liable to be seized under execution and it supercedes all pending or semi-completed remedies against the debtor or his assignable estate. The unsecured creditors are paid rateably except that employees are entitled to a preference of three months' wages or salary. The assignment must be registered with the registration clerk of the judicial district in which the assignor resides within thirty days, or, if the assignor resides outside Saskatchewan, then in that district in which the principal part of the property assigned is situated. An assignment of this nature does not discharge the debtor from further liability, as there is no bankruptcy law in Canada.

3. Preferential Assignments will be set aside, and all assignments within sixty days next before the creditors trust assignment are presumed to be preferential.

Attachment. — 1. Of Debts. — Money owing to a debtor may be attached by garnishee before or after judgment. A garnishee summons is obtained upon filing the affidavit of the plaintiff or his agent who can swear positively to the facts, proving the debt, how it arose, and also that the proposed garnishee is indebted to the debtor. Where the debtor is a wage-earner, the affidavit must also state his employment. The sum of twenty-five dollars wages is exempt from garnishee proceedings save where debt is for board and lodging. The garnishee has twenty days within which to pay the money into court or file an appearance denying liability. Payment into court is a discharge of the indebtedness so far as the garnishee is concerned.

2. Of Personal Property. — Personal property may be attached after the commencement of the action for the recovery of a debt of fifty dollars or more. The writ of attachment is obtained upon the plaintiff filing his affidavit, or that of his agent, setting forth clearly and succinctly from what cause such debt arose and the amount of the same, and that he has good reason to believe (giving his reasons therefor) that the defendant is about to abscond or has absconded from Saskatchewan leaving personal property liable to seizure under execution for debt, or that the defendant has attempted to remove such personal property out of Saskatchewan, or to dispose of the same with intent to defraud his creditors, or that the defendant keeps concealed to avoid service of process, and in each case that the deponent believes without the benefit of the writ of attachment he will lose his debt or sustain damage. This affidavit must be corroborated by an affidavit of one other credible person.

If the debtor has absconded or is about to abscond, leaving no wife or family behind, he shall not be entitled to any exemptions.

The goods attached are usually held by the sheriff who executes the writ, until judgment is delivered in the action, but a writ of attachment may be set aside by a judge on satisfactory proof that the plaintiff had not reasonable cause for taking such proceedings.

Banks. — The incorporation of banks is entirely within the jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada, the act governing being chapter 29 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906. Only such corporations as are incorporated under this act are entitled to use the word "bank" or "bankers," and no other parties or corporations have the right to issue bank-notes. All banks are forbidden to lend money on the security of real estate or goods or chattels, but may take such security for past indebtedness or as collateral security.

Bills of Exchange. — The law in relation to this subject is codified and embodied in the Bills of Exchange Act, being chapter 119 of the Revised Statutes of the Dominion of Canada, 1906, which is virtually a verbatim reenactment of the Bills of Exchange Act of the United Kingdom. Three days of grace are allowed on all bills and notes other than those payable on demand, and in case of dishonor the indorser is released unless due notice of dishonor is given him. Since the declaration of war, a war tax of two cents must be attached to each note or draft.

Interest must be expressed at a certain rate per cent. per annum, and not per month, week, or day, otherwise only five per cent. per annum is collectible. In the absence of positive stipulation only interest at five per cent. per annum from the date of maturity can be collected.

Checks should be presented promptly at the bank upon which they are drawn, or the holder may lose recourse to the drawer.

Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgages. — Every sale, transfer, or mortgage of goods or chattels not accompanied by immediate delivery and followed by actual and visible change of possession of the goods or chattels sold or mortgaged, and every assignment by any retail merchant or trader of book debts or debts to be incurred, shall be in writing and shall be accompanied by an affidavit of the due execution thereof.

In the case of an absolute sale of the goods, or the assignment of book debts by any retail merchant, the writing must be accompanied by the affidavit of the buyer or one of several buyers, or the assignee, that the sale or assignment is bona fide for good consideration and not for the purpose of enabling the bargainee to hold the goods or accounts mentioned therein against the creditors of the seller or assignor.

In the case of a chattel mortgage, the writing must be accompanied by an affidavit of the mortgagee or one of several mortgagees, or the agent of the mortgagee duly authorized, stating that the mortgagor is justly and truly indebted to the mortgagee in the sum mentioned in the mortgage; that it was executed in good faith and for the express purpose of securing payment of the money, and not for the purpose of protecting the goods and chattels against the creditors of the mortgagor, or of preventing the creditors of such mortgagor from obtaining payment of any claim against him.

Every such mortgage operates from the day and time of filing.

In the case of a company mortgagee having its head office outside the Province, the affidavit may be taken by an officer of the company within the Province who swears that he is aware of all the circumstances, and has a personal knowledge of the facts.

A chattel mortgage may be given to secure future advances or to secure a mortgagee against the indorsement of bills or notes, but future advances must not extend over a period longer than two years. Growing or future crops may be mortgaged only to secure the price of seed grain, meat, groceries, clothing, or binder twine, but a seed-grain mortgage shall have preference over a mortgage given for any other necessities above referred to. The crop to be grown from seed obtained by the giving of seed-grain mortgage must be grown within one year.

Bills of sale and chattel mortgages and assignment of book debts or accounts by retail merchants must be registered within thirty days. Such instruments are valid for two years, but a renewal may be filed within thirty days before the expiration of such two years, and within thirty days before the expiration of each year thereafter.

Bills of sale, chattel mortgages, and assignments of book debts must be carefully drawn in strict compliance with the act, otherwise they are liable to be set aside.

Bulk Sales. — See Contracts, sec. 2.

Company Law. — Incorporated companies are formed and governed partly by Dominion and partly by Provincial enactment. The Dominion Act is Revised Statutes, 1906, ch. 79, and the Provincial Act is 1915, ch. 14.

All companies having gain for their object are required to take out a license for the exercise of civil rights in the Province, and foreign companies are prohibited from carrying on business without such license; while companies incorporated outside the Province must, on taking out the license, have an office and a representative in the Province whereat and whereon legal documents may be served. But the taking of orders by travelers for goods, wares, and merchandise, to be subsequently imported into Saskatchewan to fill such orders, or the buying or selling of such goods, wares, and merchandise by correspondence, if the company has no resident agent or representative and no warehouse, office, or place of business in Saskatchewan, shall not be deemed to be carrying on business so as to render the companies acting in this way liable to take out the Provincial license referred to. Sales of shares, debentures, etc., except those exempted, are prohibited until the local government board has sanctioned them.

Conditional Sales. — Wherever on a sale or bailment of goods of the value of fifteen dollars or over, the right of property or right of possession in whole or in part remains in the seller or bailor, notwithstanding that the actual possession passes to the buyer or bailee, the seller or bailor shall not be permitted to set up such right of property or right of possession against any assignee of, or purchaser or mortgagee from, the buyer or bailee of such goods in good faith for valuable consideration, or as against judgments, executions, or attachments against the purchaser or bailee, unless such sale or bailment is in writing, signed by the parties and duly registered within thirty days from the time of the actual delivery of such goods; and such writing shall contain such a description of the goods, that the same may be readily identifiable thereby.

The agreement must also be accompanied by an affidavit showing that the agreement was entered into bona fide and not for the purpose of protecting the goods against the creditors of the buyer or bailee. The act does not apply to manufactured goods or chattels which have the manufacturer's or vendor's name written, printed, or stamped thereon, or plainly attached thereto by plate or similar device, if the manufacturer or vendor, keeps an office in Saskatchewan where information may be procured concerning the sale or bailment, and provided such manufacturer or vendor, or his agent, gives required information.

A seller repossessing such goods must hold the same for twenty days before reselling the same, and must give five days' notice of the intended sale to the original buyer or his successor in interest.

Contracts. 1. Sale of goods. — The law respecting the sale of goods is codified in the Sale of Goods Act, being chapter 147 of the Revised Statutes of Saskatchewan, 1909. No contract for the sale of goods of the value of fifty dollars or upwards is enforceable by action unless the buyer accepts part of the goods so sold and actually receives same, or gives something in earnest to bind the contract, or in part payment, or unless some note or memorandum in writing of the contract is made and signed by the party to be charged, or his agent. This applies to goods intended to be delivered at some future time as well as goods ready for delivery. Any act which recognises a preëxisting contract of sale, amounts to acceptance within this law.

2. Sales in bulk. — Sales in bulk are governed by chapter 34 of the Statutes of Saskatchewan, 1913, known as the Bulk Sales Act. This act only applies to sales, barter, and exchanges by (a) traders and merchants; (b) commission merchants; and (c) manufacturers, but does not apply to sales by executors, administrators, receivers, assignees for the benefit of creditors, or any public official acting under judicial process, or traders or merchants selling exclusively by wholesale.

This act makes it the duty of every person who shall purchase any stock of goods, wares, or merchandise or fixtures in bulk for cash or on credit, to obtain from the trader, before paying him any part of the purchase price or giving any notes or security for the same, a written statement verified by statutory declaration setting forth the names and addresses of all the creditors of the vendor, together with the amount of the indebtedness or liability due or accruing due to them. And it is the duty of such vendor to supply such statement.

Upon such sale in bulk, such one of the following provisions as is applicable to the case, shall be complied with: (1) The vendor shall produce and deliver to the purchaser a written waiver of the provisions of the act from his creditors, representing not less than sixty per cent. in number and amount of the claims as shown by his said written statement. (2) In case of a sale, the purchaser shall pay the whole of his purchase-price, and deliver any and all promissory note or notes, and convey any property real or personal given as part of the purchase price, to a trust company empowered to act as assignee under the Assignments Act, for distribution pro rata among the creditors of the vendor, subject to any preference provided by law or previous contract. Such money shall be distributed pro rata among the unsecured creditors, and such money is not liable to attachment by garnishee proceedings or otherwise. If the purchase price is less than the total indebtedness, the purchaser must obtain the written consent to such sale of creditors representing at least sixty per cent. in number and amount. (3) In the case of barter or exchange, the purchaser shall obtain the written consent thereto of creditors representing at least sixty per cent. in number and amount of claims, as shown by said written statement and shall transfer to such trust company the property bargained or exchanged for the vendor's stock, in trust to be disposed of or otherwise dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the Assignments for Creditors Act, and the proceeds distributed pro rata among the creditors.

All sales made in violation of this act are void as against creditors of the vendor unless all the creditors of the vendor are paid in full, but notwithstanding that the sale is void, the purchaser still remains indebted to the vendor in the full amount of the purchase price so that such indebtedness may be attached by the creditors of the vendor, and in case the vendor has been paid he will be personally liable to account to the creditors for all moneys or securities received by him.

3. Sales of land. — All contracts for the sale of land or any interest therein are required to be in writing, otherwise they are not enforceable. The law on this subject is the Imperial Statute of Frauds.

Divorce. — There are no divorce courts in Saskatchewan, and it has been the practice so far to obtain divorces by special act of the Dominion Parliament.

Dower. — A wife has no right to dower, properly so called, in the Province of Saskatchewan, but a husband cannot transfer, sell, lease, or convey any interest in his homestead, being the land exempt from seizure under the Exemptions Act, unless such transfer or other document is signed by his wife whose signature and free will in the matter must be authenticated in a strict and prescribed manner so as to avoid duress.

A wife may file a caveat under the Land Titles Act to protect her interests in the homestead.

On the death of her husband who leaves a will by the terms of which she would receive less than if he had died intestate, the widow may apply to the supreme court for relief, and if she has been guilty of no misconduct, the judge may make an order allowing to her a portion of the estate which would be equal to what would have gone to her had her husband died intestate; that is, equivalent to one third of his estate after payment of all debts.

A married woman has all rights in Saskatchewan as if she were a feme sole. She can sue and be sued without joining her husband. A husband is liable for the ante-nuptial debts of his wife to the extent of his wife's assets which have come into his hands since marriage.

A married woman, when deserted without cause, may obtain an order from a magistrate for payment of a certain sum per week.

Executions. — Executions are good for two years, but may be renewed for a further period of two years from time to time until the judgment expires at the end of twelve years. Execution against lands can only be issued when the amount due on the judgment is fifty dollars or more, and if the execution is to be registered in more than one land registration district, instructions to do so must be given to the sheriff, as the land registration districts and judicial districts are not yet coterminous.

The lands of the judgment debtor may be seized and sold after the expiration of one year from the date of delivery of the writ to the sheriff, and in case the land of the debtor is exempt under the Exemption Law, a memorandum of the execution is indorsed on the title and is a latent charge against the land; that is, the land can be sold at any time that it ceases to be exempt under the Exemptions Act.

There is no priority among execution creditors.

In the case of an absolute sale of the goods, or the assignment of book debts by any retail merchant, the writing must be accompanied by the affidavit of the buyer or one of several buyers, or the assignee, that the sale or assignment is bona fide for good consideration and not for the purpose of enabling the bargainee to hold the goods or accounts mentioned therein against the creditors of the seller or assignor.

In the case of a chattel mortgage, the writing must be accompanied by an affidavit of the mortgagee or one of several mortgagees, or the agent of the mortgagee duly authorised, stating that the mortgagor is justly and truly indebted to the mortgagee in the sum mentioned in the mortgage; that it was executed in good faith and for the express purpose of securing payment of the money, and not for the purpose of protecting the goods and chattels against the creditors of the mortgagor, or of preventing the creditors of such mortgagor from obtaining payment of any claim against him.

Every such mortgage operates from the day and time of filing.

In the case of a company mortgagee having its head office outside the Province, the affidavit may be taken by an officer of the company within the Province who swears that he is aware of all the circumstances, and has a personal knowledge of the facts.

A chattel mortgage may be given to secure future advances or to secure a mortgage against the indorsement of bills or notes, but future advances must not extend over a period longer than two years. Growing or future crops may be mortgaged only to secure the price of seed grain, meat, groceries, clothing, or binder twine, but a seed-grain mortgage shall have preference over a mortgage given for any other necessities above referred to. The crop to be grown from seed obtained by the giving of seed-grain mortgage must be grown within one year.

Bills of sale and chattel mortgages and assignment of book debts or accounts by retail merchants must be registered within thirty days. Such instruments are valid for two years, but a renewal may be filed within thirty days before the expiration of such two years, and within thirty days before the expiration of each year thereafter.

Bills of sale, chattel mortgages, and assignments of book debts must be carefully drawn in strict compliance with the act, otherwise they are liable to be set aside.

Bulk Sales. — See Contracts, sec. 2.

Company Law. — Incorporated companies are formed and governed partly by Dominion and partly by Provincial enactment. The Dominion Act is Revised Statutes, 1906, ch. 79, and the Provincial Act is 1915, ch. 14.

All companies having gain for their object are required to take out a license for the exercise of civil rights in the Province, and foreign companies are prohibited from carrying on business without such license; while companies incorporated outside the Province must, on taking out the license, have an office and a representative in the Province whereat and whereon legal documents may be served. But the taking of orders by travelers for goods, wares, and merchandise, to be subsequently imported into Saskatchewan to fill such orders, or the buying or selling of such goods, wares, and merchandise by correspondence, if the company has no resident agent or representative and no warehouse, office, or place of business in Saskatchewan, shall not be deemed to be carrying on business so as to render the companies acting in this way liable to take out the Provincial license referred to. Sales of shares, debentures, etc., except those exempted, are prohibited until the local government board has sanctioned them.

Conditional Sales. — Wherever on a sale or bailment of goods of the value of fifteen dollars or over, the right of property or right of possession in whole or in part remains in the seller or bailor, notwithstanding that the actual possession passes to the buyer or bailee, the seller or bailor shall not be permitted to set up such right of property or right of possession against any assignee of, or purchaser or mortgagee from, the buyer or bailee of such goods in good faith for valuable consideration, or as against judgments, executions, or attachments against the purchaser or bailee, unless such sale or bailment is in writing, signed by the parties and duly registered within thirty days from the time of the actual delivery of such goods; and such writing shall contain such a description of the goods, that the same may be readily identifiable thereby.

The agreement must also be accompanied by an affidavit showing that the agreement was entered into bona fide and not for the purpose of protecting the goods against the creditors of the buyer or bailee. The act does not apply to manufactured goods or chattels which have the manufacturer's or vendor's name written, printed, or stamped thereon, or plainly attached thereto by plate or similar device, if the manufacturer or vendor, keeps an office in Saskatchewan where information may be procured concerning the sale or bailment, and provided such manufacturer or vendor, or his agent, gives required information.

A seller repossessing such goods must hold the same for twenty days before reselling the same, and must give five days' notice of the intended sale to the original buyer or his successor in interest.

Contracts. 1. Sale of goods. — The law respecting the sale of goods is codified in the Sale of Goods Act, being chapter 147 of the Revised Statutes of Saskatchewan, 1909. No contract for the sale of goods of the value of fifty dollars or upwards is enforceable by action unless the buyer accepts part of the goods so sold and actually receives same, or gives something in earnest to bind the contract, or in part payment, or unless some note or memorandum in writing of the contract is made and signed by the party to be charged, or his agent. This applies to goods intended to be delivered at some future time as well as goods ready for delivery. Any act which recognises a preëxisting contract of sale, amounts to acceptance within this law.

2. Sales in bulk. — Sales in bulk are governed by chapter 34 of the Statutes of Saskatchewan, 1913, known as the Bulk Sales Act. This act only applies to sales, barter, and exchanges by (a) traders and merchants; (b) commission merchants; and (c) manufacturers. but does not apply to sales by executors, administrators, receivers, assignees for the benefit of creditors, or any public official acting under judicial process, or traders or merchants selling exclusively by wholesale.

This act makes it the duty of every person who shall purchase any stock of goods, wares, or merchandise or fixtures in bulk for cash or on credit, to obtain from the trader, before paying him any part of the purchase price or giving any notes or security for the same, a written statement verified by statutory declaration setting forth the names and addresses of all the creditors of the vendor, together with the amount of the indebtedness or liability due or accruing due to them. And it is the duty of such vendor to supply such statement.

Upon such sale in bulk, such one of the following provisions as is applicable to the case, shall be complied with: (1) The vendor shall produce and deliver to the purchaser a written waiver of the provisions of the act from his creditors, representing not less than sixty per cent. in number and amount of the claims as shown by his said written statement. (2) In case of a sale, the purchaser shall pay the whole of his purchase-price, and deliver any and all promissory note or notes, and convey any property real or personal given as part of the purchase price, to a trust company empowered to act as assignee under the Assignments Act, for distribution pro rata among the creditors of the vendor, subject to any preference provided by law or previous contract. Such money shall be distributed pro rata among the unsecured creditors, and such money is not liable to attachment by garnishee proceedings or otherwise. If the purchase price is less than the total indebtedness, the purchaser must obtain the written consent to such sale of creditors representing at least sixty per cent. in number and amount. (3) In the case of barter or exchange, the purchaser shall obtain the written consent thereto of creditors representing at least sixty per cent. in number and amount of claims, as shown by said written statement and shall transfer to such trust company the property bargained or exchanged for the vendor's stock, in trust to be disposed of or otherwise dealt with in accordance with the provisions of the Assignments for Creditors Act, and the proceeds distributed pro rata among the creditors.

All sales made in violation of this act are void as against creditors of the vendor unless all the creditors of the vendor are paid in full, but notwithstanding that the sale is void, the purchaser still remains indebted to the vendor in the full amount of the purchase price so that such indebtedness may be attached by the creditors of the vendor, and in case the vendor has been paid he will be personally liable to account to the creditors for all moneys or securities received by him.

3. Sales of land. — All contracts for the sale of land or any interest therein are required to be in writing, otherwise they are not enforceable. The law on this subject is the Imperial Statute of Frauds.

Divorce. — There are no divorce courts in Saskatchewan, and it has been the practice so far to obtain divorces by special act of the Dominion Parliament.

Dower. — A wife has no right to dower, properly so called, in the Province of Saskatchewan, but a husband cannot transfer, sell, lease, or convey any interest in his homestead, being the land exempt from seizure under the Exemptions Act, unless such transfer or other document is signed by his wife whose signature and free will in the matter must be authenticated in a strict and prescribed manner so as to avoid duress.

A wife may file a caveat under the Land Titles Act to protect her interests in the homestead.

On the death of her husband who leaves a will by the terms of which she would receive less than if he had died intestate, the widow may apply to the supreme court for relief, and if she has been guilty of no misconduct, the judge may make an order allowing to her a portion of the estate which would be equal to what would have gone to her had her husband died intestate; that is, equivalent to one third of his estate after payment of all debts.

A married woman has all rights in Saskatchewan as if she were a feme sole. She can sue and be sued without joining her husband. A husband is liable for the ante-nuptial debts of his wife to the extent of his wife's assets which have come into his hands since marriage.

A married woman, when deserted without cause, may obtain an order from a magistrate for payment of a certain sum per week.

Executions. — Executions are good for two years, but may be renewed for a further period of two years from time to time until the judgment expires at the end of twelve years. Execution against lands can only be issued when the amount due on the judgment is fifty dollars or more, and if the execution is to be registered in more than one land registration district, instructions to do so must be given to the sheriff, as the land registration districts and judicial districts are not yet coterminous.

The lands of the judgment debtor may be seized and sold after the expiration of one year from the date of delivery of the writ to the sheriff, and in case the land of the debtor is exempt under the Exemption Law, a memorandum of the execution is indorsed on the title and is a latent charge against the land; that is, the land can be sold at any time that it ceases to be exempt under the Exemptions Act.

There is no priority among execution creditors.

Exemptions. — 1. From execution: — (1) All necessary and ordinary clothing of the execution debtor and his family; (2) his furniture and household furnishings, dairy utensils, swine and poultry to the extent of five hundred dollars; (3) the necessary food for his family during six months, which may include grain and flour, vegetables and meat either prepared for use or on foot; (4) four oxen, horses, or mules or any four of them; (5) six cows, six sheep, three pigs, and fifty domestic fowls, besides the animals the execution debtor may have chosen to keep for food purposes, and food for the same for the months of November, December, January, February, March, and April, or for such six months or portions thereof as may follow the date of seizure, provided such seizure is made between the 1st of August and the 30th of April next ensuing; (6) the harness necessary for four animals; one wagon or two carts, one mower or cradle or scythe, one breaking-plough, or cross-plough; one set of harrows, one horse rake, one sewing machine, one reaper or binder, one set of sleighs, one seed drill; (7) the books of a professional man; (8) the tools and necessary implements, to the extent of two hundred dollars, used by the execution debtor in the practice of his trade or profession; (9) seed-grain sufficient to seed all his land under cultivation, not exceeding eighty acres, at the rate of two bushels per acre. Debtor to have choice of seed and fourteen bushels of potatoes; (10) the homestead, provided the same be not more than one hundred and sixty acres, and in case it is more, the surplus may be sold subject to any lien or encumbrance thereon; (11) the house and buildings occupied by the execution debtor and also the lot or lots on which the same are situated according to the registered plan of the same, to the extent of fifteen hundred dollars. The execution debtor shall be entitled to choose from the greater quantity of the same kind or qualities, which are exempt from seizure. The article forming the subject-matter of the judgment, or the price of which forms the subject-matter, is never exempt unless it is for food, clothing, or bedding of the execution debtor and his family.

On the death of the execution debtor his property exempt from seizure shall be exempt from execution against his personal representative if the property is in the use and occupation of the widow and children, or widow or children of the deceased, and is necessary for the maintenance and support of the said widow or children.

There is no exemption for an absconding debtor, or against a judgment for alimony.

2. From distress: — Distress for rent is limited to the goods and chattels of the tenant or person who is liable for the rent, or the property of the tenant's wife, husband, children and other relations living on the premises as a member of the tenant's family. Goods held under execution against the tenant may be distrained upon.

Interest. — Interest throughout the Dominion of Canada is governed by the Dominion Interest Act, being chapter 120 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906. Ordinarily no interest is payable unless it is stipulated for. On negotiable instruments, it is payable as stated under Bills of Exchange Act. On the trial or assessment of damages by virtue of the Saskatchewan Judicature Act, interest may be allowed where a certain sum of money is payable by virtue of a written instrument at a certain time, or from the date of notice in writing to the debtor that interest will be charged.

3. Under chattel mortgages items 4 and 5, referred to under the heading From execution, above.

Limitation of Actions. — See Actions.

Married Women. — See Dower.

Mechanics' Liens. — Seed grain liens, and a variety of other liens and incumbrances are registerable against the estate of the owner, or the interest of other beneficiaries, in land. Mechanics' liens may be for work done or for material supplied for works of construction or improvement on the property charged. They require the usual elements of a contractual relationship — privity, consent, and concurrence. All these liens, having their force by virtue of statutory enactment, must strictly conform to the statutory requirements as to time, registration, authentication, etc.

Real Property. — Nearly all land in the Province of Saskatchewan is now under the Torrens System, which was introduced into the North West Territories on July 1, 1887, and is now in force by virtue of the Land Titles Act, 1917, being chapter 18 of the Statutes of Saskatchewan, 1917 (2d Session).

All titles to land and all interests therein, except leasehold interests for a period of three years or less, are issued by the Provincial Government. Certificates of title are issued in duplicate, one being kept on file in the Land Titles Office for the land registration district in which the land is situate, and the other being held by the owner. This certificate of title, or the duplicate, shall, except in case of fraud where the owner has participated, or as against a person claiming under a prior certificate of title (that is, in case two titles are issued for the same land), be conclusive evidence in all courts, as against all persons whomsoever, that the person named therein is entitled to the land included in the same for the estate or interest therein specified, subject to the exceptions and reservations implied under the provisions of the Land Titles Act. These implied conditions or reservations, which are not indorsed upon the title, are as follows: (1) All subsisting reservations or exceptions contained in the original grant of the land from the Crown, which original grant is always on file with the registrar issuing the certificate of title; (2) all unpaid taxes and the rights of purchasers at tax sales; (3) any public highway or right of way, or other public easement howsoever created upon, over, or in respect of the land; (4) any subsisting lease or agreement for lease for a period not exceeding three years where there is actual occupation of the land under the same; (5) any decrees, orders, or executions against or affecting the interest of the owner of the land which have been filed and maintained in force against the owner; (6) any right of expropriation which may by statute or ordinance be vested in any person, body corporate, or His Majesty; (7) any right of way or other easement granted or acquired under the provisions of the Irrigation Act; liens in favor of His Majesty for advances of seed grain, fodder and other goods by way of relief; the title of any person adversely in actual occupation of the land and rightly entitled to it at the time the land was brought under the Act. • There is also an implied covenant on the part of the owner of the land, that he will pay to the mortgagee the amount of any mortgage or incumbrance upon the title.

After a certificate of title has been granted, no instrument shall be effectual to pass any interest therein or render the land liable as security for the payment of money as against any bona fide transferee or encumbrancee of the land under this act, unless such instrument is executed in accordance with the provisions of the act and is duly registered, excepting a household interest not exceeding three years.

When any interest, estate, or easement in any land is intended to be granted or conveyed, the owner may execute a transfer in the form provided by the act.

All forms for transfer, mortgage, leases for over three years, and other dealings with real estate are prescribed by the act and must be strictly conformed to as well as the prescribed affidavits of verification. Registration is a sine qua non to validity.

When the land dealt with is the owner's homestead, if he is an unmarried man, the transfer must be accompanied by an affidavit that he is not married. If it is not his homestead, it must be accompanied by an affidavit to this effect. Where the land is the homestead of the owner who has a wife, it must be signed by the wife and accompanied by a declaration of the wife in the prescribed form.

An affidavit of value must also be endorsed.

Caveats. — Any person claiming to be interested in any land either on legal or equitable grounds, may file a caveat in the statutory form, and any one acquiring the land takes the same subject to all rights of such caveator.

On the registration of any transfer, a fee of one fifth of one per cent. of the increased value of the land transferred, if such increased value amounts to or is less than five thousand dollars, and one tenth of one per cent. of the additional value when such increased value exceeds five thousand dollars, is paid into the assurance fund, and in certain cases where the owner has been deprived of the land, or suffered any loss through neglect or error of registrars of the land titles offices, he is entitled to compensation from this fund.

The duplicate certificate of title must be produced when a party wishes to transfer or charge his land, and when the land is once charged by mortgage or encumbrance, the duplicate certificate of title is held in the land titles office.

Land devolves in Saskatchewan to the personal representative of the deceased, and is distributed as if it were personal estate.

Wills. — Every person sui juris can make a will, and the power of disposal of property is absolute except that if a widow and mother of living issue is left by will less than she would be entitled to by law if her husband had died intestate, she may within six months after his death claim the equivalent of one third of his estate. Every will must be in writing and signed at the foot or end thereof by the testator, or some other person in his presence by his direction, and such signature shall be made or acknowledged by the testator in the presence of two witnesses, present at the same time who shall subscribe the will in the presence of the testator and of each other. A will is revoked by marriage. Executors, legatees, and devisees are competent witnesses, but except in the case of a charge for the payment of a debt or legacy, a devise to the witness or the husband or wife of the witness is void.

Workmen's Compensation. — The law of workmen is governed partly by the common law and the law of England as it existed on the 15th day of July, 1870, and partly by the Workmen's Compensation Act of Saskatchewan, being chapter 9 of the Statutes of 1910-11. In some respects the common law is wider in scope than the statutory enactment; and many are the cases where injured workmen, finding themselves debarred by the statute obtain ample redress under the common law. The rights are, therefore, not antagonistic but supplementary. The limit of compensation under the Provincial Statute is two thousand dollars and the act applies to workmen employed in or about a railway, factory, mine, quarry, or engineering work, or in or about any building which is either being constructed, repaired, or demolished.

A workman is defined as every person who is engaged in any employment to which the act refers, but does not include any person employed otherwise than by way of manual labor whose remuneration exceeds eighteen hundred dollars per year.

Action to recover compensation must be brought in the district court within six months from the occurrence of the accident causing the injury, or, in case of death, within six months from the time of death. The employer is liable to pay compensation whether or not the injury or death resulted from the negligence of any person engaged in common employment with the injured employee, or whether or not the injury was caused by the negligence of the employer or of any person in his service, or by reason of any defect in the plant, or whether or not the workman contributed to or was the sole cause of the injury or death by reason of his own negligence, or whether or not the injury or death resulted from a risk arising out of or incidental to the nature of the employment and which the workman expressly or impliedly assumed.

Contracts to waive the workman's rights under this act are void.

LAWS OF CUBA.

Prepared by

Raoul E. Desvernine, Esq.,

with Messrs. Hornblower, Miller, Garrison & Potter, New York City.

Note. — The laws of Cuba are originally found in the laws of Spain, the Spanish Government by royal decree having made its codes applicable to its colonial possessions, Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines. The Spanish Codes, as thus promulgated in the said colonies, still remain the law of Cuba, except as modified by the United States Government of Intervention, and the legislation of the Republic of Cuba, which, however, have not fundamentally changed the principles of the Spanish law.

The present law of Cuba is all codified, except the Administrative Law. There is a Civil Code, a Code of Commerce, and a Penal Code; one of Civil Procedure, another of Criminal Procedure, and one special law together with its regulations which refers to the procedure called "Contencioso Administrativo," by means of which an individual may attack before the tribunals of justice resolutions made by administrative authorities, and which also provides the means to resolve conflicts that may arise between two administrative functionaries or entities when one is not legally subordinate to the other. Besides the aforesaid Codes, there is a Mortgage Law with its regulations, which provides for all cases referring to real property and burdens upon it.

Judicial decisions (sentencias) in Cuba, collectively called "jurisprudencia," are not binding precedents, although they possess great persuasive force. They were formerly, under the law of Spain, a direct source of law, but the present Civil Code (article 6), in summing up the recognized sources of law, omits judicial decisions. In default of express legislation, primarily, local customs and, secondarily, general principles of law govern. Decisions interpreting the Codes and Statutes are said to be strictly adhered to. Only the reports of the Supreme Court (Tribunal Supremo) are published and these only constitute jurisprudencia.

Constitution. — The Constitution of the Republic of Cuba was promulgated by Order No. 181 of the General Headquarters, Department of Cuba, United States Government of Intervention, on May 20, 1902, after having been framed and adopted by a convention specially convened for that purpose during the first intervention of the United States in Cuban affairs, and it bears the signature of General Leonard Wood, at that time Military Governor of that country. In addition to providing for a republican form of government consisting of an executive, legislative (divided into a Senate and Assembly of Representatives), and a judicial branch, the form and machinery of which are specifically defined, it contains all those provisions commonly referred to in the Constitution of the United States as the Bill of Rights, to wit: equality of all citizens before the law; a prohibition against retroactive laws, except penal laws, when they are favorable to the accused, and a prohibition against the impairment of the obligation of contract by the legislative or executive powers; provisions for the allowance of the writ of habeas corpus; inviolability of domicile; freedom of speech and press, and the profession of religious faiths; right of peaceful assembly; and provisions providing that no one shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and that no one can be compelled to testify against himself, consort, or near relative.

The Constitution of the Republic of Cuba contains a most important amendment, commonly referred to as the "Platt Amendment," by virtue of its being an amendment to the Army Appropriation Bill of 1901 of the United States and by virtue of its incorporation into the Constitution of Cuba as a constitutional amendment. Its terms were also made the subject of a treaty between the two countries on June 12, 1901. By the terms of this amendment, Cuba is precluded from entering into any treaty with a foreign power which may endanger its independence, and it cannot contract a debt for which the current revenue will not suffice. And in addition, Cuba conceded therein to the United States the right of intervention to preserve Cuban independence and to maintain a government "adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty." Personal and property rights in Cuba, of both natives and foreigners, are thus guaranteed by and are under the protection of both the United States and the Cuban Governments.

Administrators. — See Decedents' Estates: Administrators.

Affidavits and Acknowledgments. — Affidavits and acknowledgments in the form and as used in the United States are without any probative force in legal proceedings in Cuba. A formal declaration before a notary called "Acta Notarial" has a legal effect similar to an affidavit. Documents which are executed without the Republic of Cuba, if executed in conformity with the law of their place of execution, are admissible in the Cuban courts. Such documents should always be recorded and protocolized in Cuba. To protocolize a document, executed in the United States have the same executed before a notary public; obtain a certificate from the secretary of state or county clerk, certifying to the qualifications of the notary; have the same legalized by a Cuban consular agent, and file the same with a notary in Cuba, who will spread the same upon his protocol.

Aliens (extranjeros). — The Constitution, after defining citizens as being those by birth and naturalisation, provides that all aliens residing in the territory of the Republic shall be considered on an equal footing with citizens with respect to their persons and property, and that they shall be entitled to the equal protection of the laws, including the right of redress and appeal to the national courts. There is absolutely no limitation with respect to aliens in the enjoyment of civil rights.

Corporations organized under the laws of and domiciled in some foreign country will only have such rights in Cuba as are established by treaties with the country of their respective domiciles or special laws (Civil Code, art. 28); but article 15 of the Code of Commerce permits all foreigners and foreign corporations to transact business in Cuba, provided they comply with the provisions of said Code, become legalized or protocolized in the Republic, submit themselves to the jurisdiction of the national courts and designate and appoint a resident representative.

According to article 533 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Ley de Enjuiciamiento Civil), an alien plaintiff in a suit may be compelled to give security for costs with the formalities prescribed by the law of the alien's country in the cases in which Cubans may be compelled to give security when they are plaintiffs in the country of the foreigner. Therefore a foreigner in starting suit, not when he answers a demand or defends an action, is bound to guarantee the performance of all the obligations which may be the consequence of the suit he started.

Foreigners and foreign corporations may exploit, as they actually do, all the mines and railways of Cuba.

Corporations which have their domicile in Cuba, although organized by foreigners, are considered as domestic Cuban corporations. Foreigners cannot own ships of Cuban registry and flying the Cuban flag, which right only exists in citizens, but Cuban corporations may own and operate them, no matter what the nationality of the members of the corporation might be.

Arbitrations. — See Compromise and Arbitration.

Attachments (embargos). — Attachments are either preventative or definitive, the former being allowed by a judge of first instance, when security for the payment of a debt of over three hundred dollars is required, the latter being allowed by a municipal judge.

In order that a writ of attachment may be issued, the concurrence of the following requisites is necessary: (1) proof of existence of debt; (2) that the debtor, against whom the writ is sought is either (a) a foreigner; or (b) a citizen who has no domicile, real property, or agricultural, industrial or mercantile business in the jurisdiction; or (c) having said qualifications, has disappeared from his domicile or business establishment without leaving a person in charge, and if a person has been left in charge, that such person does not know the whereabouts of the person against whom the suit is brought; or (d) secretes himself or that there is reasonable ground to believe that he may secrete himself, or conceal or impair his property to the prejudice of his creditors. In all such cases a writ of preventative attachment can be issued at the request of a merchant when the action is brought against one who is or has been a merchant or manufacturer, and when the debt proceeds from mercantile or commercial transactions and the claim consists in the payment of a certain amount of money in cash. In this case, it is not necessary to produce proof of existence of debt, as it is sufficient that the applicant for the writ swear that the aforesaid requisites are true and that the amount of the complaint has not been paid. In order to obtain this kind of attachment, the applicant must give a bond for an amount not greater than the sum he claims and one third more. Such writs of attachment cannot be issued except for personal debts owing to the plaintiff, and not for debts which have been assigned to him by another person. The attached property shall remain in the possession of the debtor as a deposit, and the debtor who disposes, converts to his own use, impairs or damages it, so that the adequacy of the security is impaired, shall be liable, under article 406 of the Penal Code, for the crime of conversion.

Within twenty days after the attachment, the applicant must request its ratification and move for its confirmation and file his complaint, and for failure so to do, the attachment may be vacated as of right and the person who obtained the writ, shall be liable for the damages caused thereby.

Attachment in Execution Proceedings. — After obtaining a judgment directing the payment of a certain sum of money, and the judgment debtor fails to pay and satisfy same within a reasonable time after a demand made, the judgment creditor may attach a sufficient amount of the judgment debtor's property to afford him security and may sell such attached property at public auction to satisfy his judgment. (See Judgment's, Execution of.) An attachment upon the property of a debtor may be made at the time of the institution of an executive action. (Executive action is the name applied to a suit, the object of which is to secure payment of a liquidated debt which is evidenced by a public instrument or a private instrument acknowledged under oath before a competent judge, or by accepted bills of exchange or any other negotiable instruments payable to bearer or to a determined person, when they represent matured obligations or their matured coupons or of judicial confession made before a competent judge.)

When an executive action is brought, a writ of attachment upon the debtor's property for an amount large enough to satisfy his debts and judicial costs, after a demand and refusal of payment, may be immediately issued. A period of ten days is allowed the debtor to move to vacate the attachment. If the decision is made against the defendant on such an application, the preventative attachment is converted into a definitive one and the decision is enforced by the special procedure called "via de apremio," that is to say, selling the attached property at public auction and paying the creditor with the proceeds thereof.

Property Subject to Attachment. — The property must be attached in the following order: (1) Cash; (2) public securities; (3) jewelry, silverware, or gems; (4) negotiable instruments or convertible securities; (5) profits and rentals of every description; (6) beasts of burden and farm animals; (7) chattels; (8) real estate; (9) salaries or pensions; (10) credits or securities not convertible. (Code of Civil Procedure, article 1445.)

Property Exempt from Attachment. — The law prohibits the attachment of railways in public service as well as their stations, depots, shops, lands, works, and buildings necessary for their use. Nor can locomotives, rails, and other effects belonging to the rolling stock and all other materials destined to running and operating the line be attached. (Code of Civil Procedure, article 1446.) Nor can attachment be made of the beds of the debtor, his wife and his children, articles of clothing needed by them nor instruments necessary for the art or craft in which the debtor works. (Code of Civil Procedure, art. 1447.) When salaries or pensions are attached, only one fourth of them can be attached, when said salaries or pensions are not larger than five thousand pesetas per year; from five thousand up to eleven thousand two hundred and fifty pesetas per year, one third can be attached, and for more than eleven thousand two hundred and fifty pesetas, one half can be attached. (Code of Civil Procedure, art. 1449.) The salaries of the employees in public service and pensions of a remuneratory character paid by the State, Province, or Municipality are not subject to attachment. (Article 1, Decree 279 of 1916.)

Bankruptcy. — Suspension of Payment. — A merchant possessing property sufficient to cover his debts, but foreseeing the impossibility of meeting them when they respectively fall due, may suspend payments by petitioning a judge of first instance, setting forth a full statement of his assets and liabilities and his proposal for an extension to his creditors. (Code of Commerce, arts. 870-873.) The proposition of settlement must be submitted to a meeting of creditors duly called. If fifty-one per cent. of the number of creditors, provided their interest amounts to three fifths of the total liabilities after deducting claims of preferred and mortgage creditors, agree to such compromise settlement, and if approved by the court, it is binding upon the bankrupt and all creditors, whose credits are of a date prior to the declaration of suspension and provided that all creditors were cited in a legal manner. (Code of Commerce, arts. 898, 901-904.) If a settlement is agreed to at a meeting of creditors, as above provided, any dissenting creditor and those who did not attend the meeting may oppose its confirmation by the court within eight days, upon the following grounds: (1) Errors in the procedure prescribed for the calling, holding and conduct of the meeting; (2) lack of qualification or representation in one of the voters, if his vote decides the majority in number or amount; (3) fraudulent understandings between the debtor and creditors or amongst the creditors themselves; (4) fraudulent misrepresentation of debts in order to obtain the majority in amount; and (5) fraudulent error in the general balance sheet of transactions. (Code of Commerce, arts. 902, 903.)

Acts of Bankruptcy. — A merchant shall be considered in a state of bankruptcy if he (a) cannot meet his current obligations, or has not sufficient property to satisfy an attachment or execution; and (b) conceals himself or absents himself from his place of business without leaving his business in charge of a person who can pay and liquidate his obligations. (Code of Commerce, arts. 874, 876, and 877.) After the commission of one of the aforesaid acts of bankruptcy and this has been adjudicated, the bankrupt is disqualified from administering his property, and all of his subsequent acts of ownership or administration are void. (Code of Commerce, art. 878.)

Proceedings. — Proceedings may be instituted by the bankrupt in person (voluntary) or by a creditor (involuntary) (Code of Commerce, art. 875), and are of three kinds, accidental insolvency, culpable insolvency and fraudulent insolvency. (Code of Commerce, art. 886.)

The following contracts celebrated by the bankrupt within thirty days of his bankruptcy are void: (1) Transfers of real estate made without consideration. (2) Constitution of dowries made of his private property to his daughters. (3) Concessions and transfers of real estate in payment of debts not due at the time of the declaration of bankruptcy. (4) Conventional mortgages on obligations of a prior date which do not have this quality, or for loans of money or merchandise the delivery of which had not taken place at the time of contracting the obligation before a notary and the witnesses taking part therein. (5) Gifts, inter vivos, which have not the character of remunerations. (Code of Commerce, art. 880.)

The following may be annulled at the instance of the creditors by proving that the bankrupt acted with the intention of defrauding them of their rights: (1) The alienation for a valuable consideration of real property made in the month preceding the declaration of bankruptcy. (2) The creation of dowries, made within the same time, of property of the conjugal partnership in favor of his daughters or any other transfer of said property for no consideration. (3) The creation of dowries or acknowledgments of having received moneys made by a merchant spouse in favor of the other spouse in the six months preceding the bankruptcy, provided they do not consist of real property which was inherited by the latter from his or her descendants or acquired or possessed previously by the spouse in whose favor the assignment of the dowry or receipt of moneys was made. (4) All acknowledgments of the receipt of money or of instruments as evidence of loans, which, having been made six months before the bankruptcy in a public instrument, are not proven as having taken place by means of a notarial statement, or if, having been made in a private instrument, they should not conform to the entries in the books of the contracting parties. (5) All contracts, obligations and commercial transactions of the bankrupt which were not made at least ten days prior to the declaration of bankruptcy. (Code of Commerce, art. 881.)

Discharge. — Fraudulent bankrupts cannot obtain a discharge; others may obtain a discharge by proving that they have fully complied with the approved settlement agreement made with their creditors, or should there be no such agreement, by proving that the obligations acknowledged in the proceedings were liquidated by a distribution of assets, or by subsequent payments. (Code of Commerce, arts. 920, 921.) With the discharge, all the legal incapacities produced by the declaration of bankruptcy shall cease. (Code of Commerce, art. 922.)

Bills and Notes. — A bill of exchange must contain (1) place and date of execution; (2) date of maturity; (3) name of payee; (4) amount to be paid; (5) the form in which the consideration was paid, which might be evidenced by the words "value received" or the expression of the true consideration; (6) name of drawer; (7) name of drawee and place of payment; (8) signature of the drawer. (Code of Commerce, art. 444.) If the consideration is not entirely received and paid at the time of the execution and delivery of the bill, the consideration should be expressed as "value on account" or "value understood."

Indorsements. — The title to bills of exchange is transferable by indorsement, which must contain: (1) name of transferee; (2) manner of payment of consideration; (3) date; (4) signature of indorser.

Blank indorsements and those in which the consideration is not set forth are sufficient to effect a transfer.

The indorsement makes each and every one of the indorsers liable as guarantors for the amount of the bill of exchange, if it is not accepted, and to its repayment, with costs of protest and re-exchange, if not paid when due, provided it is properly presented and protested. Indorsement "without liability" frees endorser from all liability. (Code of Commerce, arts. 461-467.)

Presentation and Acceptance. — Bills of exchange payable in the Republic of Cuba at sight or a period counted from sight must be presented for collection or acceptance, and such presentation must be made within the following periods, counted from their date: (1) Bills drawn within the Republic or foreign countries, in accordance with the laws in force in the place where they are payable. (2) Those drawn from any place in the United States or Europe, within forty days after their introduction into the Republic and those drawn after date at the times stipulated thereon. (3) Those drawn within the Republic and payable within the Republic, within forty days. However, a person who draws a bill of exchange at sight or at a period counted after sight, may fix a definite period within which the presentation must be made; and in such case the holder must present it within the period fixed by the drawer.

The holders of bills of exchange drawn at a period counted from their date need not present them for acceptance. Upon presentation for acceptance the drawee must either accept or definitely refuse acceptance on the same day the bill is presented. (Code of Commerce, arts. 470-480.)

Protest. — The non-acceptance or non-payment of bills of exchange must be proven by means of a protest.

In order that a protest may be valid, it must necessarily contain the following conditions: (1) It must be made before sunset on the day following that on which acceptance or payment was refused; and, if it is a holiday, on the first working day. (2) It must be made before a notary public. (3) Said protest must be served on the person on whom the draft was drawn, at the place where it is to be paid, if such person can be found there, and not being found, on his employees, should he have any; or, in the absence of the latter, on his wife, children, or servants, or on such neighbor referred to in article 505 of the Code of Commerce. (4) It must contain an exact copy of the draft, of its acceptance, if accepted, and of all the indorsements thereon. (5) It must include the demand for payment made of the person who must accept or pay the draft; and should he not have been found, the demand shall be made of the person with whom the transaction is made. (6) It must also contain the answer given to the demand. (7) It must state in the same manner the demand that the expenses and losses be paid by the person who occasioned them. (8) It must be signed by the protesting party and if he be unable to sign same by two attesting witnesses. (9) It must state the date and hour when the protest was made. (10) There must be given to the person with whom the protest proceedings were held a copy of the protest. (Code of Commerce, art. 504.)

Place of Protest. — (1) That designated in the draft. (2) In the absence of such designation, the domicile of the payer at the time. (3) In the absence of either, at payer's last known domicile. Should the domicile of the person on whom the draft was drawn not appear to be in any of the three places above cited, a neighbor having an office in the place where the acceptance and payment is to be made shall be applied to, with whom the formalities shall be gone through and to whom the copy shall be delivered. (Code of Commerce, art. 505.)

Rights of Action. — All parties signing bills of exchange are jointly and severally liable to the bearer or holder for the amount of the bill, its interest and costs of protest, provided the bearer has properly protested the same against all such signers. Indorsers are relieved of all liability, if no notice of protest is given. The indorser who pays a protested draft shall be subrogated to the rights of the holder thereof, viz.: (1) If the protest were for non-acceptance against the drawer and the other indorsers who precede him in order for the security of the value of the draft or the deposit in the absence of security. (2) If it were for non-payment against the said drawer, acceptor and prior indorsers for the recovery of the amount of the draft and of all the costs he may have paid.

If the drawer and the indorser should both appear to make the payment the drawer shall be preferred; and if the indorsers only should appear, the one of a prior date. (Code of Commerce, arts. 517-526.)

As hereinbefore mentioned (see Attachments, Executive Actions), a writ of attachment can be secured in such actions. (Code of Commerce, art. 521.)

Drafts, Bills and Promissory Notes Payable to Order. — Drafts, bills and promissory notes payable to order must contain: (1) The specific name of the draft, bill, or promissory note; (2) the date of issue; (3) the amount; (4) the time of payment; (5) the person to whose order the payment is to be made, and, in drafts, the name and domicile of the person against whom they are drawn; (6) the place where the payment is to be made; (7) the origin and kind of value they represent; (8) the signature of the person making the draft, and, in bills or promissory notes, the person who contracts the obligation to pay them. (Code of Commerce, art. 531.)

Bills which are to be paid at a place other than that of the residence of the payor must specify the place of payment.

Bills, promissory notes, or checks not drawn to order, are not mercantile or commercial paper, but simple promises to pay subject to the common law or the commercial law, according to their nature, and do not give rise to executive action. (Code of Commerce, art. 532.)

The indorsements on drafts and promissory notes payable to order must contain the same statements as those on bills of exchange. (Code of Commerce, art. 533.)

Checks. — A check must contain: the name and the signature of the maker, and the name of the person on whom it is drawn, and his domicile, amount and date of issue, and whether payable to bearer, to a determined person, or to order; in the latter case it shall be transferable by indorsement. (Code of Commerce, art. 535.) The provisions relating to the joint liability of the maker and indorsers, and to protests, as well as to the exercise of the actions arising from bills of exchange herein set forth are applicable to checks. (Code of Commerce, art. 542.)

Instruments Payable to Bearer. — All instruments payable to order, treated of in the foregoing title, may be issued payable to bearer, and shall, the same as the former, entitle the holder to a writ of attachment in an action to enforce same from the day they fall due, without further requisite than the acknowledgment of the signature of the person liable for the payment. The due date shall be counted according to the rules established for instruments issued payable to order. (Code of Commerce, art. 523.)

Chattel Mortgages. — Chattel mortgages are unknown in the Republic of Cuba, but a mortgage or lien on chattels can be created by pledge, which requires physical delivery to pledgee. (See Pledge.)

Compromise and Arbitration. — Compromise and arbitration may be made by contract to avoid the provocation of a suit or to terminate and settle one already instituted. The award of the arbitrators elected by the parties has the effect of res adjudicata and is binding upon the parties thereto with the same force and effect as a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction. Corporations may make contracts of arbitration in the manner and with the formality necessary to alienate property.

The following cannot be made the subject of a contract of compromise or arbitration: (1) Controversies with respect to rights of guardians and wards, except with judicial authority; (2) controversies between husband and wife with respect to dowry property and rights; (3) controversies with respect to rights of parents and children, under their authority, without judicial approval, if the amount involved is over five hundred dollars in value; and (4) controversies respecting the civil status of persons, matrimonial questions and crimes. (Civil Code, arts. 1809-1819.)

Contracts. — Contracts involving over fifteen hundred pesetas must be in writing. The following contracts must be made by public instrument: (1) Contracts creating, transmitting, modifying or extinguishing property rights in real property (see Real Property, supra); (2) leases for more than six years; (3) marriage contracts and contracts of dowry, when it is intended to enforce them against third parties; (4) contracts of assignment, repudiation and renunciation of hereditary rights and those of the conjugal partnership; (5) powers of attorney to contract marriage and to represent another in litigation, to administer property and all other contracts, the object of which is an act to be incorporated in a public document; and (6) assignments of actions and rights arising out of any act contained in a public Instrument. (Civil Code, arts. 1278-1280.) The general principles of the law of contracts are for all practical purposes the same as those of the English common law. All contracts and documents must contain a full description of the personality and legal capacity of the parties thereto. If executed by a corporation, extracts from the certificate of incorporation, by-laws and corporate resolutions showing the authority and capacity of the officer or agent of the corporation to execute the same, must be contained in the contract itself. Likewise contracts executed by a person in a representative capacity must, upon their face, show the authority of the executing party and the capacity in which he acts.

Corporations. — Formation. — The intending incorporators execute before a notary public a contract or articles of association agreeing to associate to establish a corporation for the transaction of business, which document must contain the provisions, usual in the certificate of incorporation of an American corporation, which the Code of Commerce (art. 151) enumerates, as: (1) The names, surnames, and address of the incorporators; (2) the name of the company, which must be suitable to the class of business to be transacted and must not be identical with that of any preëxisting corporation; (3) the names of the persons who are to direct the affairs of the corporation, and the manner of filling vacancies; (4) the capital of the corporation, stating the value at which property, not cash, contributed has been appraised, or on what basis the appraisal or valuation is to be made; (5) the number of shares into which the capital stock is divided and represented; (6) the time within which the part of the capital not paid in at the time of the incorporation is to be contributed or otherwise stating the persons authorized to determine the time and manner of collecting and assessing such unpaid capital; (7) duration of corporation; (8) purposes and objects of corporation; (9) the time and manner of calling and holding regular and special meetings of stockholders; (10) provisions for the submission to the vote of the majority of stockholders duly called and held, of such matters as may be properly brought before the meeting; (11) the number of persons or shares that must be present in person or by proxy, to adopt binding resolutions; (12) all legal provisions and special conditions which the incorporators might desire.

Such by-laws as may be deemed advisable for the proper conduct of the corporation and by which the corporation is to be governed, may also be inserted in the articles of association.

These articles of incorporation, as well as any subsequent amendments thereof, must then be recorded with the "Commercial Registry" from which Registry must also appear a designation of location of the principal office of the corporation. The articles of incorporation may be executed without the Republic of Cuba and foreigners can act as incorporators. If an incorporator cannot appear in person and execute the articles, he can give a power of attorney, authorizing and designating another to do so in his behalf, as his attorney in fact.

Organisation Tax and Annual Tax. — A tax of one fourth of one per cent. for the privilege of organization must be paid, but need not necessarily be paid at the time of organization, but must be paid at the time of issuing stock. There is absolutely no annual capital or income tax imposed on Cuban corporations.

Foreign Corporations. — Corporations organized under the laws of foreign countries are permitted to transact business in Cuba with the same latitude as Cuban corporations, provided they comply with the provisions of the Code of Commerce which requires that they must be protocolized in a notarial office, and file with the Commercial Registry a document containing the same requisites as is required of Cuban corporations. (Code of Commerce, art. 151.) This is best done by protocolizing and filing a Spanish translation of the certificate of incorporation and by-laws of the company, properly legalized by a Cuban consul, along with a certificate of a Cuban consul that the corporation has been organized in accordance with the law of its domicile. The powers of such corporations are in general determined by the laws of the country under which they were organized. A resident representative, upon whom legal process can be served, must be appointed.

Liability of Stockholders, Officers and Directors. — The liability of stockholders for corporate obligations and losses is limited to the amount contributed or promised to be contributed to the corporate capital. Officers and directors are not liable for corporate debts provided they act within the scope of their authority as conferred by the articles of association, and by-laws, but for any violation thereof, if several should be responsible therefor, each one is liable pro rata. The corporate capital composed of the stock and accrued profits are liable for the corporate obligations contracted in the course of its management and administration by persons authorized thereto in the manner prescribed in the articles of incorporation and by-laws of the company. The managers of the corporation which usually include both officers and directors, are elected by the stockholders in accordance with the provisions of the certificate of incorporation and by-laws and are the agents of the corporation within the scope of their authority as defined by the certificate of incorporation and by-laws.

The stockholders cannot examine the corporate books and records thereof except as prescribed by the by-laws, but corporations must publish monthly, in the official newspaper of the Republic, a detailed balance statement, stating the rate at which the balance on hand in securities is calculated, as well as all kinds of property.

Corporate Books and Records. — The Code of Commerce requires every Cuban corporation to keep the following books: (1) Book of inventories and balance sheets; (2) a ledger; (3) a daybook; (4) letter and telegram copy-book; (5) corporate minute-book.

The Code of Commerce furthermore specifically defines that these books be produced, bound, and paged before the municipal judge of the district in which the corporation has its principal office.

Shares of Capital Stock. — The certificates or shares of capital stock are issued either in the stockholder's name, or to bearer. Bearer certificates are transferable by delivery. A stock transfer book must be kept to record all transfer of shares issued in the name of a stockholder, but the stub record in the stock certificate book is sufficient record for bearer shares.

On all certificates of stock, whether issued in a stockholder's name or to bearer, there must be noted the sum which has been paid on account of its nominal value or that it is fully paid. In shares issued in a stockholder's name, until the full cost or subscription price has been paid, the first subscriber or holder of the share, his assignee, or any subsequent transferee, shall be liable for the unpaid balance of the subscription price, jointly and at the option of the directors. After an action to enforce said liability has been instituted against any such person, however, no second action against any other such person can be brought on the same liability except when the person first proceeded against is insolvent. When, however, the shares are issued to bearer, the holder thereof only is liable for the payment of his shares. If it is impossible to ascertain the holder, making such personal claim impossible, the corporation may annul the certificate or share of stock, and issue new duplicate shares upon which can be realized the unpaid balance of the annulled shares. All shares must be issued in a stockholder's name until fifty per cent. of the par or nominal value has been paid, after which they may be converted into bearer shares, if the by-laws or corporate resolutions so permit.

If no less than fifty per cent. of the par or nominal value of a share has been paid, such share may be endorsed as fully paid, and non-assessable, and a creditor would have no claim against stockholders of such a share so endorsed.

Corporations cannot purchase their own stock, except with profits for the purpose of amortisation, nor can they give guarantees by pledging their own stock.

Increase or Decrease of Capital Stock. — No new series of stock or increase of capital stock can be made until the previous requisite capital has been fully paid. Any provision in the certificate of incorporation or by-laws to the contrary is void.

Corporations can only increase or reduce the capital stock by a general meeting of stockholders especially convened for that purpose. The notice or call of meeting must specifically recite that as being the purpose of the meeting.

The by-laws shall fix the number of stockholders and the amount of capital stock necessary to be voted for an increase or reduction of capital stock or dissolution and in no case can such amount be less than three fourths of the stockholders or two thirds of the nominal value of the capital stock. A corporation, of course, cannot reduce its capital stock until all of its debts and obligations are paid unless the actual capital, after such reduction, exceeds the amount of its debts by seventy-five per cent. or unless the creditors consent to the reduction.

Decedents' Estate. — Executors. — A testator may appoint one or more executors in his will. (Civil Code, art. 892.) If several executors are appointed, the majority must concur in any act and the action of a majority shall govern. (Civil Code, art. 895.) Executorship is a voluntary office which may be accepted or rejected by the appointed person. If the appointed person does not refuse the appointment within six days after notice of his appointment, or within six days after testator's death, he will have been deemed to have accepted the appointment. (Civil Code, art. 898.) If he renounces without sufficient cause, he loses what is left him by the will, except his legal portion. (Civil Code, art. 900.) Executors have the powers conferred upon them by the will if not contrary to law, and if the will does not specifically determine these powers they are empowered by law to (1) pay testator's just debts and funeral expenses in accordance with the provisions of the will or custom of domicile of testator; (2) pay cash legacies; and (3) execute and carry out the other provisions of the will and to preserve and maintain the estate. (Civil Code, arts. 901, 902.) The term of executorship, if no time is fixed by the will (and such time can be fixed by the will), is one year from the executor's qualification or from the conclusion of litigation instituted to test the validity of the will or any of its provisions. (Civil Code, art. 904.) Such time can, of course, be extended if the exigencies of the case so demand. The executor must then account to the heirs and give notice of settlement of his account to all interested parties so as to afford them an opportunity of accepting or contesting the same. (Civil Code, art. 907.) Minors cannot serve as executors. If there is not sufficient cash in the estate to pay debts, funeral expenses, and legacies, and the heirs refuse to contribute from their own funds thereto, the executors can sell the personal property, and if such personal property is insufficient therefor, then the real property. (Civil Code, art. 903.) Executorship is a gratuitous office, but the testator may assign a remuneration.

Administrators. — In case of intestacy or the failure of the appointment or qualification of an executor, the surviving spouse, any heir at law, or, in default of these, an unsecured creditor, may apply for and is entitled to administration.

General Provisions. — Heirs can accept their inheritance with the benefit of inventory, which means that they can cause an inventory of the estate to be made, and accept their inheritance subject to such inventory. By so doing they are not personally liable for debts of the decedent beyond the sum appearing from the inventory. If they accept without inventory they are personally liable for all the decedent's obligations. This acceptance of inheritance with benefit of inventory must be made before a notary or before a court of competent jurisdiction. Until all the known creditors and legatees have been paid, the estate is deemed in process of administration and the executor or administrator is not entitled to a discharge. Legacies cannot be paid until all creditors have been paid.

Deeds. — See Real Property — Deeds.

Descent, Succession and Distribution. — In intestate succession the property both real and personal descends or succeeds (1) to the descendants in a direct line (children) share and share alike; descendants of such descendants (grandchildren) shall inherit by representation the portion of his parent; (2) in the absence of such descendants, to the ascendants (father and mother) share and share alike; should only one parent survive, he or she shall succeed to the entire estate, and in the absence of a father or mother the ascendant nearest in degree shall inherit; should there be several of equal degree belonging to the same line, they shall divide the inheritance per capita; should they be of different lines, but of equal degree, one half shall go to the paternal and the other to the maternal descendants per capita; (3) in the absence of such descendants and ascendants, natural children legally acknowledged or legitimized shall succeed to the entire estate; (4) in the absence of all of the above, to the collateral relatives and spouses; should there be only brothers or sisters of the whole blood, they shall inherit in equal shares; should brothers survive with nephews, children of the brothers of the whole blood, the former shall inherit per capita and the latter per stirpes; should brothers of the whole blood survive with brothers of the half blood, the former shall receive a share in the inheritance double that of the latter. In case there are only brothers of half blood, some on the father's and some on the mother's side, all shall inherit equal shares without distinction of property. Children of brothers of half blood shall succeed per capita or per stirpes, according to the rules established for brothers or sisters of the whole blood. In the case of brothers or sisters and of nephews, children of the same, be they or not of the whole blood, the surviving spouse, not separated by a final decree of divorce, shall succeed to the entire estate of the deceased; should there be brothers or sisters or children of brothers or sisters, the surviving widow or widower shall have a right to receive a part of the inheritance in usufruct; should there be neither brothers or sisters nor children of brothers or sisters, nor a surviving spouse, the other collateral relatives shall succeed to the estate of the deceased. The succession of the latter shall follow without distinction of lines or preference among them by reason of the whole blood. The right to inherit ab intestato shall not extend beyond the sixth degree of relationship in the collateral line; and (5) failing all the above, the estate shall escheat to the State. (Civil Code, arts. 930-958.)

Employers' Liability Law and Compensation Act. — On July 12, 1916, an Employers' Liability Law and Compensation Act was enacted patterned after similarly named legislation in the United States. For all personal injuries sustained by an employee arising out of and in the course of his employment if his employment be of the kind specified in said act, he is entitled to be compensated by his employer as in said act provided and is entitled to the costs of the services of a physician and druggist selected by him. The present law applies to the following concerns and operations: To the generating of gas or electric power, operation of telephone or telegraph lines, installation, repair or removal of electric transmission cables or lightning rods. To the manufacture or application to industrial uses of explosives, or any inflammable, unhealthy, or poisonous material, and to the work of street-cleaning, of sewers, and similar work. To the manufacture and exploitation of any handiwork or privilege duly obtained employing machinery run by steam, electricity, or any motive power. To the construction, repair, maintenance, and operation of railroad or car lines, roads and highways belonging to the Federal Government, to the Province, the Municipality, or to private individuals. To the exploitation of agricultural or forestry products, and to coal, wood, and lumber yards, or to warehouses where inflammable or dangerous materials are stored in large quantities. To theatres and places of amusement in what refers to the salaried employees. To apprentices who without remuneration take part in the execution of the work. And in general, to the exploitation of any industry or in similar work not contained in the foregoing paragraphs.

The employee shall lose all rights of compensation resulting from willful intention. If injury is due to the inexcusable fault of the employer or his representative, the compensation may be increased, but the total compensation must not exceed one year's salary. Injured employees can attach employers' property in the form prescribed by the Code of Commerce (see Attachments) if compensation is not paid by employer within a reasonable time. Notice of injury causing disability must be given within twenty-four hours after disability by employer to the city judge or he will be subject to a fine.

Amount of Compensation. — (1) For total or permanent disability, to a compensation equal to two thirds of his annual salary. (2) For partial or permanent disability, to a compensation equal to one half of the loss of annual wages. (3) For temporary disability, to a daily compensation, including Sundays and holidays, during the inability to return to work, equal to one half of the salary received by the employee at the time of the injury, unless the salary be variable, in which case the compensation shall be equal to one third of the average of the salary resulting, calculating the salary received during the two months preceding the day of the injury. (4) In case of death of the employee, his heirs and next-of-kin shall be entitled to compensation in an amount depending upon the relationship of his survivors.

To foreign workmen or employees meeting injury and who desire to leave the country, the compensation shall be commuted by a lump sum, as follows: (a) For total and permanent disability, a sum equal to the total annual salary or wages of three years' work. (b) For temporary and permanent disability, a sum equal to the total sum of the daily loss of wages or salary of the injured in three years' work. (c) In case of death, the employees' heirs shall be paid the same compensation provided in paragraph (a) distributed in the form provided by this law. (d) In case of variable salaries, the daily average shall be ascertained by computing the salary received during the two months preceding the injury. (e) If the employee, on deciding to get the compensation in a lump sum, shall have already received certain sums as compensation, said sums received shall be deducted from the amount to be paid to him.

Exemption from Compensation. — The employer shall be exempt from the obligation of paying the cost of sickness and compensation to which the injured may be entitled by testifying to the following: (a) To have insured his employees in some insurance company legally constituted. (b) That said company guarantees to the insured medical and pharmaceutical assistance besides a daily compensation. The compensation to which the insurance company is liable shall amount to the corresponding sum within the provisions of this Law.

Executors. — See Decedents' Estates — Executors.

Inheritance Taxes. — There is a tax imposed on all inheritances, devises, legacies, donations and successions, and on any other interest in real or personal property, passing by virtue of or taking effect upon death, whenever and only when the relationship or degree of consanguinity existing between the parties is one of the following, the amount of such tax being respectively: —

Husband and wife.....	2 per cent.
Collaterals of the second degree.....	3
" " " third " 	4
" " " fourth " 	5
" " " fifth " 	6
" " " sixth " 	7
Where no relationship exists.....	9

The following are the rules of computing the degree of relationship: each generation forms one degree; a collateral line is that constituted by a series of degrees among persons not descending one from the other, but proceeding from a common trunk; in the lines as many degrees are counted as there are generations or persons, deducting the progenitor; in the collateral line, the ascent is made up to the common trunk, and then a descent to the person with whom the computation is made. Therefore, the brother is two degrees removed from his brother, three from an uncle, brother of his father or mother, four from a first cousin, etc. (Civil Code, arts. 915-923.)

Insolvency. — See Bankruptcy.

Judgments. — Judgments rendered by Foreign Courts. — Final judgment rendered in foreign countries shall have in the territory of Cuba the force and effect established by international treaties. Should there be no special treaties with the nation in which the judgment has been rendered, the judgment shall have the same force and effect which is given in said nation to final judgments rendered in Cuban courts. Should the final judgment be rendered in a nation where, under its laws, judgments rendered by Cuban courts are not enforceable, it shall have no force and effect in Cuba. If the judgment should not be included in any of the cases mentioned above, such final judgments shall have force in the territory of Cuba if (1) the final judgment was rendered in consequence of the prosecution of a personal cause of action; (2) that it is not a judgment rendered by default; (3) that the obligation for which the action was instituted to enforce, is recognisable by the law of Cuba; and (4) that the writ of execution possesses the requisites necessary in the nation in which it was rendered in order to be considered authentic, and the requisites which the Cuban law requires in order to be admissible in Cuba. (Code of Civil Procedure, arts. 950-955.) A transcript of the judgment properly authenticated and translated should be presented to the Supreme Court for execution.

Execution of Judgments. — When an order is made declaring that an execution is to issue to enforce a judgment, an immediate appraisement of the attached property is made. If the attached property consists of real estate, a certificate must be obtained from the registry of property, in which all the burdens upon that property must be recited in order to determine the rights which may be prior and preferable to those of the judgment creditor. The appraisement must be made by two experts appointed by the parties and should they not agree, the judge must appoint a third one. Once the valuation is made, the property must be advertised for public sale eight days in advance if it consists of fruits, beasts of burden or farm animals, or chattels, and twenty days in advance if it consists of valuable jewelry or real estate, and then sold at public auction.

At such public sale all bids are admissible when they are not less than two thirds of the appraised valuation and the property must be sold to the highest bidder. Should there not be any bidder, a second auction must be had and the minimum price of the property at that auction must not be less than the appraised value less twenty-five per cent. If in this second auction there are no bidders, the creditor may demand a third public sale and the property can be sold to the highest bidder thereat regardless of amount of bid; or else the creditor may elect that the property be applied to a partial payment of his credit up to the amount of two thirds of the minimum price established for the second auction, and as this price is the amount of the valuation less twenty-five per cent. discount, and as the two thirds of the seventy-five per cent. is equivalent to fifty per cent. of the total amount of the valuation, the creditor can take the property, for one half the price of the first valuation, when there are no bidders in the first and second auctions. The creditor may participate in the auction if he deems it advisable and he may raise the bid made by other bidders. Another right of the creditor, when there are no bidders in the second auction, is that the administration of the attached property be turned over to him with a view of applying all its rents, issues, and profits to the payment of the principal and interest of the debt; but if this administration of the property is insufficient to pay him, then he may demand the third auction without submission to any standard of valuation. If in this third auction some one offers two thirds of the standard established for the second auction, the sale is closed in his favor; but, if some one offers less than that, the bid is made known to the debtor, who within the period of nine days following may pay the creditor, liberating his property, or may present another person to raise the bid, in which case the judge shall open a new contest between the bidders giving the attached property to the one who makes the best proposition. This is not necessary when the first bidder abandons his offer in view of the increase made by the second one.

Legalization of Contracts executed Abroad for Use in Cuba. — See Affidavits and Acknowledgments and Contracts.

Limitation of Actions. — Prescription. — The following actions are prescribed and must be instituted within the time following their respective classification: (a) Actions to recover possession of personal property, six years. (Civil Code, art. 1962.) (b) Actions to recover real property, thirty years. (Civil Code, art. 1963.) (c) Actions to enforce a mortgage, twenty years. (Civil Code, art. 1964.) (d) Actions to recover for sale of merchandise, wages, etc., three years. (Civil Code, art. 1966.) (e) Actions against brokers and agents, actions involving rights of partners inter sese; actions on promissory notes, checks, drafts, bills of exchange, dividends, coupons, and amounts of amortisation of obligations, and actions for loans on bottomry or respondentia or marine risks, three years. (Code of Commerce, arts. 945 to 950, 954.) (f) Actions for services, provisions, construction, etc., for ships; actions resulting from breaches of contracts for transportation of freight and for the sale of ships, and for port charges, pilot fees, etc., one year. (Code of Commerce, art. 952.) (g) Actions for damages for collisions at sea, two years. (Code of Commerce, art. 953.) (h) Actions for collection on charters for freight money or hire, six months. (Code of Commerce, art. 950.) (i) Actions by a purchaser for damages based on an inherent defect in an article sold, within thirty days, after its delivery. (Code of Commerce, art. 342.)

Mortgages. — See Real Property — Mortgages.

Notaries. — Notaries keep in their archives or protocol the originals of all public documents, open wills, memoranda of affidavits, and closed wills and records of all of their official acts. First certified copies of all protocolized and registered documents are delivered to the parties to the same, and additional certified copies or testimonios can be obtained at any time by the parties. Notaries' charges and fees are regulated by law.

Partnerships. — Partnerships are of two kinds, general copartnerships and limited copartnerships. (Code of Commerce, arts. 125-144 and 145-150.) A partnership is created by the execution and recordation of articles of copartnership which must contain the names and address of parties, firm name, names of managing copartners, contribution of each partner, duration of copartnership, and any other special or peculiar conditions desired by the parties. (Code of Commerce, art. 125.) General copartnerships must transact business under the name of all of its members, of several or of one of them, but in the latter case the words "and company" must be suffixed to the name. (Code of Commerce, art. 126.) All members of a general copartnership, regardless of whether their name is in the firm name or not, or whether they are managing partners or not, are jointly and severally liable for all firm obligations. (Code of Commerce, arts. 126, 127.)

In a limited copartnership, the words "limited copartnership" must be part of the firm name. (Code of Commerce, art. 145.) Should a special partner permit his name to be included in the firm name, he shall be liable as a general partner. (Code of Commerce, art. 147.) The liability of special partners for firm obligations and losses is limited to the amount contributed (Code of Commerce, art. 148), and special partners cannot take any active part in the management of the business, and cannot examine copartnership books and records, except at the times and in the manner set forth in the articles of copartnership. (Code of Commerce, arts. 148, 149.)

Patents, Trade-marks, and Copyrights. — Exclusive property and right to use patents and trade-marks are acquired by registering same with the Registry of Property (Code of Commerce, art. 21), and complying with the provisions of Trade-Mark Decree of August 21, 1834. Application in each case must be made to the Department of Agriculture, Commerce, and Labor. An American trade-mark can be registered in Cuba by filing with the above-named department an authenticated copy of the trade-mark issued by the United States Patent Office, legalized by the Cuban Legation at Washington along with fifteen uncertified copies of same. A power of attorney authorizing some one in Cuba to attend the application, and registration of the same should also be sent.

Copyrights are acquired by registering and filing three copies of the work sought to be copyrighted with the General Register of the Department of State.

Pledges. — The following requisites are necessary to constitute a pledge or mortgage: a debt or obligation for which the pledge is security, actual physical delivery of the pledged property, which property must be personal property, capable of possession and an object of commerce, to the pledgee or mortgagee, or a third person elected by the parties, and the pledgor or mortgagor must be the owner and have the right of disposition of the property. (Civil Code, arts. 1857, 1861, 1863, 1864, 1866.) A pledge is not effective against a third person when the evidence of its date does not appear in a public document. (Civil Code, art. 1865.) The pledgee cannot dispose of or appropriate to his own use the pledged property (Civil Code, art. 1859), and must preserve the property with all diligence and care and return the same to the pledgor upon satisfaction of the obligation or debt for which it is security. (Civil Code, arts. 1859, 1867.) The pledgee has a right to recover any expenses incurred for the preservation, and is liable for the loss, deterioration, or misuse of the pledged property (Civil Code, art. 1867), and can exercise any action to reclaim or defend it against third persons. (Civil Code, art. 1869.) When the principal obligation is due and unsatisfied, the pledged property may be sold at public auction upon notice to the pledgor, to satisfy the claim of the pledgee. (Civil Code, arts. 1858, 1872.)

Powers of Attorney. — Business may be transacted or claims prosecuted by persons residing without the Republic with the greatest latitude, by the appointment of an attorney in fact, or a local representative. This appointment is made by power of attorney. The form "power of attorney" in use in the United States is for all practical purposes useless. A general power of attorney containing what is commonly characterized as an "omnibus" clause, conferring upon the attorney in fact the power to do anything and everything which the grantor could do, if personally present, does not confer this ample power. The power sought to be conferred must be specifically detailed and set forth. So that the enumeration of such powers must be specified with the utmost detail and exactness. The validity and legality of the instrument shall be determined by the laws of the place of its execution; but it should be protocolized and recorded in Cuba. Powers of attorney which are not recorded, although effective between principal and attorney, cannot be used to the prejudice of third parties, who, however, may avail themselves of same in so far as it may be favorable. (Code of Commerce, art. 29.) (See Legalization and Protocolization of Certificate of Incorporation.) Lawyers must even have a power of attorney to institute and prosecute actions on behalf of clients.

Prescriptions. — See Limitations of Actions.

Real Property. — Foreigners or foreign corporations may own, dispose of, or mortgage real property in Cuba, and where a foreigner dies leaving property in Cuba, either real or personal, the disposition of his estate is made according to the law of his native country.

Recording. — All instruments transferring or creating an ownership in real property, or any interest therein, contracts or leases for a term exceeding six years, or where the rent is paid for more than three years in advance, or instruments creating, modifying, or extinguishing a mortgage, use, or annuity, must be recorded in the office of the Registry of Property in the Municipal District in which the property is situated. If an estate is situated within the limits of two or more registries, it must be recorded in all of them. (Mortgage Law, arts. 1, 2.) Any person having an interest therein may record such instrument with the Registry of Property. (Mortgage Law, art. 6.) The responsibility of the Register of Property in respect to recording instruments is not limited to the form of the instrument, but extends to its substance. The Register of Property is required to give a bond to indemnify any person who is damaged by an improper or illegal recordation or refusal to record any instrument.

Deeds (Execution). — Instruments creating, extinguishing, conveying or mortgaging any of the aforementioned estates must be "public documents," executed and recorded as such, except where the consideration does not exceed three hundred pesos, which estates may be alienated or mortgaged by private contract executed on official paper by both grantor and grantee, or mortgagor and mortgagee, before two witnesses and a notary, the original private contract must be recorded in the registry of the notary certifying it, and a certified copy with the "Registry of Property." Public documents are similarly executed by both parties and must be similarly recorded. (Mortgage Law, art. 3.) Such instruments must contain a true statement of the consideration (not a nominal consideration).

Parties unable to appear in person before the notary, as in the case of foreigners, must give a special power of attorney, to transfer or mortgage real property or to accept the same. Mortgages or deeds executed without the Republic must be duly authenticated, translated, protocolized, as in the case of articles of incorporation, and recorded. (Mortgage Law, art. 5.)

Mortgages (Hipotecas). — (Execution and Recordation, see supra.) — Mortgages are of two kinds, voluntary and legal. Voluntary mortgages are those agreed to between the parties (Mortgage Law, art. 138) and legal mortgages are those created by operation of law in special cases (Mortgage Law, arts. 157, 168), and those given to certain persons as security for property they are administering for others. (Mortgage Law, arts. 168, 169, 190, 200, 207, and 217-221.)

Service. — Summonses, orders, and judgments must be served upon the interested party on the day of their issuance or rendition, or within twenty-four hours thereafter. (Code Civil Procedure, art. 260.) When the residence of a party is known, but personal service cannot be made, service shall be made by writ (cédula), delivered to his nearest relative, member of his household or servant, over fourteen years of age, who may be found at such residence, and if no one can be found there, by delivery to his nearest neighbor. When the residence of the person to be served is unknown, or if his whereabouts are unknown by reason of change of residence, a judge may order notification or service by publishing the summons in the Official Gazette. (Code Civil Procedure, arts. 261-269.) When service of a summons, order, or judgment is to be made in a foreign country, the same is effected by means of letters rogatory transmitted through diplomatic channels, or by the means and in the manner prescribed by international treaties if such exist. (Code Civil Procedure, art. 300.)

Transaction of Business in Cuba. — See Contracts. — To engage in business of any mercantile or commercial character whatsoever, both natives and foreigners or foreign corporations (see Foreign Corporations, supra) should register in the Mercantile Registry in compliance with arts. 16 to 21 of the Code of Commerce, and are required by law to keep in the manner prescribed by law, the following books: (1) a book of inventories and balances; (2) a daybook; (3) a ledger; (4) a copying book for letters and telegrams; and (5) other books required by special law. (Code of Commerce, arts. 33-49.)

Wills. — Wills are of two kinds, ordinary and special. (Civil Code, art. 676.) Ordinary wills are holographic, those written in the testator's own handwriting; open, those executed in the presence of witnesses who must authenticate the same, the contents and provisions of said will being published and made known to such witnesses; and closed, those executed in the presence of witnesses to whom the instrument which is presented is declared to be the testator's last will and testament, but the contents and provisions of which are not revealed to the witnesses. (Civil Code, arts. 676-680.) Special wills are those executed in foreign countries and military and maritime wills; military wills being those executed by a soldier in actual service in time of war and maritime wills being those executed by a person on ship-board during a sea voyage. (Civil Code, art. 677.) If a will is made in a foreign language, it must be made in the presence of two interpreters designated by the testator to translate same into Spanish, and the will must be written in both languages. (Civil Code, art. 684.) Open wills must be executed before a notary and three competent witnesses. The testator must publish it as his last will and testament, and it must be read aloud to the witnesses, so that the testator can declare that the provisions so read express his wish. The will must then be signed by the testator. (Civil Code, arts. 694, 695.) These wills are placed in the protocol of the notary. A closed will must be (1) written by the testator or some other person; (2) placed in a closed or sealed envelope in such a manner that it cannot be extracted without breaking the seal; (3) presented so enclosed and sealed to the notary who is to authenticate it, in the presence of five competent witnesses; (4) declared in the presence of the notary and of the witnesses that the envelope presented contains testator's last will and testament, that it is signed and rubricated at the end and on all of its pages; and (5) authenticated by the notary by a memoranda on the envelope or wrapper enclosing the will that the formalities of the law have been complied with, and the said envelope is to be then signed by testator, witnesses, and the notary. (Civil Code, art. 706.) After the closed will has been authenticated the notary delivers it to the testator, placing in his private protocol a certified copy of the memoranda of execution. The testator may keep the will in his custody or entrust it to the custody of any person in whom he has confidence. A person who, with malice, does not present the will entrusted to his possession to the court at the time or shortly after the death of the testator, loses all right to an inheritance, if he has any such right, and if not, he shall be punished criminally. (Civil Code, arts. 710-713.) All persons, of either sex and of sound mind who have reached the age of fourteen years can make a will. (Civil Code, art. 663.)

Wills Executed in Foreign Countries. — Wills executed by foreigners in the form and with the solemnities required by the law of their domicile are legal in Cuba. Wills executed by Cubans in foreign countries, conforming to the formalities established by the laws of the country in which they are executed, are legal and may be probated in Cuba. (Civil Code, art. 732.) Cubans may also execute in foreign countries open or closed wills in accordance with the laws of Cuba, before a diplomatic or consular agent of Cuba residing at the place of their execution, such agents acting as notaries and forwarding a copy of the open will or of the memoranda of execution of a closed will, authenticated with his signature and sealed, to the Department of State for deposit in its archives. (Civil Code, art. 734.)

Property Subject to Will. — The portion of property of which a testator can dispose by will depends on whether or not the testator has what are termed heirs by operation of law and his relationship to them. That part of the estate which the law has reserved for these privileged heirs is termed the legal portion, of which such heirs can only be deprived for the reasons established by law. The legal portion of legitimate children and descendants is two thirds of the hereditary estate of the father and mother. Legitimate parents and ascendants are entitled to half of the estate of the children who die leaving no descendants, and finally a widow or widower has a right to a portion in usufruct equal to that corresponding to the legal portion of the legitimate children. All other property except that so reserved as a legal portion to the heirs can be disposed of by will. Disinheritance by will can only take place for the reasons expressly fixed by law and such reasons must be recited in the will.

LAWS OF ENGLAND.

Revised August 16, 1918, by

Munton, Morris, King & Co. of London, Solicitors of the Supreme Court, England.

The Judicial System. — The highest court and ultimate court of appeal is the House of Lords, to which appeals lie from His Majesty's Court of Appeal. The jurisdiction of this tribunal is confirmed by the Appellate Jurisdiction Acts (1876 and 1887).

In practice the ordinary peers of the realm do not sit in this tribunal, the court consisting of not less than three of the following persons: (1) The Lord Chancellor of Great Britain for the time being; (2) the Lord of Appeal in ordinary appointed from time to time; (3) such Peers of Parliament as are for the time being holding or have held any of the offices in the Appellate Jurisdiction Acts described as high judicial office. Proceedings before this tribunal are expensive, and, moreover, a sum of two hundred pounds security for costs has to be lodged by the appellant.

Beneath the House of Lords is the Supreme Court of Judicature, which consists of two divisions, His Majesty's Court of Appeal and His Majesty's High Court of Justice. The Court of Appeal consists of certain ex-officio judges, namely, the Lord High Chancellor, Lord Chief Justice of England, the Master of the Rolls, and President of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division, and five Lords Justices. The High Court of Justice consists of three divisions: The Chancery Division: the King's Bench Division: and the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division.

After the Supreme Court come what are technically termed "Inferior Courts," namely, County Courts and certain local tribunals.

There is also another court of great dignity, but which does not form part of the Supreme Court of Judicature: The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. This court acts as a court of appeal from decisions given in the Colonial courts; it also is the court of appeal from judgments given by the President of the Prize Court when such court is constituted as it is at the present time.

There are, of course, also criminal courts, but which do not come within the scope of this digest.

Actions. — Actions in the courts are commenced by summons. Where the claim does not exceed one hundred pounds an action can be brought in the County Court; if, however, the claim exceeds one hundred pounds such action generally must be brought in the High Court. The general jurisdiction of the county court may be grouped under these heads, namely: (1) Over matters, where the claim does not exceed one hundred pounds in amount, which would in the High Court form the subject of an action in the King's Bench Division; (2) over land, the rental of which does not exceed one hundred pounds per annum; and (3) over matters, where the value of the subject-matter dealt with does not exceed five hundred pounds which would, in the High Court, form the subject of an action in the Chancery Division.

An action which runs its normal course in the High Court is conducted by means of pleadings — i.e., statement of claim, defense, etc.; when the pleadings are completed the action is set down for trial and in due course heard by the judge or by judge and jury.

In the County Court the summons takes the form of a plaint and there are no pleadings.

Both in the High Court and in the County Court procedure is provided for, obtaining in certain cases summary judgment. In the High Court in cases of a liquidated claim such summary judgment may be obtained by means of showing to the court an affidavit that the defendant has no valid defense to the action. In the County Court such summary judgment is obtained by means of issuing what is called a default summons, which is obtained by the plaintiff making an affidavit to the effect that the debt is owing; the defendant, however, can always defeat this procedure if he chooses to do so by giving notice of intention to raise a defense.

Defendants are entitled to an order for security for costs when sued by foreign plaintiffs; that is to say, plaintiffs resident out of the jurisdiction and having no assets within the jurisdiction.

When judgment has been recovered either in the High Court or the County Court or other local tribunal, such judgment is enforced primarily by means of writ of execution in the High Court, and execution in the County Court. There are also provisions by means of which a judgment can be enforced by way of attaching debts due to the defendant and other similar provisions in aid of execution.

The costs of an action are in the discretion of the judge, but usually follow the event—

i.e., are awarded in favor of the winning party; such costs, however, are not usually a complete indemnity, as not all the costs incurred by the plaintiff or defendant are necessarily recoverable on taxation. In practice, costs awarded in actions may be: (1) as between party and party; (2) as between solicitor and client; and (3) as between a solicitor and his client, which is full indemnity.

In instructing an English solicitor to commence an action for goods sold or delivered, or services rendered, the plaintiffs should send full detailed accounts showing how the claim is made up, and also all relative correspondence. Much delay is often caused by failure to follow this course on the first instructions being given. In the case of a corporate body, the form of incorporation should be given, the names, addresses, and descriptions of the directors, and the principal place of business. In case of a partnership, the full names and addresses of the partners.

Administration of the Estates of Deceased Persons. — The whole property of a deceased person, both real and personal, devolves on his death upon his personal representatives. Such personal representatives are, if he has made a will, his executors, and if he has not made a will, then his administrator. If no executor is appointed, in respect of a will, probate or letters of administration with the will annexed have to be obtained. In respect of intestacy, letters of administration are granted.

To obtain probate no bond is necessary, but to obtain letters of administration the proposed administrator must enter into a bond, usually with two sureties, to secure the proper administration of the estate, such bond being in a penal sum twice the gross amount of the estate.

The duties payable are as follows: (1) Estate duty at the rate of one per cent. on estates exceeding one hundred pounds and not exceeding five hundred pounds; rising by a graduated scale to twenty per cent. on estates exceeding one million pounds.

If the estate exceeds one thousand pounds legacy and succession duty become payable. The amount payable as legacy and succession duty varies — according to the degree of relationship of the legatee or successor — from one per cent. to ten per cent.

The executor or administrator is, except under exceptional circumstances, allowed a year to wind up the estate. In the case of persons residing in a foreign country and dying, leaving property in England, English letters of administration with the will annexed or letters of administration must be obtained. The persons entitled to a grant of letters of administration, or the executor or executors, can appoint an attorney to take out letters of administration, or letters of administration with the will annexed, in their names and on their behalf.

Wills are recorded at the Principal Probate Registry, Somerset House, and can be inspected by any one on payment of the prescribed fee (one shilling).

Bankruptcy. — A bankruptcy petition can be presented to the Bankruptcy Court by any creditor for fifty pounds and upwards, when the debtor has committed what is called an "act of bankruptcy" within three months before the presentation of the petition. The acts of bankruptcy are: making an assignment to his creditors of the whole of his property, absconding, allowing his goods to be followed by sale or retention by sheriff for twenty-one days, non-compliance with a bankruptcy notice, etc. Two or more creditors can combine their debts to make up the requisite minimum of fifty pounds. The usual procedure is to proceed by way of bankruptcy notice. The creditor first obtains a final judgment against the debtor for any amount and he then serves what is called a "bankruptcy notice," which is to the effect that, unless the debtor satisfies the judgment within seven days of service of the notice, or satisfies the court that he has a cross-demand exceeding the judgment debt, and which he could not set up in the action in which judgment was obtained, then an act of bankruptcy would be committed. On non-compliance with the notice the bankruptcy petition can be filed. On the hearing of the petition, unless the debtor comes to a settlement with his creditors, a receiving order is made and the official receiver immediately takes possession of all the debtor's property for ultimate division amongst his creditors. A debtor being insolvent can himself present a petition.

Arrest. — Imprisonment for debt has been for long abolished, except in the case of debtors against whom a judgment has been obtained and it is proved to the court that, although having means to pay, they, in contempt of court, do not do so. This procedure, however, is of very little use in effecting collections, as no costs are generally allowed against the debtor and the judges are now very loath to make an order for committal.

Bills of Exchange, Promissory Notes and Checks. — The law with regard to bills of exchange and promissory notes is prescribed by the Bills of Exchange Act (1882). Speaking generally such law is very similar to the provisions of the Negotiable Instruments Laws in the United States. Bills or notes signed in England must be stamped before they are signed; three days of grace are allowed. Notice of dishonor has to be given to all persons liable on the bill except the acceptor.

Checks are either open or crossed. A check that is crossed — i.e., has two parallel lines drawn across it with the words "& Co." between the lines — can be paid only through a banker, and if the words "not negotiable" are written between the parallel lines, it is enacted by the Bills of Exchange Act (1882, § 81), that where a person takes such check he shall not be capable of giving a better title to the check than that to which the person from whom he took it had. The effect of this is that the purchaser from a thief gets no title to the check.

Bills of Sale. — These are assignments by deed of chattels personal — i.e., furniture, etc.; they are either conditional or absolute; the most common form are conditional bills of sale to secure loans. No conditional bill of sale can be given for less than thirty pounds and the terms of the bill must strictly conform to the provisions laid down in the Acts of Parliament regulating bills of sale, namely, the Bills of Sale Act (1878) as amended by the Bills of Sale Act (1882); both forms of bills of sale require registration.

Companies. — An English company has its origin either (1) in a charter, or (2) in a special Act of Parliament, or (3) in registration under the Companies Acts now consolidated into the Companies Acts (1908 and 1913). Companies incorporated under the Companies Act are usually joint-stock companies, and there are various classes of companies, the most usual being companies with limited liability having share capital, which are divided into public and private limited companies; seven or more persons may form a public company and two or more persons a private company. A company is usually incorporated as a public company when it is intended to issue shares to the public for subscription; a private company is one which by its articles restricts the right to transfer its shares, limits the number of its members (to fifty), prohibits any invitation to the public to subscribe for shares or debentures of the company. A private company may be turned into a public company by taking the requisite steps, which are of a purely formal character.

By virtue of the Companies Acts, every association or partnership of more than ten persons for banking, and of more than twenty persons for carrying on any other business having for its object the acquisition of gain, must obtain some form of incorporation.

Debentures issued and mortgages created by companies must be registered, and can be inspected by the public at the Registry of Joint-Stock Companies. On the incorporation of a company various small filing fees have to be paid, and in addition a progressive ad valorem fee as follows: When the capital of the company does not exceed two thousand pounds, two pounds; when it exceeds two thousand pounds, but does not exceed five thousand pounds, one pound per one thousand pounds; thereafter, up to one hundred thousand pounds, 5 shillings per one thousand pounds; for every one thousand pounds after the first one hundred thousand pounds, one shilling.

Every company incorporated outside the United Kingdom, establishing a place of business within the United Kingdom, must file various particulars specified in the Companies Consolidation Act (1908), and must also file a statement of its affairs similar to the statement required to be filed by public companies incorporated in the United Kingdom.

A company may be dissolved or wound up by order of the court or voluntarily, or it may, in certain circumstances, be struck off the Register of Joint-Stock Companies.

Copyright. — Copyright is the sole right to produce or reproduce an original work, or any substantial part of such work, in any material form and in any language; to perform, or, in the case of a lecture, to deliver, the work, or any substantial part thereof, to the public. If the work is unpublished, to publish the work includes the right to convert dramatic work into a novel or other non-dramatic work by performing it in public or otherwise, and in the case of a literary, dramatic, or musical work, to make any record, perforated roll, cinematography films, or other contrivance by means of which the work may be mechanically performed or delivered. The law of copyright is now regulated by the Copyright Act (1911). It is enacted by that act that copyright shall subsist throughout His Majesty's Dominions in every original literary, dramatic, musical, and artistic work if (1) in the case of a published work the first publication was within His Majesty's Dominions, and (2) in the case of an unpublished work, the author was at the date of the making of the work a British subject or resident within His Majesty's Dominions.

By the Copyright Act, 1911, the duration of copyright extends to the life of the author and a period of fifty years after his death, unless previously determined by first publication elsewhere than in parts of His Majesty's Dominions to which the act extends.

It is enacted further that at any time after the expiration of twenty-five years, or, in the case of a work in which copyright existed at the passing of the Act, thirty years from the death of the author of a published work, copyright shall not be deemed to be infringed by the reproduction of the work for sale if the reproducer proves (1) that he has given notice in writing of his intention to reproduce the work, (2) that he has paid to the owner of the copyright royalties calculated at the rate of ten per cent. on the price at which he published the work. In the case of joint authorship, the copyright period is for fifty years from the death of the author who dies first, or for the life of the author who dies last, whichever is the longer period.

It is prohibited to import into the United Kingdom copies made abroad of any work in which copyright subsists, which if made in England would infringe a copyright, provided that the owner has given written notice to the Commissioners of Customs that he wishes such copies not to be imported. It is no longer necessary to register a publication at Stationers' Hall.

Corporations. — See Companies.

Costs. — "Costs" is the name for expenses incurred in litigation or professional transactions consisting of money paid for stamps and fees to the officers of the court, or as remuneration to counsel and solicitors for work done. Costs may roughly be divided into the following heads: (1) Non-contentious costs, i.e., costs for preparing legal documents, conveyances of property, and advising; (2) costs in litigation. Costs under both these heads are regulated by various official scales.

Costs under the second head are divided into two kinds, one called "party and party" costs and the other called "solicitor and client" costs. "Party and party" costs are the costs of the actual proceedings in court, including all fees paid to the court in the matter and charges made by barrister and solicitor: but they do not, however, include all the costs which a solicitor charges against his client, such latter charges being called "solicitor and client" costs.

The costs incurred on both sides in an action are in the discretion of the judge but are usually awarded to the litigants who recover judgment. The judges, especially in the Chancery Division, frequently award costs as between solicitor and client. All costs are subject to taxation by officers of the court called "taxing masters": thus, any client who may think that a bill of costs rendered against him by his solicitor is exorbitant, has always the right to have them taxed.

In the case of a plaintiff being resident out of the jurisdiction, he must give security for costs, the amount being fixed by the court. In the case of clients out of the jurisdiction instructing a solicitor in a matter, especially on a litigious matter, the usual practice is for the client to remit a provision for costs.

Days of Grace. — See Bills of Exchange, Promissory Notes and Checks.

Deeds. — A deed is a formal document on paper or parchment duly signed, sealed, and delivered. Deeds can be either made between two or more persons in different interests or may be a deed poll made by a single person, or by two or more persons having similar interests. Deeds are in use for various purposes; for instance, a power of attorney is a deed poll, and a marriage settlement is made by deed. Deeds are chiefly in use for the purpose of conveying or mortgaging or otherwise dealing with real property; a deed must be under seal and the execution attested by a witness.

Depositions. — If a witness lives out of the United Kingdom and is unwilling or unable to attend at the trial of an action in England, his evidence can be taken by the appointment of a special examiner or commissioner. The commission is granted by means of an application to the court supported by an affidavit explaining the necessity of the examination. The court has the discretion to grant or refuse the application. To induce the court to allow a party to the action, especially if it is the plaintiff, to be examined on commission, very strong evidence of the necessity must be given. If a witness resides in some colony or place under the dominion of His Majesty, a writ in the nature of a mandamus or commission may issue to the judges of any court there for his examination, and in this case the judge to whom the commission is directed may compel the attendance and examination of the witness. The judge may appoint an examiner to take the evidence instead of taking it himself.

Where any foreign or colonial court or tribunal desires evidence of witnesses in England for use in any civil, commercial, or criminal matter pending before it, and it is anticipated that the witnesses may not voluntarily give evidence, advantage may be taken of the Foreign Tribunals Evidence Act (1856), The Extradition Act (1870), and The Evidence by Commission Act (1859).

The foreign or colonial court issues a commission or letters of request, or commission rogatoire, which is usually issued to the parties to be presented by their agents in England on an application under the act applicable to the case. The application is made in a criminal matter to the judge, and in a civil matter to a master ex parte on the following evidence: An affidavit proving (1) the existence of the action or matter, and description of the court where it is pending; (2) the desire of the court to obtain the evidence and the names and description of the witnesses; and (3) the name of the examiner desired to be appointed.

Descent and Distribution of Estate. — If a person dies intestate, his real estate descends, subject to the widow's right to dower (if any), to his eldest son and his issue, and in default thereof to the other sons in order of seniority and their issue, the issue of an elder son always taking in preference to a younger son. In the event of there being no sons, the daughters take equally, or if they have died their issue takes.

In the event of the deceased leaving no issue at all his real estate descends to his heir at law. The following rules apply in ascertaining a person's heir at law: (1) Descent is traced from the last person entitled to the property otherwise than by inheritance; (2) if such person has no heir descent is traced from the last person entitled to the property; (3) the property descends to the issue of such person ad infinitum; (4) in default of issue it goes to his nearest lineal ancestor and thence back to his descendants; (5) males are preferred to females of the same degree; (6) elder males are preferred to younger males of the same degree, but females of the same degree take equally; (7) where the common ancestor is male, relatives of the half blood inherit after relatives of the whole blood of the same degree, but where the common ancestor is female they inherit after the common ancestor; (8) among ancestors the paternal line is preferred to the maternal line.

The right of dower is nowadays rarely met with, but when it arises it is a right of the widow to have usually one third of her husband's estate for life.

As regards personal property, on an intestacy such property is distributable in the manner ascertained by the Statutes of Distribution. The provisions of such statutes are briefly as follows: (1) If a husband survives he takes all the property. (2) If a wife and no descendants she takes it all if the value is under five hundred pounds. If the Estate is over that value she takes five hundred pounds plus interest at four per cent., and half the residue, the other half going to the next of kin. (3) If a wife and descendants the wife takes a third and the descendants two thirds. (4) On the death of an unmarried person the property goes to the next of kin, and if there are none, to the Crown. (5) Children take before grandchildren, but children of a deceased child and the children of deceased brothers and sisters are entitled to their parents' share. (6) In default of descendants the property will go to the father of the intestate. (7) Except in respect of the father there is no preference for the males over the females or for the elder over the younger; all take equally if of the same degree. Thus, failing a husband, wife, or descendants surviving, the property is divisible amongst the members of any one of the following classes on the failure of the class preceding it and excluding the class that follows, namely: (1) father; (2) mother, brothers, sisters, and the children of deceased brothers and sisters (taking their parents' share); (3) grandfathers and grandmothers; (4) uncles, aunts, nephews, nieces, and grandparents; (5) first cousins, and so on.

Divorce. — A decree of divorce can be obtained by a man if his wife has committed adultery. A woman cannot obtain a decree of divorce unless her husband has committed adultery coupled with other matrimonial offenses. A judicial separation can be obtained by either a husband or wife on the ground of adultery, cruelty, or willful desertion. As giving an approximate idea of the costs involved in obtaining a divorce, it is usually reckoned that in a perfectly simple, undefended case, the costs range between thirty and fifty pounds. In other undefended cases, the costs might be put at between fifty and eighty pounds. A defended divorce suit involves considerable expense. Through the medium of the rules relating to proceedings by and against poor persons, impecunious persons can get their cases carried through with a minimum of expenditure.

Frauds, Statute of (29 Car. 2, c. 3). — The main object of this statute was to take away the facilities for fraud and the temptation to perjury which arose in verbal obligations. Certain provisions in the statute have been altered by other statutes; namely, the Real Property Act (1845), and the Sale of Goods Act (1893), and these amending statutes should always be consulted when dealing with questions arising under this statute.

The following important points are dealt with by the statute: Contracts for the sale of goods of the value of ten pounds and upwards are void unless in writing, or unless there is part payment or part performance. The following contracts must be made in writing and be signed by the parties to be charged therewith or some other person authorized to sign: (1) A guarantee; (2) an agreement not to be performed within the space of one year from the making thereof; (3) an agreement by an Executor or administrator to answer damages out of his own estate; (4) an agreement made upon consideration of marriage (this does not apply to the agreement to marry); (5) an agreement for the sale of land or any interest thereunder; and (6) a lease for more than three years (this must also be under seal).

Limitation of Actions. — Most rights of action are barred by lapse of time, but the length of time varies considerably and is regulated by numerous statutes. The chief limitations as prescribed by the various statutes are as follows: Ordinary debts, six years. Claims for legacies and for interest on mortgages, etc., six years. Contracts under seal, twenty years. Civil claims for torts, six years, with the exception of the following, i.e., claims for assault, battery, wounding, and imprisonment, four years. Claims for slander, two years. Claims in respect of the share of an intestate's estate, twenty years. Claims to land tithes and to money charged on land, i.e., mortgage debts, twelve years.

There are in most cases provisions for extension of time where persons are under disability, or beyond the seas, etc. If a person guilty of fraud sets up the statute, the period of limitation runs from the time when the fraud was discovered or from the time when with due diligence it could have been discovered. Trustees have the benefit of the Statutes of limitation except when guilty of fraud. The period of limitation runs from the time when the action could first be brought. Where damage is the gist of the action, it runs from the accruing of the damage, not from the act causing it. In the case of a debt, an acknowledgment of such debt in writing, from which acknowledgment a promise to pay can be inferred, will give a further period of six years from such acknowledgment before the debt is statute barred, and a similar extension is obtained when a payment on account has been made.

Limited Liability Companies. — See Companies.

Marriage. — The law requires a public ceremony by a clergyman of the Church of England, or by a dissenting minister, or by a Roman Catholic priest, in a building registered for marriages and in the presence of the registrar, or by the registrar in his office, such marriage to be solemnized within the hours of 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. and preceded by and within three months after banns, license, or certificate have been published or obtained.

Special licenses are granted by the Archbishop of Canterbury on special grounds as a matter of discretion, or to persons of high rank. In the case of a marriage by special license no period of residence is a condition precedent, and the license may authorize marriage at any hour or in any place, whether consecrated or not. This license costs twenty-nine pounds, eight shillings.

The age for marriage is fixed at fourteen for males and twelve for females. The absence of the parents' consent does not render the marriage void, though the parents may publicly forbid the banns, in which event the publication will be void, and therefore the marriage will be void if it takes place. As a matter of practice the clergyman or other person conducting the marriage ceremony usually makes inquiry as to the parents' assent, but as a matter of law, in the absence of dissent, the assent of the parents is to be presumed. In the case of marriages with foreigners the legality of the marriage depends on whether it was celebrated in accordance with the law of the husband's domicile. In all cases where the prospective husband and wife are of different nationalities the advice of a solicitor should be sought.

Marriage Settlement. — This is an arrangement made before marriage and in consideration of it whereby real or personal property is settled for the benefit of the husband, the wife, and the issue of the marriage. The settlement must be executed prior to the marriage to be fully effectual, although a post-nuptial settlement can of course always be made, but such settlement does not protect the trust assets against creditors.

Married Women. — By virtue of the Married Women's Property Act of 1882 as enlarged by the Act of 1893, most of the disabilities attaching to coverture have been removed. A woman married since the Act of 1882 can acquire and dispose of property as if unmarried, and a woman married before the act holds property acquired by her since the act for her own use and can dispose of the same.

Married women can contract as if they were unmarried, but in case of a judgment recovered against a married woman for breach of contract, such judgment is limited to her separate estate. Married women carrying on a trade apart from their husbands can be made bankrupt. A curious anomaly as regards the law of husband and wife exists in that the husband is still liable in respect of any tort committed by the wife.

Minors. — Majority is attained at the age of twenty-one years. A minor becomes of age on the day preceding the anniversary of his birth.

Negotiable Instruments. — See Bills of Exchange, Promissory Notes and Checks.

Partnerships. — A partnership is not a juristic person, but is an association of persons carrying on business on terms arranged between the partners, and sues and is sued in the firm name. Each member of the partnership can bind the firm. A partnership must not consist of more than twenty persons for general business purposes and ten persons for banking. In case of bankruptcy creditors are paid out of the firm's assets, and have a right to resort to the private assets of the partners if the firm's assets are insufficient. By virtue of the Limited Partnership Act (1907), the members of a partnership can limit their liability to the amount of the capital they gave to the firm. The partnership name must disclose the fact of limited liability.

By the registration of Business Names Act (1916) every firm or individual having a place of business in the United Kingdom is required to effect a registration under that act in the following circumstances: —

In the case of a firm: If it adopts a trading style which does not consist of the surnames of all the partners (either with or without Christian names or initials in the case of individuals).

In the case of an individual: If he does not trade under his own surname (either with or without his Christian names or initials).

In the case of a firm or individual: If, although not coming within either of the foregoing categories, a member of the firm or the individual has at any time changed his name (except in the case of a woman, in consequence of marriage).

The particulars required to be registered are such as to fully disclose the general nature of the business and the identity and nationality of the partners or individual trader.

Patents. — Patents are now regulated by the Patents and Designs Act (1907, § 1), being as follows: (1) An application for a patent may be made by any person who claims to be the true and first inventor of an invention, whether he is a British subject or not, and whether alone or jointly with any other person. (2) The application must be made in the prescribed form and must be left at or posted to the Patent Office in the prescribed manner. (3) The application must contain a declaration to the effect that the applicant is in possession of an invention whereof he, or, in the case of a joint application, one at least of the applicants, claims to be the true and first inventor and for which he desires to obtain a patent, and must be accompanied by either a provisional or complete specification. (4) The declaration required by this section may be either a statutory declaration or not as may be prescribed. The duration of a patent is fourteen years and is maintained in force by annual renewal premiums after the end of the fourth year. The court can extend the term on the application of the patentee. Letters patent can be assigned, such assignment being by deed. The Register of Patents is kept at the Patent Office and all assignments, licenses, amendments, revocations, and other matters affecting the patent are there recorded. If a person lends money on the security of a patent, the lender should previously have search made for any notice of charge and also see that the fact of his loan is duly recorded.

Powers of Attorney. — A power of attorney must be made by deed, i. e., under seal. It is revocable either by act of the donor or by his death, but by sections 8 and 9 of the Conveyancing Act (1882) it can be made irrevocable, either absolutely or for a limited period according as it is for valuable consideration or not.

Prize Law. — Proceedings in prize are regulated by the following statutes, namely, the Naval Prize Act (1864), the Prize Court Act (1894), the Prize Courts Procedure Act (1914), and the Prize Courts Act (1915), and rules made thereunder. The Prize Court sits in London.

Promissory Notes. — See Bills of Exchange, Promissory Notes and Checks.

Trade-Marks. — Trade-marks are regulated by the Trade-Marks Act (1905), and the rules made thereunder. A trade-mark must contain or consist of at least one of the following essential particulars: (1) The name of the company, individual, or firm represented in the special or particular manner. (2) The signature of the applicant for registration or some predecessor in his business. (3) An invented word or invented words. (4) A word or words having no direct reference to the character or quality of the goods and not being, according to its ordinary signification, geographical name or a surname. (5) Any other distinctive mark; but a name, signature, or a word or words, other than such as fall within the descriptions in the above paragraph, will not, except by order of the Board of Trade at the court, be deemed a distinctive mark. A trade-mark must be registered at the Patent Office, and unless so registered no infringement can be restrained. The fee for registration is one pound.

War Legislation. — Since August, 1914, a volume of emergency legislation has been passed considerably affecting the laws as they existed up to the commencement of the war. For instance, a landlord can no longer distrain for rent except by leave of the court, nor can execution on a judgment for a debt incurred before the war be levied except by similar means. No company, be it public or private, can issue capital for subscription except by leave of the Government.

Wills. — Any adult person can make a will provided he is of sound mind. Minors cannot dispose of their property by will. Now subject, however, to the exceptions made by the Wills (Soldiers and Sailors) Act, 1918 (7 & 8 Geo., 5, c. 58.) Wills must be made in writing and must be signed at the foot or end by the testator, or by some other person in his presence and by his direction, and such signature must be made or acknowledged by the testator in the presence of two or more witnesses present at the same time, and such witnesses must attest and subscribe the will in the presence of the testator and in the presence of each other. A will speaks from the death of the testator and property acquired by him up to the date of his death can pass under it. Marriage revokes a will made before marriage except in certain cases when it was made under or in pursuance of a power of appointment. If a person taking a benefit under a will is a witness, he forfeits such benefit. After a will has been proved it is registered at the Wills Registry, London, and can be inspected by any one on payment of a fee of one shilling.

LAWS OF SCOTLAND.

Revised October 1, 1918, by William Gibson & Co., Solicitors, Glasgow, Scotland.

Accounts. — Where an action is founded on an account, a fully itemized copy of the account should be sent with instructions.

Actions. — Civil actions are commenced by service on the defender of a petition, writ, or summons, and they are brought either in the outer house of the Supreme Court, or in the Sheriff or County Courts. The Supreme Court has jurisdiction over the whole of Scotland, and each Sheriff Court over its particular sheriffdom or county. The Sheriff Court has privative or exclusive jurisdiction in most cases not exceeding fifty pounds (two hundred and fifty dollars) exclusive of interest and expenses. The principal grounds of jurisdiction are: (1) Residence of the defender for forty days within the jurisdiction. (2) Where the defender carries on business within the jurisdiction. (3) The possession by defender of real estate within the jurisdiction; but, in the Sheriff Court, the action must relate to such estate. (4) Arrestment, within the jurisdiction, of a ship or vessel or goods or other personal property belonging to the defender. (5) Where the action relates to a contract the place of execution of which is within the jurisdiction and the defender is personally cited there. (6) Where the action arises out of the delict of the defender within the jurisdiction and he is personally cited there. (7) Where the party sued is the pursuer in any action pending within the jurisdiction against the party suing. In the case of a foreign pursuer, the defender is entitled to insist on a mandatory who is a resident of Scotland and who will be responsible for the costs of the action. (See also Appeals and Courts.)

Administration of Estates of Deceased Persons. — Probate, or, as it is called in this country, confirmation, is issued (1) to the executors nominated in the will, (2) to any general donee or universal legatory or residuary legatee so nominated. Where there is no will, the order of preference is (1) next of kin, (2) widow, (3) creditors, and (4) special legatees. This is subject to the right in some circumstances of certain statutory beneficiaries; e.g., the father, mother, husband, or wife to rank along with, or immediately after, the next of kin. A consul, vice-consul, or consular agent of a foreign state, which extends a similar privilege to this country, may apply for the administration of the estate of a subject of such state dying in this country where no person is present entitled to administer such estate.

Affidavits. — Affidavits are only permitted where authorized by statute. Under the bankruptcy statutes, they are required to be made by creditors who have claims against the bankrupt estate. In the case of a foreign creditor, they may be made before a magistrate or justice of the peace or other person qualified to administer oaths in the country where the creditor resides, and the official character of the officer must be certified by a British minister or British consul or by a notary public; or the affidavit may be made by the creditor's known agent or mandatory in this country. An affidavit is not required as a preliminary to raising an action in this country.

Aliens. — Subject to the exceptional conditions imposed by the present war, an alien may hold real and personal estate and carry on business as freely as a natural-born subject, except that he is not entitled to be registered as owner of a British ship. A certificate of naturalization may be obtained on production of evidence of residence for five years in the United Kingdom, or of service under the Crown for that period, and that the applicant intends, on being naturalized, either to reside in the United Kingdom or serve under the Crown. The effect of naturalization is to entitle the recipient to all political and other rights and privileges to which a natural-born subject is entitled, the only qualification being that the recipient shall not, when within the limits of the foreign state of which he was a subject previous to obtaining the certificate of naturalization, be deemed to be a British subject, unless he has ceased to be a subject of that state by the laws thereof or in accordance with a treaty to that effect.

Appeals. — In the Sheriff Court there may, in general, be an appeal from the judgment of the sheriff substitute to the sheriff principal, except in the Small Debt branch of this court in which there is no appeal unless on very special grounds. There may also be an appeal from the judgment of either the sheriff substitute or the sheriff principal to the inner house of the Supreme Court in cases where the value of the cause is over fifty pounds (two hundred and fifty dollars). In the Supreme Court the judgment of an outer house judge may in most cases be appealed to one or other of the divisions of the inner house. The final appeal that may be taken is to the House of Lords, where a judgment of the inner house of the Supreme Court may be reviewed. (See also Actions and Courts.)

Arrest. — Arrest and imprisonment for debt have been abolished except for certain taxes, fines, and assessments and for sums decerned for aliment. It is still competent to obtain a warrant to imprison on failure to implement an order of the court ordaining the performance of a specific act; e.g., delivery. A warrant may also be obtained for the arrest of a debtor who is about to abscond, but the debt must be one of those in which imprisonment is still competent.

Assignments for Behoof of Creditors. — See Bankruptcy.

Attachment. — Attachment of personal property, belonging to a debtor and in the hands of a third party, proceeds on a warrant of the court, and is competent either after a judgment of the court is obtained against the debtor or at the time of raising an action. In the latter case the warrant is obtained as a matter of course before the summons is served, and the attachment is made to await the result of the action. An attachment may be recalled either on consignment or on cause being shewn to the court why it should be recalled.

Bankruptcy. — Sequestration is the judicial process by which the estate of a bankrupt debtor may be realized and divided among his creditors. The proceedings commence by a petition to the court, either by the debtor himself with the concurrence of one or more creditors whose debt or debts amount to not less than fifty pounds (two hundred and fifty dollars), or by such creditor or creditors. If the debtor's assets do not exceed three hundred pounds (fifteen hundred dollars) the petition may be by the debtor without the concurrence of a creditor, or by one creditor whose claim is ten pounds (fifty dollars) or upwards, or by two or more creditors whose claims in the aggregate amount to that sum. If the petition be by a creditor or creditors, a condition precedent is that the debtor must be "notour bankrupt"; e.g., insolvency concurring with a duly executed charge for payment followed by the expiry of the days of charge without payment. If the petition be by the debtor, or with his concurrence, the court awards sequestration forthwith, and if not by the debtor, notice of the petition is served on the debtor and thereafter sequestration is awarded, unless the debtor shows cause why it should not be awarded, or pays the debts on the strength of which the petition was presented. Thereafter the creditors elect a trustee who acquires right to the estate for distribution, and over whom the court exercises a supervision. The election of the trustee must be confirmed by the court and the trustee must find caution to the satisfaction of the court. To entitle a creditor to participate in dividends, his claim, fully itemised and sworn to and accompanied by any vouchers necessary to prove the debt, must be lodged with the trustee. (See Affidavits.)

A voluntary assignment may be made by a debtor in favor of a trustee for behoof of his creditors, and, provided all the creditors concur in the trust deed, this is often a convenient method of winding up an insolvent estate. It is liable to be superseded by sequestration on the part of non-concurring creditors, and there may be circumstances in which sequestration should be resorted to. A creditor who has not concurred in the trust deed may accept payment of a dividend to account of his debt. The court does not exercise supervision over the trustee under a voluntary assignment, except that his accounts are audited and his commission fixed by an officer of court; in the event of the trust deed not providing for this being done by a committee of the creditors.

Bills and Notes. — The law on this subject was codified under a statute passed in 1832, which applies to the whole of the United Kingdom. In Scotland, if payment of a bill has not been made on the due date, a notary public notes the bill and executes a protest. On the protest being recorded in the court books, an extract may be obtained which is equivalent to a judgment of the court and contains a warrant to proceed with execution upon a charge of six days. (See Limitation.)

Companies. — The law on this subject was codified under a statute passed in 1908, which applies to the whole of the United Kingdom. Any seven or more persons may form a public company, and any two or more persons may form a private company, with or without limited liability. A private company is one which by its articles (1) restricts the right to transfer its shares, (2) limits the number of its members (excluding employees) to fifty, and (3) prohibits any invitation to the public to subscribe for any shares or debentures of the company. A private company is exempt from certain requirements regarding filing reports, etc., with the Registrar of Joint-Stock Companies.

Courts. — The Supreme Court of Scotland is the Court of Session, which consists of an inner house and an outer house. The inner house is practically an appellate court and is divided into two divisions, viz.: the first division and the second division, each division consisting of four judges and having coördinate authority. In each division the four judges sit together, and, in cases of special importance, the whole of the judges of the two divisions may sit together. The outer house consists of five judges, before one or other of whom an action originating in the Court of Session is brought in the first instance. Each county has at least one Sheriff Court and each court has one or more sheriff substitutes and one sheriff principal, the latter being mainly a judge of appeal from the sheriff substitutes. There is a Small Debt branch of the Sheriff Court for trying cases not exceeding twenty pounds (one hundred dollars) in value. The Sheriff Court is a competent court for issuing confirmation or probate.

Deeds. — Deeds should be subscribed by the grantor on each page, in presence of two witnesses, who should either actually see the grantor sign or hear him acknowledge his signature. The witnesses may be male or female, but must be over fourteen years of age, and not subject to any legal incapacity, and they should sign their names as witnesses on the last page of the deed. Their designations should either be inserted in the testing clause (i.e., the last clause containing date and other particulars of signing) or the designations should be appended to their signatures. It is inadvisable that a husband or wife should act as witness to the other's signature or that a witness should have any interest in the deed. Two witnesses are sufficient for any number of grantors, provided the latter sign or acknowledge their signatures at the same time, in which case the witnesses need only sign their names once.

If the deed is in the handwriting of the grantor no witnesses are necessary, but as a rule such deeds do not prove their own dates, and the question whether the handwriting is that of the grantor usually requires to be proved.

Where the grantor is unable to write, the deed may be executed on his behalf by a notary public or justice of the peace (or, in the case of a will, by a parish minister acting as notary public in his own parish) before two witnesses, and a docquet in statutory form is appended to the deed.

Depositions. — The courts may appoint a commissioner to take evidence in cases where witnesses are resident abroad. Instructions accompany the commission for the guidance of the commissioner.

Descent and Distribution. — Real Estate. — Subject to the rights of a wife and husband, to be afterwards noticed, the whole real estate may be bequeathed to any person. In intestacy, the principal rules are the succession of males and their issue in the order of seniority; representation of parents by their children; preference of males, and failing males equal division among females. Subject to the said rights of wife and husband the order of succession is (first) the eldest son and his issue, male and female in their order; next, the second son and his issue, male and female in their order; and so on through all the sons with their issue in their order; and when the succession opens to females they succeed equally, the issue of any female predeceasing taking their mother's place. Failing male issue and their issue, the female issue of the intestate succeed equally, the issue of each daughter coming into their mother's place in the order of male and female, as before stated. Failing the descending line (i.e., children, grandchildren and their descendants), the succession opens to collaterals (i.e., brothers and sisters of the intestate). In the collateral line, the succession, after descending as far as possible, ascends; e.g., on the death of a middle brother, it goes to his younger brothers in their order, downwards, and not to the elder brothers, and on the death of the youngest brother it goes to the next elder brother and so upwards, transmission to issue of a predeceaser entitled to succeed taking place in each case. Failing both descendants and collaterals, the estate goes to the father and his relations and never to the mother and her relations. On the failure of all the three lines of succession stated, the Crown succeeds as ultimate heir.

Independently of whether there is a will or not, a wife is entitled to a life-rent of one third of the whole real estate left by her husband and to which he had a complete title, unless excluded by the wife's acceptance of a conventional provision, and the real estate is also liable, either to the full extent or proportionately, to make up the five hundred pounds to which she is entitled in the circumstances hereafter dealt with under "personal estate"; and a husband is entitled to a life-rent of the whole of the real estate left by his wife which she acquired by succession and in which she had a complete title, provided the marriage has produced a child which shall have been heard to cry.

Personal Estate. — A bequest of deceased's personal estate is subject to the following legal rights, which cannot be defeated unless they are expressly renounced or conventional provisions in the will or other deed are accepted on condition that these rights are given up: The surviving spouse (i.e., husband or wife) is entitled to one third in the event of there being surviving children, and one half should there be no such children. The surviving children of a deceasing parent are entitled to one third equally among them in the event of the other parent surviving, and one half in the event of the other parent not surviving. This right in the children does not descend to issue of a predeceasing child.

On intestacy the division is as follows: Where intestate leaves widow and no issue, the widow has a preferable claim to five hundred pounds (twenty-five hundred dollars), which is payable proportionately out of the real and personal estate and which is in addition to the life-rent of one third of real estate before mentioned, and she is also entitled to one half of remainder of personal estate, the other half going to next of kin. If the whole net value of the real and personal estate does not exceed five hundred pounds (twenty-five hundred dollars) the widow takes the whole absolutely; where husband and no children, one half to husband, other half to next of kin; where spouse and children, one third to spouse and two thirds to children equally; where spouse and children and issue of predeceasing children, one third to spouse, one third to children, and one third to children and issue of predeceasing children, the issue taking their parents' shares equally; where no spouse, all to children equally, and where children and issue of predeceasing children, one half to children and the other half to children and issue of predeceasing children; where no descendants, brothers and sisters german and their descendants, but if father survives he gets one half, and if mother survives and father predeceases she gets one third, both in preference to brothers and sisters or their descendants or other next of kin; where no brothers and sisters german, whole to father; where all these fail, brothers and sisters uterine (i.e. by same mother but not same father) get one half; the father's brothers and sisters come next, then their descendants, and then the father's father, and so on, the Crown taking ultimately failing all relations.

If the heir to the real estate takes that estate, he is not, as a rule, entitled to share in the personal estate, but he has the option of adding the real estate to the personal estate and taking his share of the mixed estate as one of the next of kin.

Illegitimate children do not succeed to their father and mother if the latter leave no will. When an illegitimate child dies without a will and leaves neither wife nor children, his estate falls to the Crown.

Divorce. — Divorce is obtainable on one or other of two grounds, viz.: (1) adultery, and (2) wilful desertion for four years. Evidence must be led whether the action is defended or not. Apart from denial, the following defenses are recognized: (1) collusion, (2) condonation, and (3) connivance. (See also Marriage.)

Execution. — Execution is of two kinds: (1) against the person, and (2) against property. As to the former see Arrest. As to the latter, it may either be against the real estate or the personal estate.

Interest. — Interest is not as a rule exigible on mercantile accounts before Action is taken.

Limitations. — Limitation of bills of exchange and promissory notes is six years running from the date on which the amount of the bill is exigible, and of merchants' accounts and similar debts, not founded on written obligations, it is three years, running from the date of the last bona fide entry of goods in the account. Action taken within these respective periods prevents the limitation taking effect. Failure to take such action does not absolutely bar the creditor's claim but limits the proof of the debt to the writ or oath of the debtor.

Marriage. — Marriage according to the law of Scotland requires no particular solemnity, nor even written evidence, but deliberate and unconditional consent. The consent of parents or of guardians is not required. The male must be not less than fourteen and the female not less than twelve years of age. Where the marriage is celebrated by a clergyman, it is known as a "regular marriage," and where not so celebrated it is known as an "irregular marriage." No irregular marriage is valid unless one of the parties has lived in Scotland twenty-one days next preceding it, or has at the time usually resided there. Within three months after an irregular marriage, the parties may jointly apply to the sheriff for a warrant to register the marriage, which is granted upon proof of marriage and residence. The marriage is thereafter registered in the Register of Marriages, and a certificate of registration by the registrar is evidence of the marriage in all courts in the United Kingdom and its Dominions. Impotence is a ground of nullity. (See also Divorce.)

Married Women. — Wages and earnings of a wife in any employment, occupation, or trade, or in any business carried on in her own name, and any money or property acquired through the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill, are protected from the husband's rights and are capable of being discharged by the wife alone, and in marriages contracted after 18th July, 1881, the whole personal estate acquired by the wife either before or during marriage belongs to her absolutely. The income of such estate may be paid to her on her own receipt, but she is not entitled to assign prospective income, nor to dispose of such estate, without her husband's consent. The consent of the husband is also necessary to any deed relating to the wife's real estate, unless the necessity for such consent has been effectually excluded. The liability of husband for wife's ante-nuptial debts is limited to amount of property received through her. As a rule, a personal obligation granted by a married woman is not valid, but there are certain exceptions; e.g., when it relates to her own estate.

Notaries Public. — Notaries public are admitted by the Supreme Court acting for the Crown, and the appointment is for life, or until the commission of a serious fault, when the court may deprive the delinquent of his office. An official register of notaries public is kept. Any solicitor is entitled to be admitted as a notary.

Partnership. — In Scotland, a firm is a legal person distinct from the partners; every partner is liable jointly and severally for all debts and obligations of the firm incurred while he is a partner. The members of a partnership must not exceed ten, if formed for carrying on banking, and twenty, if for any other business. Limited partnerships may now be formed in terms of statute, and require to be registered. These must not consist of more persons than in the case of an ordinary partnership, as already mentioned, and there must be one or more general partners, who shall be liable for all the debts and obligations of the firm, and one or more limited partners, who must contribute capital, but whose liability does not extend beyond their contributions, so long as they do not take part in the management of the firm.

Wills. — Wills must be in writing, the only exception being that a verbal legacy not exceeding eight pounds, six shillings, eight pence (say forty dollars) is good. No special form is necessary, and it is sufficient if the will be attested in the same way as other written instruments. (See Deeds.) If executed according to the forms of the country where it is made, it may convey both real and personal estate in Scotland, provided it can be clearly ascertained from its terms that the intention of the testator was to convey both real and personal estate.

Males under fourteen and females under twelve years of age are incapable of making a will. Males or females above these ages respectively, but under twenty-one years of age, can dispose of personal estate by will, but cannot so dispose of real estate. (See also Descent and Distribution.)

LAWS OF FRANCE.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Oliver E. Bodington, Licence en Droit of the University of Paris, Member of the United States Federal Bar, Barrister at Law of the Inner Temple.

Actions. — A civil action is begun by the service of an assignation (equivalent to summons and complaint) upon the defendant. Personal service is not indispensable. Service is effected by an official process-server or huissier, who can serve either the party or a relative or servant; or if none of these are found, then a neighbor or the mayor of the commune. All documents served otherwise than personally must be delivered in a sealed envelope containing on the outside only the seal of the process-server and the name and address of the party. Service on defendants having no domicile or residence in France is effected through the office of the public attorney, who forwards them through diplomatic channels to the address of the defendant abroad. The ordinary time for entering appearance is eight clear days, but this period is increased, in the case of defendants residing out of France, by a further period varying with the distance. In the case of the United States, it is five months. (These periods are doubled in wartime.) As personal service is not indispensable, the elaborate rules prescribed by American law for substituted service do not exist.

Actions, Commercial. — Commercial actions go before special commercial courts, tribunals of merchants chosen by election. These courts have jurisdiction over all transactions between merchants, traders and bankers, partners and stockholders of commercial corporations, and over transactions deemed to be commercial between all parties whether traders or not. The Code of Commerce contains a definition of what are deemed to be commercial transactions. In the commercial courts there are no attorneys of record, so that a special power is required to be given to the attorney selected.

Costs. — The successful plaintiff is awarded costs, but taxable costs in France are of a trivial amount, and the emoluments of the avoué, who corresponds to the solicitor, and of the avocat, who corresponds to the barrister, are not taxable against the defendant in the event of success.

Security for Costs. — This is required from a foreign plaintiff both in actions before the civil court and also of recent years in commercial actions. (Law of March 5, 1895.) The amount of the security is in the discretion of the court.

Administration of Estates of Deceased Persons. — There is no equivalent in French law for the peculiar jurisdiction of the probate court in England as successor of the ecclesiastical courts, or the probate courts in America. The property of the deceased, personal as well as real, devolves ipso facto upon the legitimate and natural heirs. Only indirect heirs are obliged to apply to the court for delivery of possession. Consequently there is no special provision for cutting off the recourse of a claimant against the estate of a deceased person by publication, accounting, and discharge, as under the surrogate's practice. Claims against the estates of deceased persons are regulated by the ordinary principles of limitation of actions dealt with infra. The heirs are liable for the debts of the estate even beyond the extent of the assets thereof unless they have protected themselves by a special proceeding known as "acceptance under benefit of inventory," such as exists in the law of the State of Louisiana. Minors are represented by their guardians, acting under the supervision of the family council and the court; married women by their husbands. In cases of difficulty, or where there is no heir upon whom the estate devolves, or in the case of absent heirs, the court will appoint its own administrator or curator, but this is exceptional and not the ordinary proceeding. In practice and in ordinary cases the settlement of the estate is effected in the office of a notary, who is made custodian of the will, where there is one, under an order of court, who makes the inventory of the assets and liabilities of the estate, and who is commonly charged by the relatives with the collection of the assets and the payment of the liabilities, and who draws up the deed of partition of the estate, which must be confirmed by the court only under special circumstances, such as when there are amongst the heirs infants or incapables.

Bills of Exchange and Negotiable Instruments. — Bills of exchange are regulated by the Code of Commerce, checks by a special law of the 14th of June, 1865. Bills of exchange could formerly only be drawn from one place on another. Now they can be drawn from one place on the same place.

Bills of exchange must be dated and state the amount to be paid, the name of the payee, the time and place of payment, the consideration, that is to say cash, goods, account, etc. They may be drawn to the order of a third party or to the order of the drawer. If drawn in series each bill must be marked first, second, third, etc. Bills of exchange containing supposititious names or descriptions are deemed to be mere promises. Acceptance must be in writing. The drawer and the indorsers of a bill are joint and several guarantors of its acceptance and of its payment upon due date. Refusal to accept a bill is recorded by a protest in default of acceptance, whereupon the indorsers and the drawer are called upon to give security for the payment of the bill when due. The acceptor of a bill is bound to pay it. He cannot avoid this obligation even if the drawer has become bankrupt without his knowing it before acceptance. The acceptance of a bill must be in writing signed and dated, except in the case of sight bills. No condition can be attached to acceptance of a bill except that the amount for which it is accepted can be restricted. If a bill falls due on a legal holiday, it is payable on the first working day following. This applies to promissory notes and all negotiable paper. All days of grace are abolished.

A bill is transmitted by indorsement. Indorsements must be dated and express the consideration and the name of the person to whose order the bill is passed. If the indorsement fails to fulfill this condition, it does not convey the bills, it only acts as a power of attorney.

Ante-dating bills is punished as forgery. All those who have signed, accepted, or indorsed a bill are jointly and severally liable toward the holder. The holder of a bill cannot be bound to receive payment before it is due. In case an unaccepted bill is lost, payment can be demanded on the second, third, fourth, etc., of the series. If the lost bill was accepted, this can be done only by permission of the judge or by giving security. In case of refusal to pay, protest must be made on the day following the due date, which must be notified to the drawer and the indorsers. Partial payment of a bill discharges the drawer and the indorsers to that extent, but the holder must make a protest in regard to the surplus. The holder must demand payment within three months, or conversely, in the case of a bill drawn in continental Europe and payable in France within six months for bills drawn in the United States on France, or conversely; within a year in the case of more remote countries. Otherwise he loses his recourse against the indorsers and also against the drawer, if the latter has made provision for the bill. Death or bankruptcy of the drawee of the bill does not dispense with the necessity of protest. The payee can proceed either individually against the drawer and each of the indorsers or collectively against the indorsers and the drawer. In case of individual recourse against the last indorser, protest must be notified to him.

Bills drawn from France on the United States, after being duly protested, can be proceeded on as against the drawers and indorsers residing in France after a period of five months. If the holder fails to proceed within the above periods, he loses his recourse against the indorsers.

Protests are made either by two notaries, a notary and two witnesses, or by a huissier and two witnesses. Copy of the protest must be served on the debtor. Protest must comprise a complete transcript of the bill, its acceptance and the indorsements, demand for payment, a note of the presence or absence of the payee, and reasons of his refusal to pay.

Promissory Notes. — The same rules apply generally to promissory notes. The distinction between the two is that a bill of exchange is always commercial paper and subject to the jurisdiction of the commercial court, whereas a promissory note only comes within the jurisdiction of the commercial court if it has been signed by a trader.

Checks are defined as an order of payment of all or a portion of the monies for which the drawer is credited in the account of the drawee for his own benefit or for the benefit of a third party. A check must be signed by the drawer and dated. It can be drawn only at sight and can be drawn either to bearer or in favor of a person named. The issue of a check is not a commercial operation, but the provisions of the Commercial Code relating to the joint and several guarantee of the drawer and indorsers and protest are also applicable to checks. The payee of a check must claim payment thereof within five days of its date if the check is payable in the place where it was drawn; within eight days if it is drawn in one place and payable in another; otherwise recourse against the indorsers is forfeited. Crossed checks, as we know them, were authorized by a law of the 30th of December, 1911. Crossing may be either general or special. By a law of the 26th of January, 1917, stock-brokers are assimilated to bankers in respect of crossed checks.

Chattel Mortgages. — Chattel mortgages do not exist except in the cases of pledge involving actual or constructive delivery of the chattel to the debtor. A recent law has, however, authorized bills of sale of a commercial business (which, however, only includes chattels if the deed executed so stipulates), by means of a duly recorded deed filed in the registry of the commercial court of the locality where the business is carried on. Separate consideration must be stipulated for the incorporeal elements of the business and for the chattels.

By a law of the 8th of August, 1913, an inn-keeper is authorized to borrow on the chattels used in his business with the exception of fixtures, although he himself remains in possession of the premises. This is effected by a bill of sale and also filed in the registry of the commercial court of the locality. The usual provisions exist for warranting goods in bonded warehouses.

Contracts. — The essentials of the law of contract are dealt with by the Code under the head of obligations. The essentials of an agreement are: 1st, consent of the parties; 2d, capacity to contract; 3d, definite subject-matter; 4th, lawful consideration. Duress or fraud vitiate consent. Mistake is only a cause of avoidance when it bears on the substance of the thing affected. Motives of filial obedience are not equivalent to duress. Fraud is only a cause of avoidance when it is obvious that without it the other party would not have contracted. Incapacity to contract arises in the case of infants, persons deprived of their civil rights by "interdiction," and married women, in cases provided by law. An obligation without consideration or resting upon a false or an unlawful consideration is void, but it is not necessary to express the consideration in the agreement.

The obligation to deliver is complete by consent of the parties and the creditor is owner of the object of the contract as from the moment when delivery should have been made, even without tradition.

The remedy for breach of any obligation to perform an act or not to perform an act is in damages only. Hence no action for specific performance in the Anglo-Saxon sense lies in France. Damages can only be claimed after the debtor has been put upon notice to fulfill his obligation. Damages are not due in case the debtor has been prevented from fulfilling his obligation by force majeure or inevitable accident. Generally speaking, war is not of itself a case of force majeure. It is so only in case it makes the fulfillment of the obligation absolutely impossible, not when it only makes it more difficult. Force majeure when it affects a contract generally speaking does not suspend it, but dissolves it altogether. The measure of damages is in general the loss sustained by the creditor and the profit of which he has been deprived. Damages in the case of non-payment of a sum of money are restricted to the legal interest thereon, i.e., four per cent. in civil, five per cent. in commercial causes.

Special War Legislation. — A law of 21st January, 1918, provides that for the duration of the war and three months afterwards commercial contracts for the delivery of goods and merchandise may be set aside or suspended with or without damages, on the application of one or other of the parties, if it is proved that by reason of the state of war the fulfillment of the obligations of one or other of the contracting parties involves charges or causes damage such as exceed what could have been reasonably foreseen when the contract was made.

Form and Proof of Obligations. — 1st Actes authentiques, or so-called "authentic" deeds, which are deeds executed in the presence of public officials specially qualified for that purpose, in the main notaries, whose functions are very important in French law. (See "notaries public" infra.) The Code prescribes that the contents of an authentic deed are indefeasible except by a special proceeding known as inscription de faux, that is to say, an express averment of the falsity of the document by means of a special and complex proceeding. Judicial decisions have, however, laid down that resort to this proceeding need only be had for the purpose of controverting statements alleged in the deed made by the notary himself or of things which happened in his presence or of facts within his personal knowledge. Certified copies with the "executory formula" attached (known as the grosse) entitle the creditor to levy execution under them without any judicial proceeding.

Private agreements require: 1st, signature; 2d, as many originals as there are parties separately interested; 3d, the addition of a formula of approval such as "good," or "approved," or "read and approved," in case the body of the deed is not in the handwriting of the party signing it. A private agreement produced against the party who has acknowledged his signature, or whose signature is deemed to be acknowledged, has the same value between the parties as an authentic deed. The main difference between the two is that in the former case the presumption is in favor of the instrument, in the latter case the presumption is against the instrument, and signature must be proved if denied. Private agreements can be set up against third parties and form indefeasible proof of their date only when they have been subjected to a formality known as enregistrement, or registration in a Government office, involving payment of duties varying with the nature of the instrument and amount of consideration. Their date may also be fixed by the death of one of the parties or by recital of the contents in a public document. These rules are relaxed to a certain extent in regard to commercial contracts, the date of which in particular may be established even without registration.

Every transaction involving a larger sum than one hundred and fifty francs must be proved by writing either in the form of a private agreement or authentic deed. Oral testimony can, however, be admitted where there is a commencement of written proof. Writing is not necessary to prove obligations arising out of quasi-contracts or torts.

Copyright. — Copyright is described in French law as literary and artistic property or colloquially authors' rights (droits d'auteur). It bears upon literary, musical, and artistic works, in which latter category are included the work of painters, draftsmen, sculptors, architects, and photographers. Collaborators have concurrent rights. Under the present law the duration of the protection is during the life of the author and a fixed term of fifty years after his death. Authors' rights are assignable, and no particular form is required for this assignment. Publishing contracts are, of course, the classic example of such assignments. The main conditions of such contracts are defined not by the law, but by regulations of the Authors' Society. The possession of a photographic negative does not comprise the right of reproduction.

Copyright is secured by filing two copies of a book and three copies of engravings, music, photographs, etc., at the Ministry of the Interior in Paris or the préfecture or sub-préfecture in the Departments. The legal effect of the filing is not to secure priority for the work, but to manifest the intention of the author to preserve the exclusive enjoyment of it. The author can take no action, civil or criminal, on the copyright unless the work has been thus deposited. Sculptors and painters are not subject to this formality.

Infringement may be either partial or total. The existence of infringement is a question of fact for the court. Good faith rules out a criminal remedy, but not a civil remedy. A translation is subject to copyright for the benefit of the translator.

Adaptation for the stage can only be effected with the consent of the author.

share devolving upon each heir is deemed to have been vested in him as from the date of the death.

Estate duty is payable on the share of each heir and varies according to the degree of relationship and the amount of the share from a quarter of one per cent. in the case of estates not exceeding two thousand francs where the deceased leaves three living children to thirty-six per cent. in the case of very large estates devolving on strangers in blood.

Inheritance Taxes. — See Descent and Distribution of Estates.

Limitations. — The normal period for limitation of actions real and personal is thirty years. An action for recovery of real property occupied in good faith is limited by ten years, if the true owner resides within the jurisdiction of the court of appeal in which the property is situated, by twenty years if he resides elsewhere; by six months, actions of professors for lessons given by them, of innkeepers for board and lodging of guests, of workmen for payment of their wages and salaries; by one year, actions by huissiers or process-servers for their emoluments; by school-keepers for the tuition of their pupils and by employers for apprenticeship fees, and by servants who are engaged by the year. By two years, actions by doctors, surgeons, dentists, midwives and druggists for their visits, operations, and drugs supplied; also actions by tradesmen for goods supplied to non-traders; also actions of avoués, that is, solicitors, for the payment of their costs. By five years, actions for payment of sums due to notaries.

In the above cases the action is statute-barred, although goods continue to be supplied or services rendered and the statute can be suspended only when there is an account stated or a citation issued before a court of justice and still in force. Nevertheless, those against whom these limitations are claimed can call upon the other party to make oath as to whether payment has not really been made.

After ten years architects and contractors are discharged from their guarantee with regard to the work carried out by them. Generally speaking, the period ceases to run by acknowledgment on the part of the debtor or a citation, even though irregular in form, before a court of justice.

Generally it will not run against infants or incapables except in case of the short periods of limitation concerning innkeepers, school-teachers, etc., in which case the infants have recourse against their guardian. Limitation does not run as between husband and wife. It runs against a married woman in regard to property of which her husband has the administration subject to her recourse against him.

Married Women. — Under the law of France unless otherwise stipulated there is a general community of goods between husband and wife, which is more extensive than the community of after-acquired property existing in the law of Louisiana, inasmuch as it comprises property possessed by the husband and wife at the time of the marriage, and also real property acquired during the marriage. The husband is the head of the community and administers the property and can sell or mortgage the community property without the wife's consent. Upon dissolution of the community by death or divorce, the wife is entitled to one half. The community may, however, be modified by express contract in various ways, i.e., it may be limited to after-acquired property or the shares of the husband and wife may be unequal. In addition to the community the parties may adopt the dotal system under which the wife brings in a dowry, the administration of which is also in the hands of the husband, or the system of separation of property, under which the wife has the administration of her property movable and immovable and the free enjoyment of her income. A wife may be authorized to carry on a trade separate from her husband, but in no case can she bring an action at law without the authority of her husband, even when she is under the system of separate property, nor can she under any régime execute a deed of gift, sell or mortgage her property, without the concurrence of her husband, or in his default that of the court.

American women marrying in France should not accept a contract of séparation de biens upon the representation that it is the exact equivalent of the American system, for it gives the wife free management only, not free power of disposition.

A wife does not require the authority of her husband to make a will.

All marriage contracts must be made in solemn form before a notary and prior to the celebration of the marriage, otherwise they are void. They cannot be altered after the marriage.

A married woman, whatever system of property she is married under, has implied authority to pledge her husband's credit for necessities. Necessaries are a question of fact and circumstance as in American law.

Moratorium. — By a law of August 5, 1914, the Government was authorized to take all steps necessary to facilitate the execution or postpone the effects of commercial or civil obligations, to suspend all periods of limitations in civil, commercial, and administrative matters by means of a decree of the Council of Ministers. A series of decrees have been made in execution of this law.

By a decree of August 9, the dates of payment of all negotiable securities in which were included bills of exchange, promissory notes, checks which fall due between July 30 and September 1 were postponed for thirty days on condition that these securities were written prior to August 4, 1914. The same extension was granted for the payment of goods supplied as between traders before the same date, and also for the payment out of bank deposit against checks, also for the repayment of bonuses or insurance contracts, etc. By a further decree this was extended to payments falling due before October 1, 1914, with the reserve that in the case of bank deposits a depositor might withdraw a sum of two hundred and fifty francs and twenty per cent. of the surplus. Manufacturers whose establishments were requisitioned could withdraw the whole of their deposits. These periods have been further prolonged by successive ministerial decrees.

War Procedure. — Generally speaking the whole course of procedure is governed by special war legislation the effect of which is to arrest the operation of all statutory periods of procedure, which thus require a special order of court to set them running. This legislation, without actually arresting litigation, seriously delays its progress. No action at law can be begun or continued against a soldier with the colors unless he waves the plea of "mobilisation."

Notaries Public. — Notaries in French law exercise functions far more important than notaries in England or the United States.

All notarial deeds must be in the French language, and all deeds in a foreign language which it is desired to deposit with a notary must be accompanied by a translation, certified by a duly qualified translator. After this is done the notary can only officially certify the translation. He is forbidden to part with originals, but one or two rare instances are on record of a notary having been authorized by the court to part with an original will in English and to place on file a facsimile copy or a photograph in place thereof. A notary may give as many certified copies of deeds filed in his office as circumstances may require. Such certified copies have the same value in evidence as the originals. The notary must keep a seal with which all documents delivered by him must be sealed. He possesses also the special privilege under conditions defined by law of delivering what are known as grosses or executory copies of deeds on file at his office. Notaries are also officers of the court, particularly in regard to the formalities connected with wills and the settlement of estates. Wills presented to the court are placed on file in the office of the notary by order of court. A notary is designated to effect a judicial partition subject to confirmation by the court as well as partition by agreement between the parties. Inventories of the estates of deceased persons are made in a notary's office and the notary generally supervises all the formalities relating to the settlement of the estates of persons deceased.

Patents. — Patents are governed by the law of July 5, 1844, which has not been substantially modified. The chief characteristic of a French patent is that it is delivered without previous examination as to its validity. The examination extends only to the validity of the application in point of form. Anything can be patented in France except: (1) Pharmaceutical compositions or remedies. (2) Financial plans and combinations. For the substantial validity of the patent the law requires that it should comprise either: (1) The invention of new industrial products. (2) The invention of new means or the new application of known means to obtain a result or an industrial product. Patents are void: (1) If the discovery, invention, or application is not new. (2) If the discovery, invention, or application is a pharmaceutical product or a financial combination. (3) If the subject-matter of the patent is a scientific or theoretical principle, method, or system, the industrial application of which is not indicated. (4) If the discovery, invention, or application is contrary to public order or safety and morals or to the laws of the Republic. (5) If the application is fraudulent. (6) If the description is not sufficient to carry out the invention. A law of the 12th of April, 1916, gives the Government a right of expropriation over all inventions or applications for patents concerning the national defense in consideration of a suitable indemnity ascertained by mutual agreement or arbitration.

By the terms of a law of April 12, 1916, the Ministers of War and Marine may be authorized by decree to preëempt any invention which may be of interest to the national defense in consideration of an indemnity to be fixed by agreement or by arbitration.

An application for a patent is made to the Minister of Commerce accompanied by description of the invention and drawings in duplicate. Patents may be applied for for five years, ten years, or fifteen years maximum. In almost all cases they are applied for for fifteen years. Annuities are payable at the rate of one hundred francs yearly. Patents are forfeited in case the annuities are not punctually paid, in case the inventor has not exploited his invention or caused it to be exploited within two years and in case he has introduced into France similar articles to the articles patented. This latter provision has, however, been modified by the International Industrial Property Convention, of which France is a signatory, in case the foreign country from which the goods are imported is also a signatory of the Convention, and a law of April 7, 1902, allows a period of grace of three months for the payment of annuities in consideration of a small extra payment. The law contains a provision for certificates of addition to patents and also for improvement patents. A third party, the inventor of an improvement patent, cannot work his improvement without the consent of the inventor, the principal patentee, and reciprocally.

Patents are assignable upon the following conditions: (1) A notarial deed. (2) Registration of the deed, in the provinces at the préfecture of the Department, in Paris, at the National Office of Industrial Property. (3) Payment of all annuities on the life of the patent.

Foreigners are entitled equally with Frenchmen to take out patents in France. A patentee can grant licenses for the exploitation of his invention. No particular form is required unless the license is so exclusive and granted for so long a period as to be practically equivalent to an assignment, in which case a notarial deed is required.

Infringement is a penal offense and mere manufacture without commercial exploitation is equivalent to infringement. Infringement may be proved by seizure and description of the counterfeit articles authorized by a judge, and upon giving security. The seizure is void if it is not followed up by process before the court within eight days.

Powers of Attorney. — These are dealt with under the generic heading of Mandat, la. Agency, in the Civil Code. There is no special form for a power, which may be by a notarial deed or by private deed, by letter, or even by word of mouth, with the restriction in the latter case that it can be proved only in case there is a commencement of written evidence.

A contract is confirmed only by the acceptance of the agent, but this acceptance may be tacit. A contract of agency is gratuitous unless otherwise stipulated. It may be special or general. A power may be in general terms which only includes acts of management. For the purpose of sale or mortgage or any other act of ownership there must be express authority. The agent is bound to fulfill the power and is answerable in damages for its non-fulfillment. He must complete what has been begun at the time of the death of the principal, if there is urgent need that he should do so. The agent is bound to render an account of his management. He is answerable for his substitute when he has not received express power of substitution or when the substitute he has chosen is notoriously incapable or insolvent. The principal has a direct action against the substitute. When several agents are appointed they are not jointly and severally liable unless it is so stipulated. The principal is not bound by the acts of the agent unless he has ratified them expressly or tacitly. This rule, however, should be qualified by the statement that when an agent is appointed to act in a particular business, third parties may within certain limits presume that he possesses the powers which are ordinarily given to an agent in such business according to custom. When there is a "holding out" of this nature third parties will not be on their inquiry to ascertain that the agent has not all such powers, and usually the principal will be bound thereby even though the agent's powers are actually more restricted. The principal must reimburse to the agent his expenses and costs incurred in the execution of the power and indemnify him against the losses incurred by him without negligence on his part. The power comes to an end: (1) By the revocation of the agent by the principal. (2) By the relinquishment of the agent of his power. (3) By death of the principal or agent.

Powers of attorney are essentially revocable. There are, however, exceptional circumstances where a power is not revocable even by the death of the principal. One of these cases is where a power is given not for a matter altogether in future, but in order to complete and carry out agreements already entered into. These circumstances are, however, extremely rare.

Trade-Marks. — Trade-marks include names in a distinctive form, denominations, emblems, impressions, stamps, seals, vignettes, reliefs, letters, figures, envelopes, and any other signs serving to distinguish produce of manufacture or articles of commerce. The ownership of the mark belongs to the first user of it. Ownership does not necessarily originate with registration. Trade-marks can be assigned, and no particular form is required for the assignment except when they are assigned as part of a commercial business, when the provisions for registration of the deed of sale must be observed. The object of registration is to give notice to possible infringers and to enable the owner to proceed as exclusive owner of the mark. Registration is effected in the registry of the Tribunal of Commerce. Three copies of the mark must be filed. Registration is valid for fifteen years and is renewable. Infringement is a penal offense. Confiscation of the articles which bear the infringed mark may be ordered. Foreigners are entitled to protection of their trade-marks in France. France is a signatory of the International Property Convention of 1883, which includes trade-marks.

Wills and Gifts. — Capacity. — A minor of the age of sixteen years can dispose by will, but only of one half, of the property of which he could dispose if he were of age. A married woman may make a donation inter vivos only with the authority of her husband or the court, but she may dispose by will without the authority of either. Natural children may receive by gift inter vivos only such share as they are entitled to by succession.

Doctors, surgeons, and druggists who have treated a person during his or her last illness are incapable of receiving under the will of that person, except as universal legatees within the fourth degree of relationship where there are no direct heirs. The same applies to ministers of religion. Gifts to public institutions can be executed only when authorized by decree of the President of the Republic.

Forced Heirs. — Gifts, whether inter vivos or by will, may not exceed one half of the goods of the testator, if he leaves one legitimate child; one third, if he leaves two children; one fourth, if he leaves three children or more. A natural child lawfully acknowledged is entitled to a reserved share, which is a fraction of what he would have received if he had been legitimate, calculated upon the basis of the proportion subsisting between the share of the natural child in case of intestate succession and the share he would have received if he had been legitimate. These provisions include issue who take by representation, if there are no children. Gifts inter vivos or by will may not exceed one half the property if the deceased left one or more ascendants in the paternal and maternal line; three quarters, if he left ascendants only in one line. In default of legitimate children gifts may not exceed one half of the property, if there is one natural child, one third, if there are two, and one quarter, if there are three or more. The property thus reserved devolves upon the ascendants up to one eighth of the estate and for the rest upon the natural children. Gifts by will or deed are unrestricted in case there are no relatives in the direct line ascending or descending. Gifts which exceed the disposable portion are reducible within that proportion. Gifts inter vivos must be made by a notarial deed.

Form of Wills. — Wills are either: (1) Holographic. (2) Public. (3) Mystic.

A holographic will must be written in full, dated and signed in the hand of the testator. No other formalities are required.

A public will is a will received by two notaries in presence of two witnesses or one notary in presence of four witnesses. If the will is received by two notaries, it is dictated to them by the testator and must be written by one of the two notaries at dictation. If there is only one notary, it must also be dictated by the testator and written by the notary. In both cases it must be read over to the testator in presence of the witnesses. It must be signed by the testator, or if he is unable to sign, this must be mentioned together with the reason which prevents him signing. The will must be signed by the witnesses. Legatees, relatives, or connections of legatees within the fourth degree and the notary's clerks are not qualified to act as witnesses.

A mystic or secret will is written by the testator himself or by some one under his direction and the paper upon which it is written or the envelope in which it is inclosed is closed and sealed. It is presented thus to the notary and to at least six witnesses or the testator closes and seals it in their presence. He declares that the contents of the instrument are his will, written by him or written by another and signed by him. The notary draws up a deed of superscription which is written on the paper or on the envelope, which deed is signed by the testator, the notary, and the witnesses. Witnesses to wills must be of age, of French nationality, without distinction of sex. Husband and wife cannot be witnesses to the same will.

The Code contains special rules for the wills of soldiers and sailors on active service. By a special law of the 28th of October, 1916, a minor on active service may, during the hostilities, make a will in favor of any of his relatives within the sixth degree, as though he were of age.

A Frenchman abroad may make his will in holographic form or by "authentique" deed, according to the forms used in the country where the will is made.

A foreigner making his will in France was formerly obliged to make it in one of the forms recognized by French law. This rule has, however, now been relaxed and a foreigner making his will in France may now either make it in the French form or in the form recognized by his country of origin.

A will may name one or more executors, but this is not obligatory. An executor may have the seisin, but only for a year and a day from the death. The powers of a testamentary executor in French law are of a very subordinate character.

Wills can be revoked in whole or in part only by a subsequent will or by a specific act of revocations executed before a notary. Subsequent wills which do not contain an express revocation clause cancel in the prior will only such provisions as are incompatible with those contained in the subsequent will.

Every holographic will before being executed must be presented to the president of the court and opened. The president draws up a report describing the condition of the will and ordering it to be filed with a notary appointed by him.

When at the death of the testator there are no reserved heirs, the universal legatee has the seisin. But if the will under which he takes is holographic or mystic, he must apply to the president of the court for an order of delivery of possession.

LAWS OF GERMANY.

Revised September 1, 1918, by

C. H. Huberich, Esq., J.U.D., D.C.L., LL.D., of New York.

(Abbreviations : B.G.B. = Bürgerliches Gesetzbuch (Civil Code); H.G.B. = Handelsgesetzbuch (Commercial Code); Z.P.O. = Zivilprozessordnung (Code of Civil Procedure).)

Preliminary Note. — The German law is a codified system and is contained chiefly in the Civil Code, Commercial Code, Code of Civil Procedure, Penal Code, and Code of Criminal Procedure, all operative throughout the Empire. Judicial precedents, although of weight, do not have the authority they enjoy under the Anglo-American system.

The Civil Code went into effect on January 1, 1900. Before that time there were a large number of state and provincial laws and local customs, which must still be referred to in respect of transactions originating before that date. These are of special importance in connection with matters of inheritance and marital property rights.

See War Legislation.

Accounts. — See Collections.

Acknowledgments. — Acknowledgments may ordinarily be made in accordance with the law of the State where taken, and should be certified to by a German consular or diplomatic officer.

Administration of Decedents' Estates. — See Executors and Administrators.

Adoption. — The adoptor must have no natural legitimate offspring, must be at least fifty years old and be at least eighteen years older than the person adopted. If either is married the consent of the spouse is required. The adopted person acquires the status of a legitimate child of the adoptor, but not as to adoptor's kindred. Adoption must be confirmed by the court.

Affidavits. — Affidavits in the American sense are unknown. Provision is made, however, in some of the German States, e.g., in Prussia (Preussisches Freiwillige-Gerichtsbarkheit-Gesetz, art. 34, 1), that in cases where, for the preservation of rights outside of Germany, the making of an oath or solemn declaration be necessary, the same may be taken before a notary or before a judge of the Amtsgericht.

Agency. — Any person or firm desiring to establish a branch business in Germany must comply with the provisions of the Commercial Code regarding registration. Where the person establishing such branch is a partnership or corporation, certified extracts of the partnership agreement, certificate of incorporation, by-laws, etc., must be filed.

In most cases it is advisable to organize a local company (preferably a Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung), to carry on the business of such branch. This obviates many difficulties as regards taxation, authority, and liability.

Aliens. — In general aliens enjoy the same privileges and protection in regard to private rights as citizens. Exceptions to this rule are not forbidden by the Imperial Constitution, and may also be introduced by state law, in so far as they concern subjects reserved to state regulation. Aliens may be expelled either from the state territory or from the Empire. They do not enjoy the privilege accorded by section 54 of the Copyright Law, granting protection to citizens as to their unpublished works. (See also Artistic Copyright Act, § 51.) Further according to § 1315 (2) of the Civil Code they must, in case a state law so prescribes (as is the case in Prussia), procure a special license in order to marry. According to H.G.B. § 503 (2) the consent of the shipowners must be secured before a ship's share can be transferred to an alien, as according to § 2 of the Flag Law only ships that are solely the property of citizens may fly the German flag. Where reciprocity does not exist, aliens are required, in general, to deposit three times the ordinary court costs (Gerichtskostengesetz, § 85), and must, upon the demand of the defendant, give him security for his costs (Z.P.O. § 110). They are not allowed the privilege of appearing in forma pauperis, unless by reciprocity this privilege is granted to German subjects in the country to which the alien belongs. Furthermore the Imperial Chancellor, with the consent of the Federal Council, may order reprisals and retorsions even in the field of private law. By state law the acquirement of real estate by aliens may be prohibited. This has been done in Hamburg and one or two minor States. Aliens are not required (B.G.B. § 1785) to take upon themselves the duties of guardianship.

Arrest. — Personal arrest of the debtor is granted in cases where, through the use of his freedom, he may be able to take steps to conceal his property from his creditors. This is especially the case with foreigners or where execution of the judgment can otherwise be obtained only outside of Germany. The arrest cannot extend beyond six months, and may be terminated when security is offered. Personal arrest is also employed in cases where a party disobeys the mandates of a court concerning the performance of certain exclusively personal acts, except those of resuming the marriage relation and performing a contract of service. The arrest cannot extend beyond six months, and release can be secured at any time by offering performance. In cases of injunctions every act contrary thereto may be punished by arrest up to six months. The total term, however, cannot extend beyond two years.

Bankruptcy. — The law of bankruptcy is contained in an imperial statute of 1898, operative throughout the Empire. It is applicable to traders as well as to non-traders, natural as well as juristic persons. An estate may also become subject to its provisions.

The law does not enumerate the acts deemed to be acts of bankruptcy, but merely provides that the insolvency of the debtor is a condition necessary for the commencement of proceedings. Insolvency is assumed if the debtor has suspended payments. Over-indebtedness is not of itself evidence of insolvency, except in the case of companies (see Companies) or estates of decedents. The petition may be filed either by the debtor himself or by any creditor. A debtor's petition must be accompanied by a statement of his affairs. A creditor's petition must show the fact of insolvency and a claim provable in bankruptcy.

If a bankruptcy has been commenced abroad, this fact is sufficient to show insolvency. But the commencement of such proceedings abroad does not prevent execution against property in Germany. The foreign bankruptcy or composition does not affect property in Germany, and does not prevent foreign or domestic creditors from proceeding against the debtor there. If the debtor does not have a domicile or a branch (gewerbliche Niederlassung) in Germany, proceedings affect only property in the country. If he has neither, a bankruptcy can take place in respect of property in Germany if he is managing as an owner, usufructuary, or lessee a property which has a dwelling-house or farm buildings upon it.

If bankruptcy is decreed, the court appoints a trustee and appoints a provisional committee of creditors. The trustee has wide powers. The assets comprise only such property as belonged to the bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy (see, however, Impeachment, discussed below), and was at that moment subject to execution. They do not include after-acquired property, even though becoming the bankrupt's property during the pendency of the bankruptcy. Theoretically, a German bankruptcy embraces property located outside the Empire; practically the trustee will in most cases be unable to bring it in. Within a year after the commencement of the bankruptcy proceedings certain transactions entered into by the bankrupt may be impeached by the creditors acting through the trustee. Chief among these are transactions entered into by the bankrupt after suspension of payment or after the presentation of a petition against him, provided that such transaction is prejudicial to the creditors and that the other parties knew of the bankruptcy. Furthermore, acts done subsequently to or within ten days before the bankruptcy, and giving a preference to a particular creditor, unless the creditor proves his own good faith; transactions entered into with the intention of prejudicing the creditors, such intention being known to the other party; in certain gifts made within one year (in some cases two years) before the commencement of the bankruptcy, are impeachable. Individual creditors also have the right of impeaching certain transactions under the Impeachment Law (Anfechtungsgesetz) of 1898.

Creditors desiring to participate must give notice of their claims and submit them for examination. The time allowed for filing is from two weeks to three months. Each claim must clearly state the consideration and the amount of the claim in German currency, as well as any privilege claimed. Notice of claim may be given by agent. It is advisable to be represented by an attorney under a power. Creditors giving notice of claim after the day set for the examination must pay the costs of a special examination. If a claim is rejected a suit may be brought for its establishment.

A preliminary distribution is ordinarily made soon after the examination. For the final distribution the consent of the court is required. If there is a committee of creditors, the trustee must obtain its consent to the distribution. There is a provision for preferential claims.

The law also provides for a composition between the debtor and the ordinary creditors, subject to approval by the court. A composition must be assented to by a majority in number and at least three fourths in value of the creditors.

The assets are distributed among the creditors who have an enforceable claim against him subsisting when the proceedings are commenced. Domestic and foreign creditors are on an equal footing.

Bills of Exchange. — A bill of exchange has the ordinary requisites of this form of instrument under the American law. It must in addition contain the statement that it is a bill of exchange, and may stipulate for payment at the time of the holding of a specified fair or market. The words "or order" are usual, but not essential; a bill is presumed to be payable to order. Bearer bills and bills leaving the space for the name of the payee blank are inadmissible. The name of the payee must be given, and several payees may be named jointly (quære, whether they can be named in the alternative). It is debatable whether several drawees may be given in the alternative. It is not permissible to give several due dates for several installments. Usance bills if drawn in Germany are invalid. Bills of exchange are subject to stamp duties, but an omission to affix the necessary stamps does not affect the validity of the instrument.

There are no days of grace. The rules relating to fixing of liability by protest are similar in their main provisions to those of the American law. The holder of a protested bill is entitled to the face of the bill and the costs of protest and other expenses, together with interest at the rate of six per cent. from maturity, and a commission of one-third per cent. An indorser who has taken up a bill is entitled to what he has paid to the previous holder plus his expenses, six per cent. interest from the date of payment, and one-third per cent. commission. The party taking recourse may draw a redraft for the sum due him, together with brokerage and stamp duty. A holder's or an indorser's right of recourse is barred within a period varying from three to eighteen months according to locality. The period of limitation for suits against the acceptor is three years.

The capacity of a foreigner to undertake a liability upon a bill is determined by the law of his nationality. But a person incapable under the law of his nationality is, nevertheless, bound, if he would have capacity under the laws of Germany and the transaction was entered into in that country.

The formal validity of a bill drawn in a foreign country is judged according to the laws of that country, but transactions relating to bills of exchange entered into between German subjects abroad are good if made in conformity with German law. Transactions in respect of a bill made within Germany are governed by German law, and conversely, transactions entered into abroad are governed by the foreign law.

See Checks, Promissory Notes.

Bills of Lading. — The consignor is entitled to receive a letter of advice (Frachtbrief) in case of carriage by land, or of a bill of lading (Konnossement) in case of carriage by sea. A receipt by the carrier may be indorsed on a duplicate of the letter of advice. An order bill of lading is a negotiable instrument, but the consignor, in order to retain his power over the goods must be in possession of the full set of bills of lading (usually issued in triplicate). See Stoppage in Transitu.

Bottomry Bonds. — Bottomry bonds confer a real right against the ship, similar to a mortgage on land. They are negotiable. See Mortgage, Pledge, and Lien.

Cartells. — See Combinations and Trusts.

Chattel Mortgages. — See Mortgage, Pledge, and Lien.

Checks. — A check must contain: (1) either the word "Scheck," or in case the instrument is drawn in a foreign language, its corresponding name according to that language; (2) an order of the drawer on the drawee that a certain sum of money be paid from his account; (3) the signature of the drawer; (4) the place and date. A check can only be drawn on qualified banks and bankers. It must be unconditional and payable at sight. Checks drawn in Germany and payable there must be presented within ten days after they have been drawn. Checks drawn in foreign countries and payable in Germany must be presented as follows: If drawn in an European country, with the exception of Iceland and the Farø Islands, within three weeks; in certain parts of Asia and Africa, within a month; in the United States of America, in Canada, Newfoundland, Mexico, the Azores, Madeira, Canary and Cape Verde Islands, within two months; checks drawn in other foreign countries, within three months. In order to prevent cash payment being made on a check and to cause it to be credited to the account of the holder, the words "Nur sur Verrechnung" may be written across its face. A stamp tax of ten Pfennigs is payable on every check.

See Bills of Exchange.

Claims against Government. — Commissions have been created, for the consideration of the claims of non-enemy subjects, for indemnity for losses arising through the operation of the German troops. These commissions hold their sessions in Berlin. There are special forms and procedure for the presentation of claims. Claimants may appear in person or by attorney.

Collections. — Original papers, including an itemized statement of account, should be sent, together with power of attorney giving power of substitution, certified to by a German consular or diplomatic officer. Claims may be assigned.

Combinations and Trusts. — There are no laws corresponding to the Sherman Act. The legality of a combination is a disputed point. It is largely a question of fact whether a particular combination infringes on the principle of freedom of trade announced in Gewerbeordnung, § 1, or is against good morals under B.G.B. § 138. This may be assumed to be the case if there is an undue exploitation of the consumer, or where the economic independence of the individual members of the combination is seriously endangered.

Commercial Law. — Like the other Continental systems, the German law distinguishes between civil and commercial transactions, and subjects them in some cases to different rules of law. The rules are set forth in the Commercial Code of 1897 and in the laws amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto. Commercial causes are in most cases tried in special courts or commercial sections of the regular courts, and in a more expeditious manner.

Companies. — The two principal forms of companies (corporations) are the company limited by shares (Aktiengesellschaft), corresponding broadly to the American business corporation and the English joint-stock company, and the limited liability company (Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung) for which there is no analogy in Anglo-American law. A modified form of the Aktiengesellschaft is the Kommanditgesellschaft auf Aktien, in which one or more members assume unlimited liability in respect of the obligations of the company.

The Aktiengesellschaft may be organized by any five persons, who may be natural or juristic persons, aliens or German subjects. Each must subscribe to at least one share. There is no provision as to minimum capital, but the par value of the shares must be at least one thousand Marks (except that in case of certain public utility companies, the Federal Council may permit shares of lower par value to be issued). They may be paid for in cash or otherwise, but may not be issued under par, although they may be issued above par. There is no personal liability of the shareholders. The Aktiengesellschaft is represented by a board of directors (Vorstand) and may have a board of control (Aufsichtsrat). It has no seal.

The Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung partakes of the characteristics both of an American business corporation and of a partnership, and subserves the same purpose as the English private company. It is a juristic person. Its capital is divided into parts (Anteile) and not into shares. No certificates are issued, though the individual interests are transferable by contract made before a court or notary. The articles may, and frequently do, contain restrictions on the transfer of interest. The liability of members is limited to the unpaid part of their subscription. Payments for interest in the company may be in cash or in property. The minimum number of organizers is two. They may be either natural or juristic persons, aliens or German subjects, resident or non-resident. The minimum capital is twenty thousand Marks, and the minimum part owned by any member is five hundred Marks. The interests must be divisible by one hundred. Twenty-five per cent. of the subscription must be paid up. The articles must be drawn up before the court or a notary, but the organizers may be represented by an attorney. This form of organization is decidedly the simplest and the best for foreign enterprises desiring to establish branch undertakings in Germany.

Foreign companies, in order to carry on business as such, must be especially authorized to do so by resolution of the Federal Council. Instead of obtaining a license to do business in a foreign country, it is advisable to organize a local company either as an Aktiengesellschaft, or as a Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung. Foreign companies may sue and be sued.

Contracts. — An offer made in the presence of a person must be accepted by him immediately. If made by letter or telegram to an absent party, acceptance must be received within the period which the offeror could under ordinary circumstances expect an answer. Up to this period the offeror is bound by his offer and cannot revoke it, unless special reservation is made to this effect. The offer is not extinguished by death. Acceptance must be communicated. A contract invalid in part is wholly invalid, unless it can be assumed that it would have been concluded even without the invalid portion. A contract forbidden by law is void unless otherwise provided by the law in question. A contract cannot be made: for compound interest; for protecting a person against liability for his own willful default; in certain cases, regarding a right expected to arise on the death of a living person; for the transfer of the whole of a person's future acquired property. Unless special provision is made, no special form is required for contracts. Where form is required and not complied with, the contract will be considered invalid. Where written form is required, the document must be subscribed by the party charged thereby, or his mark must be officially certified to. Written form is required in the following cases: for constituting a foundation; in rental contracts of real estate where the lease is for a term longer than a year; in surety obligations; in abstract promises; in acknowledgments of liability (in these cases, however, and in suretyship a merchant in the full sense of the word (Vollkaufmann) can bind himself by purely verbal agreements); in transfers of mortgage instruments; in holographic wills; in applications for shares in a share company (Aktiengesellschaft) or a share company en commandite (Kommanditgesellschaft auf Aktien).

Copyright. — Copyright is regulated by the Law of June 19, 1901, as regards copyright of literary and musical works, by the Law of January 9, 1907, as regards artistic copyright and photographs, by the Law of January 11, 1878, as regards models and design. The protection of the literary and musical rights extends for a period of thirty years after the author's death. If at the expiration of thirty years from the author's death, ten years have not elapsed from the date of first publication of any of his works, or if at such time any of his works still remain unpublished, the period of protection for such work is ten years from the date of publication. The protection of artistic works also extends to thirty years after the death of the author. Photographs are protected for ten years from their publication. The protection against the reproduction of models and designs may be extended to at most fifteen years.

In all cases the owner of the author's right is entitled, in case of infringement, to an order restraining the infringement, and in the case of the infringement being willful or negligent he is also entitled to damages.

Germany is a party to the various copyright conventions, and has special conventions on the subject with several countries, among which is the United States.

Corporations. — See Companies.

Costs. — Costs of actions include not only court costs, but also attorneys' costs. Both must be borne by the losing party. The court costs are regulated by the Gerichtskostengesetz of 1878. A graded tariff is introduced with taxes for practically every possible act. In ordinary cases three times the unit is payable. The plaintiff must deposit at least a portion of his costs with the court before commencement of action; foreigners, although resident, three times the unit required of German citizens, unless by reciprocity a different rule is applicable. Attorneys' costs are regulated by a similar law, the Gebührenordnung für Rechtsanwälte of 1897. The same graded system is employed with provision for acts of every nature. Although the attorneys' costs also must be paid by the losing party, it is usual for the attorney to demand a retainer. There are also special laws regulating the costs of witnesses and sheriffs. Supplementary to these imperial laws are laws of the several States.

Under the Hague Convention of July 17, 1905, to which practically all European countries are signatories, the requirement as to giving security for costs is dispensed with as to citizens of the signatory States. The United States and Great Britain are not signatory powers. As regard citizens of countries that are not signatories to this convention, the principle of reciprocity prevails. In the case of actions brought by American citizens, who are non-residents of Germany, the question as to whether security for costs must be deposited depends upon the question whether under the law of the State in which they are domiciled non-residents are required to furnish such security. As to American citizens resident within Germany, the practice within the several German States is not uniform, but the tendency is toward a greater liberality in this matter. In transmitting business requiring the bringing of suits it is advisable to remit a sum of money (about one to two per cent. of the amount involved) to cover this item.

Days of Grace. — See Bills of Exchange, Promissory Notes.

Deeds. — Deeds in the common-law sense are unknown, as land can only be transferred through registration. See Recording Acts.

Depositions. — The American diplomatic and consular officials ordinarily refuse to execute commissions to take evidence in Germany, and the German Government objects to their taking testimony of German subjects in this manner. Unless the witnesses to be examined are willing to submit to an examination letters rogatory should be issued. See Letters Rogatory.

Descent and Distribution. — The lines of descent are grouped according to orders. The first order includes the descendants of the deceased, the second order the parents of the deceased and their descendants, the third order the grandparents of the deceased and their descendants, the fourth order the great-grandparents of the deceased and their descendants, the fifth order the great-great-grandparents of the deceased and their descendants. In the first three orders distribution is in linea, in the fourth and further orders, in capite. The presence of relatives in a previous order excludes the rights of relatives of following orders. Children inherit in equal parts. In the second order, in case both parents survive, they inherit in equal parts. In case, however, either is deceased and has left descendants, these descendants receive the share of the deceased. In case no descendants survive, the surviving parent inherits the whole. In the third order, in case all four grandparents survive, they inherit in equal parts. Upon the death of a grandparent on either side the same rule is followed as in the second order. If both grandparents on a side are deceased and leave no descendants, the other grandparents, or their descendants, inherit in whole. In the fourth order the surviving great-grandparents inherit in capite. In case no great-grandparents survive, those descendants of them who are nearest in relationship to the intestate inherit. The surviving spouse receives, along with the first order, one fourth of the estate, as against the second order one half, and certain household property, as against the great-grandparents' one half and the above-mentioned household property. The spouse shuts out entirely descendants of the great-grandparents, and all more distant relatives.

See also Dower.

Divorce. — Divorce is granted on the ground of adultery, desertion, insanity, attempt on the life of spouse, and, in general, where through the conduct of a spouse the marriage relation is so disturbed that a continuance thereof by the other spouse cannot be reasonably expected. The right to a divorce is lost through forgiveness and prescription. Bigamy and bestiality are included in adultery. Desertion legally takes place when the deserting spouse has been ordered by judgment of the court to resume marital relations with the complainant, and a year has elapsed since such judgment, with the terms of which, against the consent of the complainant, the deserting spouse has not complied. In cases, however, where the residence of the deserting spouse is unknown, or where he has his residence in a foreign country, action for divorce may be begun a year after these conditions have arisen, without recourse being necessary to the preliminary judgment. Divorce on the ground of insanity is granted only in cases where the marriage relation has been in existence at least three years, where the insanity has reached such a stage that the intellectual companionship of the parties is suspended, and there is no possibility of a return to normal conditions. Divorce under the general clause mentioned above may be granted, for example, in cases of mistreatment, impotence, sexual diseases, refusal of the marital duties, neglect of the children, etc.

Before suit can be brought a compromise term must have been ordered by the Amtsgericht. The Landgericht alone is competent for the action itself. The district attorney participates in the suit, in so far as he may bring forward facts and evidence tending to uphold the marriage relation. The court has inquisitorial powers and may order the personal appearance of the parties. Judgment by default is not allowed against the defendant.

Dower. — Dower is unknown. The wife receives a one-fourth share in her deceased husband's estate if he dies intestate, and descendants survive. In cases where only his parents or their descendants survive she receives one half. In case only his grandparents survive she receives also one half. In these last two cases she also receives as a legal legacy the marital household furnishings and the marriage presents. In case none of the above relatives survives, she receives the whole estate. Where the husband dies testate, in case she is not properly provided for in the will, she has a forced heirship as to one half of the share she would receive had he died intestate.

See Descent and Distribution.

Executors and Administrators. — The system of executors is not as generally employed in Germany as in America, as the heir usually assumes his duties and fulfills the position of executor or administrator. The executor can either be named in the will or his nomination be left to the surrogate's court. He is under no obligation to accept the office. He takes possession of the estate, thereby depriving the heirs of their right of administering or disposing of the same. He need not be empowered to administer the whole estate, but his authority may be limited merely to certain acts. On the other hand, his authority may be extended beyond the ordinary functions of an executor. He alone can sue. In certain cases, however, the heir may also be sued, and in cases where suit is brought to assert a right of forced heirship and the executor is limited in the administration of the estate, suit can be brought only against the heir.

The administrator may be appointed either on motion of the heir or of a creditor. In the first instance the motion is made to restrict the heirs' unlimited liability for debts of the deceased. In the second case, the motion must be made at least two years after the heir has accepted the estate, and on the ground that there is danger that the just debts of the deceased will otherwise not be paid. The administrator takes possession of the estate, withdrawing from the heir all right of administration or disposition thereof. Claims against the estate can then be enforced only against the administrator.

Forced Heirship. — A certain portion of the estate of the deceased is always reserved for the natural heirs, who, if this portion be otherwise disposed of, may assert their claim against the estate. These compulsory heirs include the testator's issue and, in default of issue, his parents, and also the testator's spouse. The compulsory portion is equal to one half of the statutory portion in case of intestacy. Only under exceptional circumstances may the compulsory heir be deprived of this portion. The ground of deprivation must be mentioned in the will and its existence must be proved by any party disputing the claim. If the testator condones the offense constituting the ground of deprivation, he is assumed to have revoked the disposition depriving the offender of his compulsory portion. The right of deprivation is available against any of the testator's descendants who are guilty of certain crimes or actions against the testator, against a parent who is guilty of certain serious offenses, and against a spouse who is guilty of any matrimonial offense which would have entitled the testator to claim a divorce. Where a descendant has by extravagant habits or insolvency endangered his future income to a material extent, the testator may satisfy his obligations in respect to the compulsory portion by giving such descendant a life interest in his share or legacy and appointing his statutory heirs as reversionary heirs or legatees, or by directing that the share or legacy shall be under management of an executor, the descendant receiving solely the net income. However, if the descendant permanently mends his ways before the testator's death, the restriction becomes inoperative.

See also Dower.

Foreign Judgments. — By treaty, Germany grants execution on the judgments of certain foreign States. There is no treaty to this effect with the United States. The Code of Civil Procedure (§ 328) provides that judgments of a State admitting the enforceability of German judgments are to be recognized, except in cases where the court rendering the judgment would not, according to German law, have had jurisdiction, or where the defendant was a German subject and was not served in person within the jurisdiction rendering the judgment or through the intermediary of the German authorities, unless he appeared, or where the execution would involve the recognition of matters contrary to good morals or public policy, and in certain other special cases.

Frauds, Statute of. — Legislation analogous to the Statute of Frauds is unknown. Certain acts, however, must be in writing, others drawn up by designated officials, others acknowledged before them. For details see Contracts.

Gesellschaft mit beschränkter Haftung. — See Companies.

Letters Rogatory. — The German courts will execute letters rogatory issued by a foreign court. From the United States these instruments must be transmitted through the Department of State, Washington, from which they are transmitted through the American Embassy at Berlin to the German authorities through the German Ministries for Foreign Affairs and Justice. They cannot be sent direct. Letters rogatory should be employed in all cases, instead of commissions to take evidence, where the witnesses to be examined must be compelled to appear. Owing to the indirect method of transmission considerable delay may occur, and it is advisable to employ counsel in Berlin to expedite the transmission through the various ministries. Counsel may appear at the examination of witnesses.

Liens. — See Mortgage, Pledge, and Lien.

Limitation of Actions. — In general, the period for limitation of actions is thirty years, although this rule is subject to numerous and important exceptions. A limitation of two years applies to claims: (1) Of merchants, manufacturers, artisans, and of those who carry on an industrial art, for delivery of goods, for a performance of work, and for attending to the affairs of another, including disbursements, unless the performance is on account of the trade of the debtor; (2) of those who carry on the cultivation of land or of forests, for delivery of agricultural or forest products; (3) of railroads, draymen, seamen, drivers, and messengers for their freight charges or fees, including disbursements; (4) of innkeepers and of those who provide food or drink as a trade, for lodging and board as well as for other acts done in providing for the wants of the guests, including disbursements; (5) of lottery dealers; (6) of persons who, as a trade, hire out movable things for the price of the hire of the objects; (7) of persons, who, not belonging to the persons designated in (1) attend by way of trade to the performance of the business of others or the rendering of services for the compensation due to them on account of their trade, including disbursements; (8) of those engaged in private service, for salary, wages, or other charges including disbursements; (9) of industrial workmen for wages; (10) of the master in respect of a contract of apprenticeship; (11) of public and private institutions devoted to instruction, education, alimentation, or healing; (12) of attorneys at law, notaries, and bailiffs (Gerichtsvollzieher); (13) of the parties to a legal controversy for advances made to their attorneys; and certain other claims. In so far as claims designated under (1), (2), and (5) are not subject to limitation of two years, they are barred in four years.

The period of limitation begins with the accrual of the claim, with the limitation, however, that in a number of cases this is postponed to the end of the year in which the claim originated. In other cases the period is especially prescribed (see B.G.B. §§ 477 (1), 481, 491, 492, 558 (2); H.G.B. § 61 (2), 113 (3), 159, 206, 326 (3), 414, 439, 903). The limitation is suspended (Hemmung) in case the time for performance is extended or the obligor is for any other cause entitled temporarily to refuse the performance (there are, however, exceptions to this rule — see B.G.B. § 202 (1); furthermore, in cases where the administration of justice is suspended or an act of God intervenes. There is also a suspension (Hemmung) during marriage, minority, and wardship. A claim of the estate of a deceased or against the estate is not barred before expiration of six months after the time when the inheritance is accepted by the heirs or the estate is judged insolvent, or from which the claim may be enforced by or against the representative of the estate. If the limitation is less than six months, the time fixed for the limitation takes the place of the six months.

The limitation is interrupted (Unterbrechung) through acknowledgments, which may be verbal or by suit. In the first case, the new period begins to run from the date of the last act of acknowledgment. In the second case, the interruption continues until the proceedings are terminated, but if the claim is withdrawn or dismissed by an order not affecting its validity, the interruption is ineffective, unless other proceedings are instituted within six months. If the proceedings are discontinued by consent or simply allowed to drop, the interruption comes to an end at the moment when the last step is taken in the proceedings.

The limitation, to be effective, must be pleaded. It affects the claim itself, with accessory claims for interest and costs, but not rights against any objects charged, delivered, or transferred as security.

Limited Liability Companies. — See Companies.

Limited Partnerships. — See Partnerships.

Marriage. — Marriage is a civil contract. It takes place before the registry official (Standesbeamter) after a publication of the banns (Aufgebot). A male before the completion of his twenty-first year, or a female, before the completion of her sixteenth year, may not marry. Such a marriage is voidable. A woman may receive a dispensation from the provision as to age. Minors require the consent of parents or person in loco parentis. Persons in military or state service usually require special permission to marry. A spouse divorced for adultery and the co-respondent named in the decree may not intermarry, except under dispensation.

In the absence of agreement the statutory régime (B.G.B. §§ 1363–1431) governs marital property rights. These rights may be regulated by contract entered into by a court or notary even after the date of the marriage. In respect of marriages entered into before January 1, 1900, special local or state laws apply.

Married Women. — A married woman may be engaged as a trader, even against the consent of her husband.

Matrimonial Property. — See Marriage.

Minors. — Majority begins with the completion of the twenty-first year of age. A person who has completed his eighteenth year may be declared of full age by the court, and thereby obtains the status of a person of full age.

Monopolies. — See Combinations and Trusts.

Mortgage, Pledge, and Lien. — Real estate may be subject to a mortgage in respect of a debt (Hypothek), a payment (Grundschuld), or an annuity (Rentenschuld). The entries are made under the Recording Acts (q.v.).

Movable objects and assignable claims can be subjected to a pledge (Pfand), the creditor obtaining possession of the object. In the case of a pledge of a ship, an entry is made in the ship register (Schiffsregister). There is no exact equivalent to the chattel mortgage, but there may be a sale with a reservation of property rights by the seller. No provision is made for recording such transactions. If property sold under reservation of title is attached or levied upon as the property of the buyer, the seller must take steps to secure its release. It is not advisable for a seller outside of Germany to dispose of goods to Germany under this arrangement.

Factors, warehousemen, and carriers have special liens in respect of their charges.

Negotiable Instruments. — See Bills of Exchange, Checks, Promissory Notes.

Partnerships. — The rules governing general partnerships (offene Handelsgesellschaften) are similar to those of the Anglo-American law. Entry in the commercial registers is required. The partners may be natural or juristic persons, but other general or limited partnerships cannot be partners. The object must be the carrying on of a commercial enterprise. The firm name (Firma) must contain the names of the partners, but a firm name once registered need not be altered where a change in the personnel of the partners takes place.

A partnership is not a juristic person, but carries on business and acquires rights (including rights in immovables), and sues and is sued in the firm name. In case of bankruptcy the firm assets constitute a primary fund for the satisfaction of partnership creditors. The partners are liable personally for partnership debts.

Each partner has power to bind the firm, unless the partnership agreement provides otherwise, and this fact is entered in the commercial register. In dealing with a partnership it is advisable to ascertain whether the partner purporting to act for the firm is placed under any special restrictions ascertainable from an inspection of the commercial register.

Limited partnerships (Kommanditgesellschaften) may be formed between at least one person whose liability is unlimited (Komplementar) and one person whose liability is limited (Kommanditist). The partnership agreement must stipulate the maximum amount up to which the limited partners will be liable to creditors. The partnership must be entered on the commercial register, and the entry must contain the names of all the partners and state the maximum sum for which each of the limited partners is liable. Only the general partners are entitled to act in behalf of the firm. But a limited partner may hold a general power of attorney (Prokura, Handlungsvollmacht) to act on behalf of the firm. The general partners incur unlimited liability; the limited partners incur liability only to the extent of the part of the sum for which they agreed to be liable.

In a silent partnership (stille Gesellschaft) the silent partner incurs no liability to creditors of the firm. There is no entry of the name of the silent partner in the commercial register.

Patents. — The law of patents is regulated by the Patentgesetz of 1891 and the Gesetz betreffend den Schutz von Gebrauchsmustern of the same year. The grant of a patent is conditional on a previous inquiry as to the patentable nature of the invention. Novelty and possibility of making industrial use of the invention is necessary. The invention may refer to a new product or to a new process for producing a known product. No patent is granted for articles the exploitation of which is forbidden by law or is against good morals, nor for any articles of food or delicacies or medicines, but merely for the process by which such articles are produced. The duration of the patent is limited to fifteen years, subject to forfeiture on non-payment of the prescribed fees. In case the patentee refuses to others a license to use the patented article, and such license is in the interest of the public, the Patent Office may itself, against the will of the patentee, grant such license. In the case where the invention is manufactured entirely or principally outside of the German Empire, and there are no treaties to the contrary, the patent may be revoked. Neither the granting of a compulsory license nor the revocation of the patent can be ordered until at least a lapse of three years from the date of its publication. In case of infringement the patentee has a right to an injunction, and, in case of malice or gross negligence on the part of the infringers, to damages.

The Gebrauchsmustergesetz, or Useful Models Act, differs from the Patent Act, both as regards the nature of the invention protected under it and as to the mode of obtaining protection. The protection is given to models of articles destined for work of use, in so far as such models are entitled to serve the purpose of the work or use by means of some novelty in their shape or arrangement, or by any application of a novel kind. Invention of useful models would frequently also be capable of the protection of patent law, but in many cases, inventions not sufficiently original to make them patentable are capable of receiving protection as useful models. The description of the model, with drawings or diagrams, must be entered at the Patent Office. There is no investigation as to the patentability of the model. It becomes protected by the mere fact of registration, subject, however, to the right of every person, whether aggrieved or not, to obtain its removal from the register on proving that it does not conform to the legal requirements. The period of protection is three years, subject, however, to a further renewal for the same length of time. Similar protection is accorded as to a patentee. Germany is also a member of various international conventions, and with some countries has special treaties on the subject.

Powers of Attorney. — Powers of attorney may be issued either to the agent or directly to the third party. In certain cases it is necessary that the power be exhibited to the third party; as, for example, when notice is given through the agent for the termination of a contract. In other cases a special designation must be employed in the power; as, for example, in the case of a commercial general representative (Prokura). Attorneys appearing before courts must have a written power of attorney, officially acknowledged (Z.P.O. § 80). This power of attorney, as well as several others, — as, for example, the Prokura, — cannot be limited to certain acts, but must contain the terms prescribed by law. While, in general, a power of attorney need not be notarially acknowledged, it is generally desirable that it should be and in certain cases it must be. It is also advisable to have the acknowledgment legalized by a German diplomatic or consular officer. Revocation does not follow by death of the principal, unless the power of attorney is so limited. A power of attorney may be made irrevocable by express agreement. Upon revocation, in order to protect the principal, the power of attorney should be returned or be annulled through an action in the courts. (B.G.B. §§ 175, 176.)

Prize Law. — The law of prize is contained in the Prize Code of September 30, 1909, promulgated on August 3, 1914. It was based largely on the Declaration of London, but has been amended in important particulars during the war. (See Huberich and King, Prize Code of the German Empire, N.Y. 1915.) Prize courts sit at Hamburg and Kiel.

Promissory Notes. — A promissory note must contain words describing it as such. It need not mention a place of payment. In other respects all requisites are mutatis mutandis, the same as those of bills of exchange. There are no days of grace. The period of limitation for suits against the maker is three years from maturity of the instrument. If payable at sight the maturity is deemed to be the expiration of the period set forth in the note for presentation, or, if none is stated, two years after date. See Bills of Exchange.

Recording Acts. — The registration of land titles is governed by state laws. In Prussia and a number of other States a register is kept according to parcels of land, all transactions affecting a parcel being entered in appropriate columns by the registry officials. Land-title records are not public records. Only a person having a legal interest (e.g., mortgagees, heirs), may investigate the title to a particular tract of land.

Sales. — A distinction is also made between bargain and sale and contract to sell. The rules of the Civil Code apply primarily to the latter, but are to be employed as to the former in so far as applicable. The contract to sell has a purely obligatory effect. It obligates the seller to transfer the goods together with full title thereto, the buyer to payment of the price and acceptance of the goods. Until the title is transferred, the goods are, in general, held at the risk of the seller, with the exception, however, that when he undertakes their delivery according to instructions of the buyer, but not in mere fulfillment of his obligations arising out of the contract of sale, the risk of loss passes to the buyer when the goods are delivered to the carrier or agent. It is presumed that the seller guarantees at least the essential qualities of the goods. In the case of non-essential qualities or of the absence of qualities especially guaranteed, the buyer may either withdraw from the contract (Wandlung), or reduce the purchase price to the corresponding value (Minderung). In the case of deceit or express guaranty, in case of the sale of non-specific goods (Gattungakauf), the buyer has the further option of demanding exchange of the imperfect article for a suitable article. It is to be noted that the rights of the buyer in regard to withdrawal from the contract, reduction of price, or damages because of express guaranty is limited by a six months' limitation. There are special rules for the sale of horses, cattle, etc.

Seals. — Corporations and other commercial companies have no seal. Their signature is binding when in conformance with the signature registered in the commercial register.

Secret Commissions. — See Unfair Competition.

Stoppage in Transitu. — No right of stoppage in transitu exists as to goods carried by sea. In regard to goods carried on land the consignor can exercise this right in proper cases, provided that if a receipt has been indorsed on the duplicate Frachtbrief (see Bills of Lading), the consignors must produce this duplicate.

Trade-Marks. — A trade-mark may be employed not only by the larger merchants (Grosskaufleute) but by the smaller, as well as by agriculturists and by other persons in non-mercantile pursuits. The trade-mark, however, can never be disposed of independently of the business for which it was acquired. There are certain limitations as to what marks may be employed. Marks which are in general use in a certain branch or industry — such, for example, as the figure of a Chinese in the tea trade — may not be registered, nor may marks which consist merely of numbers or single letters be registered (the same rule applies to words which contain statements exclusively relating to the manner, the time, or the place of the manufacture of the goods in question), nor the quality, the purpose, the price, and the quantity relations of the goods, coats-of-arms of inland and foreign States and inland cities, indecent, scandalous, or deceiving marks, marks which encroach on the personal or business name of another. Furthermore, it is impossible to obtain the registry of a mark similar to one already registered for the same sort of goods, even in case the previous trade-mark has been stricken from the rolls, unless two years have elapsed since such cancellation.

A trade-mark register is kept at the Patent Office in which the marks, after being subject to examination, are entered. For this there is a fee of thirty Marks. The right to the exclusive use of the trade-mark expires ten years from the date of enrollment, but it may be renewed every ten years upon payment of a new fee of ten Marks.

Germany is a member of the International Union. With a few countries, not including the United States, it has special treaties on the subject. There is, however, reciprocity with the United States.

See also Unfair Competition.

Trusts. — Trusts as such are unknown in Germany. To some extent the same ends are obtained through certain legal institutions such as guardians, administrators, receivers, and executors. It is to be noted that perpetuities are forbidden under the rule (B.G.B. §§ 2100, 2162, 2163, 2210), that reversionary heirs, etc., must become invested with their share within thirty years from the testator's death, with the exception, however, that this period does not apply if the limitation is to take effect on the happening of an event affecting the limited heir or the reversionary heir, and if the person to be affected by the event is living at the time of the testator's death, or if the limitation is to take effect in the event of the birth of a brother or sister of any limited heir, and in favor of such brother or sister.

Trusts in Restraint of Trade. — See Combinations and Trusts.

Unfair Competition. — While certain general paragraphs of the Civil Code are applicable, the main body of law is to be found in the imperial law on this subject of June 7, 1909.

It is forbidden to make untrue statements in a public announcement about the quality, origin, method of manufacture, price of goods or of mercantile services, manner or source of supply of goods, purpose or object of the sale, quantity of the stock or other factors relating thereto, in case such statements would be likely to give the impression that an especially favorable offer were being made. It is forbidden in public advertisements of sales to mention that the goods have been acquired from bankruptcy property, when, as a matter of fact, at the time of sale they are not in the hands of a receiver, although they have originated from a bankruptcy stock. It is further forbidden, when a sale (Ausverkauf) is publicly announced, to dispose therein of goods which have been specially secured solely for that purpose. Certain goods may only be measured and sold according to size or quantities, which must be marked thereupon, and which are determined by the Federal Council. This applies, for example, to yarn and candles.

It is forbidden, for purposes of competition, to make presents or offer other advantages to the employees or representatives of a business in order to secure preferences for one's self or for a third party. It is prohibited, for purposes of competition, to assert facts which are not manifestly true as to the owner or manager of a business or as to his goods or services, when such assertions are adapted to injuring the business or the credit of the owner. In cases, however, of confidential communications, where the person making the communication or the addressee has a special interest in the contents of the communication, the prohibition applies only when the facts stated are demonstratively untrue. The use in business intercourse of a name which is identical with or similar to one legally employed by a third party is prohibited, provided the use is such as to cause confusion. Employees, laborers, and apprentices are forbidden to communicate to third parties, during the period of their employment, business secrets which came to their knowledge by virtue of their position, if the communication is made for the purpose of competition or with the intention to injure their employer. Furthermore, when a third party becomes possessed of such business secrets in this manner, he is forbidden to exploit them or to communicate them to others for the purpose of competition.

It is forbidden to communicate to others or otherwise to make use of, for the purpose of business competition, draftings or instructions of a technical nature, especially drawings, models, or recipes which have been secured in business intercourse by virtue of special confidence. Finally, there is a general prohibition forbidding all acts undertaken for the purpose of business competition which are not in accord with good morals.

Injunctions are granted for enforcing these prohibitions. Damages in cases of unlawful intent or negligence are generally allowed. There is also provision for a criminal penalty.

War Legislation. — While martial law has been in force throughout the Empire since July 31, 1914, the civil courts remain in operation as before. The legislation enacted as a consequence of the war affects materially a number of transactions. There is no moratorium as respects inland transactions, but certain claims of foreign creditors are subject to moratorium. The court may also grant a suspension of payment, where the defendant shows that his inability to pay is due to the war. Alien enemies may sue and be sued. Contracts with alien enemies, whether resident or non-resident, are valid, but under the ordinance of September 30, 1914, it is prohibited, subject to certain exceptions, to make any payments, or to transmit any securities to persons domiciled or resident within Great Britain, its colonies or possessions. This ordinance was subsequently extended to France and Russia, and by the ordinance of August 9, 1917, has been extended to persons resident within the United States. Where an obligation due to a person resident within the United States was assigned prior to April 6, 1917, the assignee may sue. Alien enemies may prove in bankruptcy, and sue for the establishment of a contested claim. Under an ordinance of September 4, 1914, the local administrative authorities may place certain enemy business undertakings under supervision. The purpose of this supervision is to prevent the business from being carried on in a manner deemed detrimental to German interests; the property and other private rights of the undertaking are not to be impaired and no winding-up can be ordered. The business undertakings (including not alone commercial undertakings, but also movable and immovable property), owned entirely or principally by citizens of Great Britain, France, or Russia, regardless of the residents of the owners, may be sequestered and wound up. Most of the periods of limitation have been suspended for the years 1914 to 1916. In countries at war with Germany the legalization of documents must be done by the diplomatic or consular representatives of the country representing German interests in the United States by the Swiss authorities. See also Claims against Government, Prize Law.

Wills. — Wills may be either holographic or formal. Holographic wills must be wholly written by the testator, signed by him, and must contain the date and place of execution. They may be in a language other than German. Formal wills must be drawn up either by a notary or by a judge. Foreigners may execute wills according to their own law. In the place of wills a contract of inheritance may be executed which must be drawn by a judge or notary public. Spouses may unite in joint wills. The amount of property disposable by will is limited. (See Forced Heirship.)

LAWS OF HOLLAND.

Revised September 15, 1918, by Alexander Nicol-Speyer, of The Hague.

Preliminary Note: — The law of the Netherlands is principally contained in five codes: Civil Code, Commercial Code, Code of Civil Procedure, Criminal Code, and Code of Criminal Procedure. In addition to these there are a number of important legislative acts, among which the following may be mentioned: Law of May 15, 1829, relating to principles of legislation; Law of May 28, 1869, relating to ships' papers; Law of September 30, 1893, relating to trade-marks; Law of December 12, 1892, relating to nationality; Law of September 30, 1893, relating to bankruptcy; Law of November 7, 1910, relating to patents; Law of September 23, 1912, relating to copyrights.

The Civil Code was based on the Code Napoléon, but has been amended considerably since its adoption. Following the Continental system a distinction is made between the civil and commercial law. Certain legal distinctions are made between civil and commercial transactions; as, for example, a higher rate of legal interest prevails under the commercial law (six per cent. instead of five per cent.), merchants' books may be used as evidence of commercial transactions, the terms for appearance are in general two days instead of five, certain facilities are given for attachment in respect of commercial transactions, and under certain circumstances an imprisonment for debt may be ordered. Under the head of commercial transactions are included all matters of commerce, such as sale of goods, exchange transactions, transportation, shipping, banking and brokerage.

Aliens. — See Legal Capacity.

Attachments. — An attachment or garnishment may be made at the domicile of the debtor or of the garnishee. Within a term of eight days thereafter a writ for a declaration as to the validity of the attachment is issued against the debtor. In garnishment proceedings the garnishee appears after the proceedings between the debtor and creditor have been determined. If the debtor is an alien the request for attachment or garnishment can be made by the court where the property is situated.

Bankruptcy. — Since the Bankruptcy Law of September 30, 1893, the rules of the bankruptcy law are applicable to traders as well as to non-traders. Any person who has ceased paying his just debts may be declared a bankrupt. In practice the court regards such inability to pay his debts to exist when the debtor has failed to pay at least two of his creditors. The amount of the debt due is immaterial. The trial is a summary one and there is no fixed term for the summoning of the debtor before the court. Generally several days' time is granted, unless special circumstances render necessary a more summary process.

A petition for bankruptcy can be filed by the debtor himself, or by the creditors, or by the state's attorney. An official receiver is appointed by the court, who liquidates the estate under the supervision of the court and more particularly under the direct supervision of one of the judges (rechter-commissaris). The following debts are preferred claims and must be fully paid before the estate is distributed to the ordinary creditors: taxes due the State (not municipal taxes); costs of the judgments; wages and salaries of employees; rents and other payments due on rental contract; moneys due to workmen for repairs, to innkeepers for lodgings, and to physicians for fees during last illness; purchase money for the sale of movables (in sales of merchandise to or from merchants the seller has the right during the period of thirty days from the date of sale to recover the specific article sold, provided that the article has not been sold or delivered to a third person).

Known creditors are notified by the curator. The documents in proof of claims are deposited with the curator. Creditors may appear in person or by representatives (under a power of attorney) at the creditors' meetings.

See also Suspension of Payments.

Bills of Exchange. — A bill of exchange must contain the words "value received" (waarde ontvangen or waarde genoten) or "value in account" (waarde in rekening). The place of payment must be in another locality than the place where the bill is drawn.

The holder of a bill of exchange payable at sight or at a specified period after sight must present the same for payment or acceptance within the following periods, reckoned from the date of the bill: (1) inland bills, three months; (2) bills drawn on or from a place in Europe, six months; (3) bills drawn on or from the Levant or the North Coast of Africa, eight months; (4) bills drawn from or on the West Coast of Africa, the East Coast of North and South America, and the West Indies, one year; bills drawn from or on the West Coast of North and South America, Asia, the East Indies, two years. The periods relating to foreign bills are doubled in case of a war at sea. A failure to present the bill within these periods releases all persons from liability, except the drawer.

Bills due on Sunday or a holiday, the legal equivalent of Sunday, are payable on the succeeding business day.

There are no days of grace. Protest and notice of dishonor is required. Protest may be made by a notary, a clerk of the court, or a bailiff (deurwaarder).

Indorsements ordinarily are dated and signed, and contain the words "value received" or "value in account." But indorsements in blank are valid. Bills of exchange that have matured or that are not payable to order can be transferred only by a contract of assignment (cessie).

The period of limitation is ten years from maturity. The defendant pleading limitation may be required to state under oath that nothing is due. The period of limitation of actions against indorsers of bills drawn in the Netherlands varies from fifteen months to two years according to the place of presentation. In time of war these latter periods are doubled. The limitation begins to run from the date of demand on the indorser.

All negotiable instruments except instruments payable at sight or within three days after sight, are, under the law of June 1, 1917, subject to a stamp duty of five cents per one hundred gulden.

See also Promissory Notes.

Commercial Law. — See Preliminary Note.

Community Property. — See Marriage.

Companies. — A company with limited liability (naamloze vennootschap) may be formed by two or more persons. The same must be authorized by the sovereign (ordinarily a matter of form) who must approve the memorandum and articles of association in regard to form and legality of objects. The memorandum and articles must be drawn up before a notary, and the principal parts published in the Official Gazette and in one or more daily newspapers appearing at the proposed domicile of the company.

Under the law of June 1, 1917, the tax payable upon the registration of a company is two and one half per cent. of the capital paid in or to be paid in within a time certain after the commencement of business and one fourth per cent. on the remainder of the nominal capital. As soon as a call is made or a new emission of shares takes place a tax of two and one half per cent. of the amount is payable. Shares on foreign companies are subject to a stamp duty of from sixty cents to one gulden per one hundred gulden.

The capital must be divided into shares, which may be issued to named persons or in blank. The liability of shareholders is limited to the unpaid amount due on the par value of the shares. Shares may be issued for cash or against other valuable consideration. Before authorization twenty per cent. of the capital must have been subscribed, and before commencing business ten per cent. must have been paid in. No shareholder may cast more than six votes in his own name, and no member of the board of directors may act as proxy.

The company is under the management of a board of directors comprising one or more managing directors, assisted, if desired, by one or more supervising directors.

When the assets have decreased to fifty per cent., this fact should be notified to the court and published in the newspapers. In practice this is never done. When the loss amounts to seventy-five per cent., the company must be wound up. A failure to do so renders the directors who know this circumstance personally liable for all transactions thereafter entered into.

Contracts. — Certain contracts (e.g., marriage settlements) must be made by an instrument drawn up before a notary or other public officer. Private instruments containing a unilateral obligation to pay a sum of money must be written, wholly by the debtor, or at least the figures of the amount must be written on the instrument by him.

Claims on contract for more than three hundred florins cannot be proved by witnesses alone, unless some corroboration in writing is introduced. The courts, however, exercise great liberality as to what is sufficient corroboration.

See also Bills of Exchange, Insurance, Legal Capacity, Promissory Notes, Shipping.

Copyrights. — Literary works, dramas, lectures, pantomimes, works of art, music, maps, photographs, films, etc., are protected. In general the term of protection is fifty years from the date of the death of the author. In the case of photographs and films the fifty-year period runs from the close of the calendar year in which publication took place. The right of translation expires ten years after the close of the calendar year in which the original work was published.

Corporations. — See Companies.

Courts and Procedure. — The judicial system comprises the following courts: 1. Cantonal courts (kantongerechten) having jurisdiction in petty cases. 2. Arrondissement courts (arrondissement-regtbanken). This is the court of general original jurisdiction. Parties must appear through an attorney. Where the amount involved exceeds four hundred florins, an appeal lies to the court of appeal. 3. Courts of appeal (gerechtshoven). 4. Court of cassation (hooge raad), located at The Hague. This is the court of last resort. It passes only on questions of law, except where it has original jurisdiction in matters of prize and in prosecutions against the highest state officials.

The court of the domicile of the defendant has jurisdiction in ordinary cases. If the defendant has no known domicile within the Kingdom, he may be sued at the domicile of the plaintiff. In cases involving immovables the court of the place where the immovables are situated has jurisdiction.

The terms for writs are ordinarily eight days; the terms for appeal, three months. Commercial cases are usually expedited. Security for costs must ordinarily be lodged. In transmitting instructions it is advisable to accompany the same with full power of attorney

See also Limitations.

Days of Grace. — See Bills of Exchange.

Descent and Distribution. — There is no distinction in the succession to movable and immovable property. Property passes to: 1. Descendants: Children of the intestate succeed per capita. Remoter descendants succeed per stirpes. 2. Ascendants: If there are no descendants, and no brothers or sisters, the estate is divided equally between the ascendants on the paternal and maternal side, the nearer in degree excluding the more remote. Ascendants on the same side and in equal degree succeed per capita. Where there are no descendants and no brothers or sisters, or descendants of such, the surviving parent succeeds to the entire estate. 3. Brothers and sisters: If the deceased left surviving him a brother or a sister and both parents, the estate is divided equally between these three persons. If there are more than one brother or sister, one half of the estate goes in equal parts to such brothers and sisters, and the remaining one half to the parents. If the deceased has left surviving him only one parent and one brother or sister, the estate is divided equally; if two brothers or sisters and one parent, the estate is divided by thirds; if more than two brothers or sisters, and one parent, the parent receives one fourth and the remaining three fourths are divided equally amongst the brothers and sisters. If both parents are dead, the brothers and sisters inherit the entire estate, to the exclusion of ascendants and collaterals. Where there are brothers and sisters of the whole blood and brothers and sisters of the half blood, the estate is divided into two parts, one to be distributed equally among the descendants on the paternal side, the other among the descendants on the maternal side, the brothers and sisters of the full blood succeeding pro rata in both parts, those of the half blood only on the half to which they belong. If there are only brothers and sisters of the half blood on either the paternal or maternal side, they take the whole of the estate. Under the designation of brothers and sisters are included the descendants of predeceased brothers and sisters, in right of representation. 4. Collaterals: If there are no heirs under any of the above classes, the estate is divided into two parts distributable equally between the next of kin on the paternal and maternal sides. But no collateral heirs related to the deceased beyond the twelfth degree are entitled to inherit. In default of collateral heirs entitled to inherit, the property escheats to the State.

Special rules of succession apply to illegitimate children who have been legally recognised.

Divorce. — See Matrimonial Actions.

Dower and Curtesy. — Not known. See Marriage.

Forced Heirship. — A person having certain blood relations may not by gift inter vivos or by will dispose of more than a certain portion of his property. The legal portion (legitime portie, wettelijk erfdeel) reserved to these relations varies according to circumstances. Where a person has one legitimate child, the legal portion amounts to one half of what such child would have been entitled to under the rules of intestate succession. If there are two children, each is entitled to two thirds of such intestate share; if three or more children, each is entitled to three fourths of such intestate share. Under the designation of "children" are included remoter descendants, under application of the rule of representation. If there are no descendants, the ascendants are entitled to one half of what they would receive under the rules of intestate succession. An illegitimate child, legally recognised, is entitled to one half of the share given it in case of intestacy. Only where there are no ascendants or legally recognised illegitimate children may a person dispose freely of his property by gift or will. See also Descent and Distribution.

Garnishment. — See Attachments.

Insolvency. — See Bankruptcy.

Insurance. — All kinds of perils are insurable. The agreement must be in writing. The law provides for three kinds of policies: open policies, in which the value of the goods insured is not fixed; estimated policies, where the amount fixed in the policy is the amount due by way of damages unless the incorrectness of the amount is proved by the insurer; and policies where the amount due is fixed by experts and the insured not allowed to prove the incorrectness of such estimate, unless fraud be shown.

In the case of successive insurances the first insurer bears the whole risk in so far as this is covered by his policy, and later insurers are liable in chronological order until the damage is covered. In the case of plural insurances agreed to at the same time or in the same policy, the risk is divided proportionately among the various insurers.

Legal Capacity. — All persons domiciled or residing within the Kingdom have full legal capacity in respect of movables as well as immovables. The ordinary exceptions exist in regard to insane persons and minors. There is also a restriction on legal capacity in the case of persons judicially declared to be prodigals. Married women who are not traders require the consent of the husband, except as to transactions relating to the common household. See Minors.

Limitations. — The general period of limitation is thirty years. Shorter periods are prescribed in the following cases: (1) actions of servants in respect of their contracts, six months; (2) actions of innkeepers and teachers in respect of their fees, one year; (3) actions of lawyers and public notaries in respect of their fees, two years; (4) sales of merchandise by merchants to non-merchants, five years; (5) actions to recover freight, one year; (6) actions in respect of bills of exchange (see Bills of Exchange). The limitations mentioned under the first four headings may only be invoked if the defendant on the demand of the plaintiff is prepared under oath to state that the amount claimed has been paid.

Acquisitive prescriptions exist in respect of immovable property where there is bona-fide possession during a period of twenty years under a title, or for thirty years where there is no title.

See also Bills of Exchange.

Limited Partnerships. — See Partnership.

Marriage. — Males under eighteen and females under sixteen years complete cannot marry, except under royal dispensation. Minors must have consent of parents or grandparents. Marriage is a civil contract. The banns are published two or three weeks at the domicile of one of the contracting parties. During this time certain relatives or the officers of the court may interpose objections. Unless a marriage settlement is made by deed before a notary, the system of community of property prevails. Contracts respecting property rights cannot be entered into between the spouses during marriage.

Married Women. — See Legal Capacity.

Matrimonial Actions. — A marriage may be annulled on the ground of bigamy, lack of capacity owing to infancy or insanity, or non-age (see Marriage). The civil effects, as respects third persons, of a marriage deemed null are the same as in the case of valid marriage.

A marriage may be dissolved by divorce or by separation from bed and board. Grounds for divorce: adultery, willful desertion (kwaadwillige verlaten) for a period of five years, conviction for an offense with a punishment of at least four years' imprisonment, cruelty amounting to danger to life.

A judicial separation may be decreed upon any of the grounds sufficient for divorce, and also in cases of extravagances (buitensporigheiten), ill-treatment (mishandelingen), and grave insults (grove beledigingen). By consent of both parties, the court may decree a separation without allegation of any cause, provided the marriage has subsisted two years.

By consent of both parties, a divorce may be decreed after a judicial separation has been effective for five years.

See Hague Convention of June 12, 1902, to which, however, the United States and Great Britain are not parties.

Minors. — Majority is attained upon the completion of the twenty-first year, or upon marriage. The status of majority required by marriage is not lost by a subsequent dissolution of the marriage.

Minors may obtain legal capacity by emancipation under a judgment of the court. Such emancipation may be either a full emancipation granted by a decree of the court of cassation (hooge raad) or emancipation in respect of specific branches of commerce under a judgment of an inferior court (arrondissement-regtbank).

Moratorium. — No moratorium has been declared in the Netherlands. The court in appropriate cases, where it is shown by the debtor that his inability to pay is due entirely or principally to the special conditions arising out of the present war, may grant a suspension of payments not exceeding six months.

Negotiable Instruments. — See Bills of Exchange, Promissory Notes.

Nullity of Marriage. — See Matrimonial Actions.

Partnerships. — The law provides for both general and limited partnerships. In the general partnership there is a joint responsibility of all the partners in respect of all acts within the scope of the partnership. In order to limit the scope of the partnership business it is necessary that the objects of the partnership and other particulars be published in the Official Gazette and in prescribed daily newspapers. If this is not done the partnership will be regarded as having been entered into without restrictions as to the objects of the partnership or the authority of the partners.

Limited partnerships consist of a partner whose liability is general and others whose liability is limited to the amount of money contributed to the partnership capital. The capital of a limited partnership may be divided into shares.

Patents. — Patents are granted for fifteen years subject to the payment of annual taxes. At the time of the application the invention must not have been known or published in the Netherlands or elsewhere. The first applicant is regarded as the inventor unless fraud be shown. The application is examined as to the novelty of the claim and is open to opposition for a period of six months. Patented articles must bear a mark to this effect. The invention must be worked within five years from the date of the grant. If the invention is not adequately worked after three years a compulsory license may be granted by the Government.

Prescription. — See Limitations.

Promissory Notes. — An "order note" possesses the characteristics of a promissory note under the American law. The words "value received" or "value in account" must appear. As regards maturity, indorsement, protest, limitation, rights and duties of holder, etc., an order note is subject to the same rules of law as bills of exchange. See Bills of Exchange.

Sale of Goods. — Property in the goods passes upon delivery. In sales of specific chattels the risk passes to the buyer as soon as the contract is concluded. In sales by number, weight, or measure the risk attaches to the seller until the counting, weighing, or measuring has been completed. Unless there is a stipulation to the contrary, the price is payable against delivery. Where the goods have latent defects a restitution in integrum, or a return of a proportionate part of the price may be decreed. Claims in respect of latent defects must be brought within a reasonable time (in practice usually six weeks) after the discovery of the defect.

Separation. — See Matrimonial Actions.

Shipping Law. — Special provisions govern the rights and liabilities of shipowners. A shipowner may, by abandonment of his interest in a vessel, free himself from personal liability. The sale of a vessel by public sale may take place if consented to by a majority of the owners. The law contains detailed provisions as to contracts, of affreightment, but these rules, laid down in 1838, are largely obsolete in view of the fact that modern charter parties and bills of lading generally provide for the various contingencies and the courts interpret these in the light of modern conditions.

Stamp Duties. — All former laws relating to stamp duties are now superseded by the law of June 1, 1917. Under this law all receipts, invoices, negotiable instruments, company shares, contracts relating to real property and in general all contracts require to be stamped.

Suspension of Payment. — A suspension of payment may be granted by a court upon petition of the debtor. Such suspension may be granted provisionally, and after a meeting of creditors a definitive suspension may be granted for a period not exceeding eighteen months. The business is placed in the hands of a receiver who makes a report to the court every three months. Creditors are prohibited from levying execution, but the suspension of payment does not affect taxes due the State, mortgages, wages, and salaries, rents, and certain other claims. See also Bankruptcy.

Unfair Competition. — The Civil Code provides generally that every illegal act causing damage to another gives rise to a claim for damages. As regards unfair competition, this section was given a very limited application. A law of 1915 provides that any person who for the purpose of furthering a commercial or industrial establishment on behalf of himself or any other person, does any fraudulent act for the purpose of misleading the public generally or any specific person, shall be deemed guilty of unfair competition and punishable criminally.

Wills. — To make a will a person must have completed his eighteenth year. Married women may make wills. The power of testamentary disposition is materially limited by the doctrine of forced heirship (q.v.). Bequests to charitable institutions are valid only if the legatee has been empowered by royal decree to receive legacies. Married persons living under the system of community property can dispose only of their interest in such property. Special restrictions are imposed on legacies to a person who is or was the guardian of the testator or occupied certain named positions of influence over him (teacher, governor, physician, minister, etc.).

Wills are of three kinds: (1) Public wills. These are drawn in the form of a notarial act by a notary in accordance with the verbal instructions of the testator and in the presence of two witnesses. (2) Holographic wills. These must be wholly written and signed by the testator, and must then be placed by the testator, either sealed or unsealed, in the custody of a notary, who must draw up a protocol in reference to such deposit signed by the testator, the notary, and two witnesses. (3) Secret wills. The procedure here is similar to that in reference to holographic wills, except that the will need not be written by the testator himself, and that the protocol is drawn up in the presence of four witnesses.

LAWS OF JAPAN.

Prepared July 20, 1918, expressly for this work, by

J. E. de Becker, Esq., D.C.L., of Yokohama and Tokyo.

The Judicial System. — The Japanese courts consist of (1) Local Courts, (Ku-Saibansho), (2) District Courts (Chihō-Saibansho), (3) Courts of Appeal (Kōso-In), and (4) the Supreme Court (Daishin-In). The Local Courts are held by single judges; District Courts and Courts of Appeal are collegiate courts, divided into several divisions, each consisting of three judges; and the Supreme Court is a collegiate court, also divided into divisions, in each of which five judges sit. All the courts have both civil and criminal jurisdiction, but the scope of jurisdiction possessed by the various classes is defined by law. In addition to the ordinary courts there is one called the Court of Administrative Litigation (Gyōsei-Saibansho) which tries actions brought by the injured party when the right of an individual is injured by an illegal administrative disposition.

Actions. — 1. Forum. — The place where an action may be brought against a person is the place of his domicile. The court of the general forum has jurisdiction over all actions brought against such person, unless an exclusive forum is prescribed by law for a particular action. The general forum of a person having no domicile in Japan is the place of his residence, or if that is not known, the place of his last domicile in Japan; but, if he has a domicile in a foreign country, an action can be brought against him in such a general forum only in case the right on which the action is based arose in Japan. A special forum is the place where some particular kind of action may be brought. The law prescribes certain special forums. By consent of the parties an action may be brought in any court of first instance, except where an exclusive forum is prescribed by law, or where the right on which the action is based is not a property right. Any right having a pecuniary value, or any claim to recover pecuniary damages, is included under the expression "property right."

2. Parties. — A party may in any case conduct his action himself. If he does not choose to do so, he must be represented by a lawyer, except that before a Local Court, or if no lawyer is obtainable, a party may be represented by a relative or a servant, and, if no such person is obtainable, by any other competent person.

A written power of attorney must be filed in the court. It must be certified by a notary or some other proper public officer, if the other party demands such certificate. A power of attorney authorizes the representative to do all acts relating to the action except an appeal, a revision, an appointment of a substitute, a compromise, or the renunciation or acknowledgment of the claim. If the power of attorney is to include those acts, they must be specified in it, and it is always advisable to make the instrument very comprehensive.

3. Security. — A foreign plaintiff is required to give security for costs, except in the following cases: (1) When by treaty, or by the laws of the plaintiff's country, a Japanese in a similar case would not be required to give security; (2) on a counter-claim; (3) in the special proceedings based on bills of exchange, promissory notes, and other kinds of documents. If security to the amount fixed by the judge is not furnished within the time fixed, the action is deemed to have been discontinued.

A foreigner who is unable to bear the costs of a lawsuit may, on application, obtain provisional dispensation from the payment of the costs and from the furnishing of security, provided that a Japanese enjoys the same right in the country of the applicant. If the applicant has a domicile or residence in Japan, he must produce a certificate from the head of the city, town, or village where he lives, or, if these officers cannot give such certificate, from his consul. Otherwise he must produce a certificate from the proper authorities of his country, which must be confirmed by a consul of his country residing in Japan.

4. Service of Papers. — Service of papers is made by the *shittatsuri*¹ or by post. It must be made on the party himself, or, if the action is conducted by a representative, on the latter. However, if a party has a "procurator,"² service on the procurator is generally equivalent to service on the party himself. In the case of a commercial company or other juridical person it is sufficient to make service upon some one of the managers. If a person has a residence or an office in a place, service on him in that place can be made only at such residence or office, unless he consents to a service elsewhere. If the person to be served is absent from his residence, service may be made on any adult relative living in his house, or on his servant. If the person to be served is absent from his office, service may be made on a trade assistant found on the premises. If service cannot be made in any of the above-mentioned ways, it may be made by delivering the paper to the chief official of the city, town, or village where the service ought to be made, and also posting a written notice on the door of the residence and giving notice thereof to two neighbors. If acceptance of the paper to be served is refused without any reasonable cause, it may be left at the place of service. Service cannot be made by a shittateuri on Sunday, or any legal holiday, or at night, except by the permission of the judge. The person who serves a paper, must make a written return of the service, which must be signed by the person to whom the paper is delivered. If the whereabouts of the person to be served is not known, service may be made by a public notification.

² A "procurator" is a registered manager, holding power to represent, and sign for, a firm or company.

5. Procedure in Court. — All proceedings are oral, unless otherwise provided by law. For persons unacquainted with the Japanese language an interpreter must be provided. In an action to which a foreigner is a party, the oral proceedings may be had in a foreign language, if the officials and all the other persons concerned are acquainted with such language, but no instance of an actual application of this provision of the law has ever been known. An action is generally begun by filing in the court a written statement of claim, which must contain: (1) The designation of the parties and of the court; (2) a statement of the nature of the plaintiff's claim and of the ground on which it is based; (3) a prayer for relief; (4) a statement of the facts of the case; (5) a statement of the mode in which the plaintiff's allegations are to be proved; (6) the signature and name-stamp of the plaintiff; (7) the date. In addition, the value of the subject of the controversy must be stated. Between the service of the statement of claim and the trial a period of at least twenty days must intervene. The defendant must file an answer to the statement of claim within two weeks after its service upon him. These periods may, in a proper case, be shortened or extended. The withdrawal of the action without the defendant's consent, or the putting in of a dilatory plea by the defendant, including an objection to the competence of the court, is allowed only before the defendant begins his oral proceedings at the trial.

Judgment must be given within seven days after the last oral proceedings (Art. 233). It must be pronounced orally in open court. The judge may at the same time state the reasons for his judgment, if he chooses to do so. If a party does not appear at the time fixed for a trial, judgment is given against him on the application of the other party. If it is the plaintiff who fails to appear, the action is dismissed. If the defendant makes default, a judgment on the merits is given against him pursuant to the statement of claim, if and in so far as the facts alleged by the plaintiff, if proved, would justify such judgment. A judgment given on the non-appearance of a party will be vacated as of course on an application made to the court within two weeks, but the party applying must pay costs. A second judgment given on the party's failure to appear will not be so vacated.

As to the procedure in Local Courts, the interval between the service of process and the trial need not be more than three days, or in cases of urgency twenty-four hours (Art. 377). On regular trial days the parties may appear before the judge and proceed with the action without any process. Instead of bringing an action, a party may apply to the court to summon the other party for the purpose of making an amicable settlement of the case.

6. Evidence. — Evidence is generally taken before the court. Every person is bound to testify, except where it is otherwise provided by law. A witness who fails to appear, must pay the costs arising therefrom and also a fine not exceeding twenty yen. If he fails to appear a second time, the judge may order him to be brought to the court.

A relative¹ of a party, a person under his guardianship, his servant, or a person living in his house, may refuse to testify, except in certain specified cases. The following persons may also refuse to testify: (1) Public officers in regard to facts which their official duty requires them to keep secret; (2) priests, physicians, apothecaries, lawyers, notaries, etc., in regard to facts confided to them by reason of their position; (3) any person as to questions, the answer to which would disgrace himself, a relative or servant of his, or a person living in his house, or would cause pecuniary damage to himself or to such a person.

A party may object to a witness, if he is a relative or servant of the other party, or lives in the same house with him. A witness must affirm that he will speak the truth and will not conceal or add anything. Perjury is punished as a crime. A witness who refuses to affirm is deemed to refuse to testify. The parties are not allowed to put questions direct to a witness, but may request the president of the court to do so. If the president refuses to put the questions, the court decides whether he shall do it. Hearsay evidence, and what would be considered in America irrelevant testimony, is freely admitted. If after all the evidence produced by the parties has been taken, it seems to the court to be insufficient, the court may order the examination of the parties.

7. Appeal, Revision, and Complaint. — An appeal lies against a judgment rendered in first instance by a District Court or a Local Court. It must be taken within one month from the service of the judgment. Proceedings before the Court of Appeal are oral, and new allegations of facts and new evidence may be introduced.

Revision applies to judgments rendered in the second instance by a District Court or a ¹ These include relatives by blood up to the sixth degree inclusive; husband and wife; and relatives by affinity up to the third degree inclusive.

Court of Appeal. It is only for errors in law. The time for revision is the same as for appeal.

Complaint can be made against any ruling or order of the court, other than a judgment, by which an application relating to the proceedings is refused, and in such other cases as are prescribed by law. A decision on a complaint is generally made without oral proceedings. No period is fixed for a complaint, except that in certain cases an immediate complaint¹ is provided for, which must be made within one week from the service of the order or ruling.

8. Summary Proceedings. — When a claim is for a fixed sum of money, or for the prestation of a fixed quantity of other fungible² things, or of securities, the creditor, instead of bringing an action, may apply to the Local Court of the general forum of the debtor, or if the claim is secured by a lien on an immovable, of the real forum, to make an "order of payment" against the debtor. The latter may object to this order within two weeks after it is served upon him, or at any time before an order of execution is made. If he does not do so, an order will be made for the execution of the order of payment.

9. Execution. — As a general rule execution is granted on a judgment which is no longer subject to appeal or revision, and also on certain orders of court, on compromises made in court, and on notarial instruments for the payment of a fixed sum of money or the prestation of a fixed quantity of fungible things or of securities, provided it is so expressly stipulated in the instrument.

In certain cases of urgency, or in any case if the plaintiff gives security, a judgment may on application be at once declared provisionally executory. It may then be executed immediately, although the time for appeal or revision has not elapsed.

In certain cases, enumerated in Art. 501 of the Code of Civil Procedure, judgments are declared provisionally executory without any application on the part of the creditor.

Execution is generally carried out by the shittatsuri. It cannot be effected at night, or on Sunday, or a legal holiday, except by the express permission of the court. Necessaries of life are exempt from execution. What these are, is specified in Art. 570 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Movables seized on execution cannot, as a general rule, be sold until one week after the seizure. The sale is by public auction, but securities which are listed on the Stock Exchange are sold by private sale at the quotation of the day. Execution on an obligation in favor of the debtor against a third person is made by an order of the court forbidding the third person to perform to the debtor, and either transferring the obligation itself to the creditor or authorizing him to enforce it for his own benefit. If an execution is made on an obligation which is secured by mortgage, the fact must be registered.

The income of public officers, priests or clergymen, teachers, workmen, laborers, and servants is exempt from execution, unless it exceeds three hundred yen yearly, in which case half of the excess can be taken.

Execution against immovables is either by a sale at auction or by a sequestration. The fact of the execution must be entered on the Register. A sale is allowed only if it is probable that a surplus will remain after deducting the value of all real rights and other charges prior to the claim of the execution creditor, unless the latter offers to purchase the immovable at a higher price and gives security therefor. The sale is made by a shittatsuri. On demand of any person interested, a bidder must give security, to the amount of one-tenth of his bid, by a deposit of cash or equivalent security. If the purchaser fails to pay the purchase money at the proper time, the court must order a re-sale, and the first purchaser is liable for the difference between the price obtained at the first and at the second sale, and for all expenses caused by his failure to pay. Instead of an auction, bids in writing may be ordered by the court.

A "provisional seizure"³ may be made in a case where otherwise execution would be found impossible or substantially more difficult, e.g., there is a reasonable ground to believe that the debtor is about to abscond to a foreign country.

A "provisional disposition"⁴ as to a matter in dispute may be made by the court if it appears that by the act of one of the parties the existing situation may be so changed that execution may become impossible or substantially more difficult, etc.

10. Arbitration. — An agreement to arbitrate is void unless it refers to a specific matter and controversies arising therefrom. Thus an agreement made beforehand to submit to arbitration all controversies which may arise out of a specific partnership contract would be quite valid, but an agreement between two persons to submit to arbitration controversies which might thereafter arise between them, would be void.

Acknowledgments. — These can be made in the presence of a notary public, but the drawback to employing a notary is that the proceedings must be conducted in the Japanese language, and that the notary's act must be recorded in Japanese script, thus entailing much troublesome work. Among foreigners resident in Japan, the custom is to make acknowledgments before their respective consuls, but the documents so acknowledged are neither deemed to be "notarial deeds" by the courts, nor to possess evidential value in a judicial sense.

Administration of Estates. — The heir usually assumes his duties and acts as executor or administrator, but executors can be appointed by will. By Japanese law the property goes to the heirs directly, and the executor, if there is one, is a mere manager and does not become the owner of the property. In the case of foreigners, succession to property at death is determined according to the law of the country of the decedent.

² A fungible thing is a thing which is to be delivered in kind and not in species, as for example, a certain quantity of rice, when no specific rice is agreed for.

To obtain probate no bond is necessary at present, and the proceedings are confined to proving the execution of the will. Wills are not "recorded" in the court as in America and England, and ancillary probate of foreign wills is not required. A copy of a will proved abroad will be recognised in Japan, if properly certified by the competent authorities or consul.

Estate duty is payable on a sliding scale commencing at one and one half per cent. and running up to six and one half per cent.: the rate depends on the proximity of relationship, and the taxable value of the property involved.

There is no process by which an executor can obtain a formal discharge from the court upon the completion of his duties or upon his resignation.

In case the heir is unknown, the property of the succession is constituted into a juridical entity and placed under the charge of a manager specially appointed by the court; and in the entire absence of an heir, the estate reverts to the State after certain public notifications have been given and a certain period of time has expired without any person claiming the property.

Affidavits. — There is no provision in the law for extra-judicial oaths and declarations. Foreigners generally make them in the presence of their respective consular officials, but such acts are not accorded any weight as evidence in the courts and possess no probative force.

Arrest. — Imprisonment for debt is unknown, and even in the case of a party disobeying the mandates of a civil court, or leaving Japan to avoid civil process, personal arrest is not allowed. "Contempt of court" (in the American sense) cannot be dealt with by committal, the result being that certain court orders in the nature of injunctions (provisional dispositions) are rendered entirely nugatory in practice.

Bankruptcy. — There is an old bankruptcy law in force which regulates the bankruptcy of traders, but it has proved unsatisfactory, and the Government is now drafting a new statute dealing with the matter. An adjudication may be made on the application of the debtor himself, or of any of his creditors; but if made by a creditor security must be lodged with the court. Any trader who suspends payment must give notice to the court within five days. Any gratuitous disposition made by the debtor after suspension of payment, or within thirty days previous thereto, is void as against the creditors. The law provides penalties for deceit and fraud in connection with bankruptcy, and contains provisions for respite, composition, and rehabilitation under certain specific conditions. Domestic and foreign creditors are on equal footing.

Bankruptcy administration is conducted by an administrator chosen from a list of official administrators, subject, however, to the supervision of a commissioner appointed from among the judges of the court having jurisdiction.

Claims are presented and examined at a creditors' meeting called by the commissioner and are deemed to be admitted if not challenged: if a claim is objected to, it is referred by the commissioner to the Bankruptcy Court, and decided upon at a regular sitting.

Assets are gradually distributed among the creditors who have enforceable claims against the bankrupt subsisting when the proceedings are commenced. There are provisions for the protection of preferential claims.

Bills of Exchange, Promissory Notes, and Checks. — The law of bills and notes, which is contained in the Commercial Code, is substantially the same as that of most European countries and closely resembles the German law. As there is no law which forbids the making of a bill or note in any language, such instrument can be drawn up in foreign languages.

A bill or note must contain an explicit denomination of itself as such. For instance, in Japanese the words Kawase-tegata or Yakusoku-tegata, in English the words "bill of exchange" or "promissory note," in German the word Wechsel or Hand-schein, in French the words Lettre de change or Billet de change or Promesse should be used. A mere written order for money, or a promise to pay money, which does not declare itself to be a bill or note, is not sufficient. If anything is inserted in a bill or note in addition to the matters specified in the law as proper to be inserted, that is not regarded as forming a part of the instrument, although it may be binding as a contract between the immediate parties. This includes a stipulation for interest on the principal sum named in the bill. Therefore, if interest is to be made payable, it should be computed in advance and put in as a part of the principal sum.

A bill or note for less than thirty yen cannot be made payable to bearer. Days of grace are not allowed. A bill payable at sight or on demand must be presented for payment within one year, unless a shorter time is specified in the instrument itself. Not only foreign bills, but all bills or notes which are dishonored, must be protested to enable the holder to have recourse against the prior parties.

A check can be made payable only at sight, and must be presented for payment within ten days from its date. If dishonored, it may be protested, but it is sufficient instead of a formal protest to have the bank make a memorandum on the check of the fact and date of dishonor. On a crossed check the word "bank" (ginkō) or some equivalent word (such as "& Co.") should be written.

It is made an offense punishable by fine to draw a check on a bank where the drawer has neither a deposit nor a credit, even without any fraudulent intent.

The "formal validity" of a bill drawn in a foreign country is determined according to the laws of such country.

Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgages. — These are unknown, but conditional sales of specific property can be made effective in the case of immovables (real estate) by registration, and in the case of movables (personal property) by means of a notarially attested deed, which must be drawn by a Japanese notary in the Japanese language.

Checks. — See Bills of Exchange, etc.

Companies. — There are four kinds of commercial companies, viz: ordinary partnerships (gōmeikwaisha), limited partnerships (gōshi-kwaisha), joint-stock companies (kabushiki-kwaisha), and joint-stock limited companies (kabushiki-gōshi-kwaisha). Each of these (including an ordinary partnership) is a juridical or artificial person like a corporation, having for legal purposes a personality distinct from that of its members and being able as a person to hold property, buy, sell and contract, sue and be sued separately. A partnership or company created in Japan under the Commercial Code, and duly registered, becomes a Japanese juridical person distinct from its individual members, even though some, or all, of its members are foreigners. Such a partnership or company of foreigners has, as a Japanese juridical person, practically all the rights of a similar native organization.

(A) Ordinary partnerships have two or more partners each of whom is unlimitedly liable for the debts of the firm; newly admitted partners become personally responsible for all the debts of the partnership, even for those which were contracted before their admission, and a retiring partner continues liable for the debts of the firm contracted before he left it for two years calculated from the registration of his retirement. (Commercial Code, Arts. 49 to 103.)

(B) Limited partnerships are made up of one or more active partners with unlimited liability and one or more partners with limited liability. (Commercial Code, Arts. 104 to 118.)

(C) Joint-stock Companies resemble the English joint-stock companies, and cannot be formed by less than seven persons. (Commercial Code, Arts. 119 to 234.) In the absence of any registered restriction on his powers, each and every director is entitled to represent the company.

(D) Joint-stock limited Companies are limited partnerships in which the part of the capital contributed by the limited partners is represented by transferable shares, like the capital of a joint-stock company. (Commercial Code, Arts. 235 to 254.)

(E) Foreign Commercial Companies. — A foreign company is a company which is organized under the law of a foreign country. A company formed by foreigners in Japan under the Japanese law is, as already mentioned, a Japanese and not a foreign company; and enjoys nearly all the rights of a Japanese company; but it does not enjoy diplomatic protection, and this should be borne in mind. Foreign commercial companies are recognized by Japanese law and are allowed to do business in Japan, subject, however, to the power of the court to close the office of the company, if its representative commits, in the course of its business, "any act contrary to public welfare or to good morals." A foreign commercial company may even have its principal office in Japan, but in that case it must comply with all the requirements which the law imposes upon Japanese companies. If, however, it only establishes a branch office here, it must appoint a representative, who will be deemed to possess full and unrestricted power to act for the company. For certain purposes that branch office of a foreign company which is first established in Japan is treated as its principal office.

A foreign company must make the same registrations which are required to be made by a Japanese company of the same or a similar kind. In making an application to register a foreign commercial company, the name and domicile of the representative of the branch office must be inserted in the application, and the following documents annexed: (1) A document sufficiently showing that a principal office exists; (2) a document showing the character of the representative as such; (3) the company contract or a document sufficient to show the nature of the company. The above documents must be certified by the proper authorities of the country to which the foreign company belongs, or by a consul of such country residing in Japan. (Commercial Code, Arts. 255 to 260, and special laws.)

Copyright. — By the revised law enforced since 1910, and based on the resolution of the International Copyright Convention held at Berne in 1908, the protection covered by the new legislative act has been considerably enlarged in scope. The law no longer requires the registration of copyright merely for the purpose of protecting it against piracy, but registration is required when copyright is to be used as an object of pledge, and generally as an object of market value. The fee is yen 10 ($5) for a book, fifty sen (twenty-five cents) for a newspaper or periodical, and forty-five sen (twenty-two and one half cents) for a drama or photo. A Copyright Convention exists between Japan and the United States.

Costs in Civil Procedure. — These are paid by means of adhesive stamps affixed to the original petitions. nership" in the Anglo-American sense is represented by the "Associations" (Societas) of the Civil Code (Arts. 667 to 688). There is another form of "partnership" recognised under the head of "Anonymous Association" in the Commercial Code (Arts. 297 to 304).

Patents. — An applicant for a patent or a patentee, who is not domiciled in Japan, must appoint a representative domiciled in Japan.

A patent right is granted for a term of fifteen years from the day of the registration of the patent. The term, however, can be extended for a period of from three to ten years. A patent right can be assigned or pledged, but such assignment or pledge can only be set up against third persons when registered.

If a person who has applied for a patent in a country belonging to the International Union for the Protection of Industrial Property applies in Japan within twelve months thereafter for a patent on the same invention, such latter application has the same effect as if it had been made at the time of the former application.

When an application for a patent is refused, the applicant may within sixty days demand a reëxamination by another examiner, stating grounds for such demand. If the desired patent is again refused, he is entitled to a hearing before the Patent Office, if he should apply for it within sixty days. From a decision of the Patent Office, an appeal lies to the Supreme Court on questions of law only.

A patent may be revoked by the Director of the Patent Office: (1) If the patentee does not, for three years or more from the day of the registration of his patent, properly use the same, or, if he suspends the use thereof for three years or more; (2) if the patentee fails to pay any fee on his patent when it falls due.

Fees are payable on a patent as follows: —

Pledge. — A pledge (shichi-ken) is where property is put into the possession of the creditor to hold as collateral security for his claim. Movables, immovables, or rights may be pledged. The thing pledged must be actually delivered into the possession of the pledgee. It cannot be kept for him by the pledgor as his agent or bailee. There is no method by which security can be given on movables without actual delivery, except when they are stored in a public warehouse or are in course of carriage, and a warehouse receipt or bill of lading has been given for them. The practice common in England and America of hypothecating chattels by a registered bill of sale is not admitted in Japanese law.

Powers of Attorney. — Powers of attorney for use in Japan should, if executed abroad, be authenticated by a notary or magistrate in the manner and form in vogue in the country where they are made; and it is preferable that they should be additionally authenticated by a Japanese diplomatic or consular officer. In view of the great distance between Japan and various Western countries, and in view of the fact that it may be absolutely necessary to delegate powers owing to the peculiar provisions of certain law, it is always advisable to draw instruments of this nature very fully, and invariably essential to insert a substitution clause, so as to provide against all possible contingencies.

Powers of attorney executed in Japan need not, generally speaking, be authenticated, but there are certain exceptions to this rule, and if the other party demands authentication it must be obtained at the hands of a Japanese notary or a consul of the nationality to which the maker of the instrument belongs.

In drawing powers of attorney for use in Japan (even when made out in favor of a lawyer) the following clauses should be carefully inserted to provide against contingencies: —

"To commence and prosecute any actions, suits or other proceedings in any courts whatsoever against any person or persons and to follow up such actions suits or other proceedings to judgment and execution or other final determination or otherwise act therein as my said attorney shall think fit;

"For me and in my name to appear and defend any actions, cross actions suits or other proceedings which have been already instituted and commenced or which shall hereafter be instituted and commenced against me;

"For the better and more effectual carrying out and performance of the matters mentioned herein to select and appoint process attorneys solicitors or advocates to conduct suits, and to confer upon such process-attorneys, solicitors or advocates authority to undertake all acts of procedure, including the power to deposit and withdraw security, to apply for orders, injunctions and provisional dispositions, to lodge appeals, to demand revision, to apply for a renewal of procedure, to appoint a substitute or substitutes, to arrange settlement of suits by compromise, to renounce the subject-matter in dispute, or to admit any adversary's claim;

"To make all necessary applications and notifications to the various competent Authorities concerned and to register and cancel facts necessary to be registered or cancelled in the various Government offices, courts, or consulates having jurisdiction." (If necessary, add: "such powers to include the power to make all necessary applications and notifications relative to patents, patents of improvements, exhibits of invention, trade-marks, designs, utility models, et cetera.")

The nationality of the grantor should be stated and officially certified, and in the case of a corporation full officially certified particulars must be given.

Prize Law. — Proceedings in prize are regulated by Imperial Ordinance No. 149 of the 27th year of Meiji (1894), amended by Imperial Ordinance No. 188 of the 3d year of Taishō (1914).

Seals. — In Japan every person possesses — or is supposed to possess — a seal which he affixes to important papers. Most persons have two seals, one known as a jitsu-in ("true seal") and the other as a mitome-in ("initialing seal"). The jitsu-in (true seal) is registered with the local Government office, and a certificate of an impression thereof can be procured from the mayor for a trifling fee, on the application of the owner whenever a necessity arises to prove its authenticity. The mitome-in (initialing seal) is used for formal acts and is generally not registered, but it is equally binding on the user. Seals are only a relic of a past age when but few persons could write their names, and in these modern times the omission to seal a document after signature does not invalidate the instrument, unless in a case where sealing is a formal and specific statutory requirement. The question is one of personal identity pure and simple. "The common seal of a corporation" is unknown in Japan in the Anglo American sense, and while corporations do actually adopt and use seals for purposes of advertisement and convenience, the affixing of a corporation seal has no special signification. The corporation does not "speak through its seal," but through the signature of its directors. The name of the corporation is first written down, after which each of the directors acting signs his own name and affixes his own seal. Corporations do not possess an official "secretary," president, or treasurer recognized by law. So far as foreigners are concerned, where under any law or regulation a Japanese subject must sign his name and affix his name-stamp, or sign his name or affix his name-stamp to a document, it is sufficient for a foreigner to sign only. The old foreign custom of using wafer-seals on documents in Japan is entirely superfluous unless such papers are intended for subsequent use abroad.

Trade-Marks. — Trade-marks are regulated by Law No. 25 of the 2d of April, 1909. The exclusive right is granted for a term of twenty years from the day of its registration, but it can be renewed. A trade-mark cannot be assigned except in connection with the business for the purposes of which it is used. Such assignment can be set up against third persons only when duly registered. If several applications are made for the registration of the same trade-mark, the first one takes precedence. If they are made at the same time, none of them is granted. If a person who has applied for the registration of a trade-mark in a country belonging to the International Union for the Protection of Industrial Property applies in Japan within four months thereafter for the registration of the same trade-mark, such latter application has the same effect as if it had been made at the time of the former application. If an application for the registration of a trade-mark is refused, the applicant has the same remedies as an applicant for a patent in the same situation. The fees payable are, yen 3 upon application; yen 20 upon registration; yen 10 on assignment; yen 2 upon application for renewal; yen 20 for renewal; yen 3 upon application for reexamination; and yen 12 upon application for decision of the Patent Office.

Trusts. — Trusts as such are unknown in Japan, but in order to meet the demand for a system for the protection of debenture-holders a law known as "The Secured Debentures Trust Law" (No. 52 of 1905) has been enacted in connection with "The Factory Mortgage Law" (No. 54 of 1905) and "The Railway Mortgage Law" (No. 53 of 1905). Under its provisions it is now possible to mortgage various kinds of property, both movable and immovable, including, inter alia pledges of movable properties, pledges of claims supported by documentary evidence, mortgages of immovable properties, of ships, railways, tramways, factories (including fittings, machinery, tools, and accessories), mining properties, rights of individual ownership, etc. The modus operandi is to create "estates" or "foundations" composed of certain property, and to register a mortgage on the same to a trust company for the benefit of the debenture-holders. The trust only extends to specific property listed in the inventories, and no words inserted in the deed can create a floating charge. An agreement can be made to add after-acquired property to the mortgaged "estate," but until such property is specifically added, and registered, the bondholders do not acquire any extra security. A "floating charge" is unknown in Japanese law, and is opposed to its fundamental principles.

War Legislation. — An Imperial Ordinance (No. 41 of the 23d of April, 1917) has been promulgated forbidding transactions with enemy subjects and states. It provides that no unlicensed transactions may be made or entered into with, or for the benefit of: (1) Enemy countries (the German Empire and other Powers engaged in hostile acts against the Allied Powers); (2) enemy subjects or juridical persons; (3) persons who are domiciled in enemy territory, or who make it their principal object to carry on businesses within enemy territory; (4) businesses which have been publicly listed by the Government as being under the management, either wholly or partly, of enemy persons, or as being under enemy influence. The penalties imposed are (1) a fine not exceeding two hundred yen (one hundred dollars) or (2) penal servitude for a term not exceeding one year. The Ordinance is effective throughout the Empire, and wherever Japan enjoys extraterritorial jurisdiction.

Enemy subjects in Japan receive remarkably liberal treatment in regard to freedom of residence, etc., but their incomes and disbursements are controlled by the Government, and any indiscreet conduct leads to deportation. No enemy subjects are now allowed to land in Japan. No moratorium has been decreed. A law has been passed dealing with the control and utilisation of industrial property rights owned by enemy subjects.

Wills. — A person who has completed his fifteenth year can make a will. A will can be made (1) by a holograph document, (2) by a public (notarially certified) document, or (3) by a secret document; but exceptional forms are provided for in cases of urgency (Civil Code, Arts. 1050 to 1086). Wills must not contravene provisions re legal portions (lineal descendant who is the legal heir to a house, fifty per cent.; any other heir to a house, thirty-three and one third per cent.). As regards foreigners, the existence and the effect of a will are governed by the law of the nationality of the testator. As to the form and manner of making a will, the law of the place where it is made may be followed. Apparently therefore, so far as the form is concerned, a foreigner may make his will in the manner prescribed by his own law or by the law of Japan; but care must be exercised in regard to form when disposing of property situated abroad.

MEXICO LAWS.

Revised December 1, 1918, by

Harvey A. Basham, Esq., Mutual Life Building, Mexico City, Mexico.

Note: The new Federal Constitution became effective May 1, 1917. The laws enacted by the first Congress, following the adoption of the said Constitution, refer to the method of conducting national elections, legal arbitration and its enforcement, and other subjects of local interest; but no laws of special interest to foreigners were enacted. The Congress vested authority in the Executive to issue special decrees, as he might deem expedient, relating to (Hacienda) the Treasury Department.

The States, in the majority, have promulgated new State Constitutions, which are consistent with and in substance the same as the Federal Constitution.

By special authority given the Executive by the Congress, he has issued various decrees bearing on taxation and kindred subjects. Some of these have served to indicate the Government's intention and views in favor of the enforcement of Article 27 of the new Constitution, and especially the nationalization of petroleum lands and the tax to be imposed thereon.

It is expected that the present Congress will enact a general law giving effect to the provisions of the Constitution applicable to oil land leases, and that it will either approve or modify the decrees already issued.

Article 27 embodies radical innovations in the basic laws of the country, hence certain paragraphs are herewith quoted in part:

"Art. 27. The ownership of lands and waters comprised within the limits of the national territory is vested originally in the Nation, which has had, and has, the right to transmit title thereof to private persons, thereby constituting private property."

"Private property shall not be expropriated except for reasons of public utility and by means of indemnification."

"The Nation shall have at all times the right to impose on private property such limitations as the public interest may demand as well as the right to regulate the development of natural resources, which are susceptible of appropriation, in order to conserve them and equitably to distribute the public wealth."

"In the Nation is vested direct ownership of all minerals or substances which in veins, layers, masses, or beds constitute deposits whose nature is different from the components of the land."

"In the Nation is likewise vested the ownership of the waters of territorial seas to the extent and in the terms fixed by the law of nations; those of lakes and inlets of bays; those of interior lakes of natural formation which are directly connected with flowing waters; those of principal rivers or tributaries, etc."

"In the cases to which the two foregoing paragraphs refer, the ownership of the Nation is inalienable and may not be lost by prescription; concessions shall be granted by the Federal Government to private parties or civil or commercial corporations organized under the laws of Mexico, only on condition that said resources be regularly developed, and on the further condition that the legal provisions be observed."

"Legal capacity to acquire ownership of lands and waters of the Nation shall be governed by the following provisions:

"I. Only Mexicans by birth or naturalization and Mexican companies have the right to acquire ownership in lands, waters and their appurtenances, or to obtain concessions to develop mines, waters or mineral fuels in the Republic of Mexico. The Nation may grant the same right to foreigners, provided they agree before the Department of Foreign Affairs to be considered Mexicans in respect to such property, and accordingly not to invoke the protection of their Governments in respect to the same, under penalty, in case of breach, of forfeiture to the Nation of property so acquired. Within a zone of one hundred kilometers from the frontiers, and of fifty kilometers from the frontiers, and of fifty kilometers from the sea coast, no foreigners shall under any conditions acquire direct ownership of lands and waters."

"IV. Commercial stock companies shall not acquire, hold, or administer rural properties. Companies of this nature which may be organized to develop any manufacturing, mining, petroleum or other industry, excepting only agricultural industries, may acquire, hold or administer lands only in an area absolutely necessary for their establishments or adequate to serve the purposes indicated, which the Executive of the Union or of the respective State in each case shall determine."

" V. Banks duly organized under the laws governing institutions of credit may take mortgage loans on rural and urban property in accordance with the provisions of the said laws, but they may not own nor administer more real property than that absolutely necessary for their direct purposes; and they may furthermore hold temporarily for the brief term fixed by law such real property as may be judicially adjudicated to them in execution proceedings."

" VI. Properties held in common by co-owners, hamlets situated on private property, pueblos, tribal congregations and other settlements which, as a matter of fact or law, conserve their communal character, shall have legal capacity to enjoy in common the waters, woods and lands belonging to them, or which may have been or shall be restored to them according to the law of January 6, 1915, until such time as the manner of making the division of the lands shall be determined by law."

" VII. Excepting the corporations to which Clauses III, IV, V, and VI hereof refer, no other civil corporation may hold or administer on its own behalf real estate or mortgage loans derived therefrom, with the single exception of buildings designed directly and immediately for the purposes of the institution. The States, the Federal District and the Territories, as well as the municipalities throughout the Republic, shall enjoy full legal capacity to acquire and hold all real estate necessary for public services."

" The Federal and State laws shall determine within their respective jurisdictions those cases in which the occupation of private property shall be considered of public utility; and in accordance with the said laws the administrative authorities shall make the corresponding declaration."

" All proceedings, findings, decisions and all operations of demarcation, concession, composition, judgment, compromise, alienation, or auction which may have deprived properties held in common by co-owners, hamlets situated on private property, settlements, congregations, tribes and other settlement organizations still existing since the law of June 25, 1856, of the whole or a part of their lands, woods and waters, are declared null and void; all findings, resolutions and operations which may subsequently take place and produce the same effects shall likewise be null and void. Consequently all lands, forests and waters of which the above mentioned settlements may have been deprived shall be restored to them according to the decree of January 6, 1915, which shall remain in force as a constitutional law."

" During the next constitutional term, the Congress and the State Legislatures shall enact laws, within their respective jurisdictions, for the purpose of carrying out the division of large landed estates, subject to certain conditions."

" All contracts and concessions made by former Governments from and after the year 1876 which shall have resulted in the monopoly of lands, waters and natural resources of the Nation by a single individual or corporation, are declared subject to revision, and the Executive is authorized to declare those null and void which seriously prejudice the public interest."

The Commercial Code adopted September 15, 1889, is in force throughout the Republic of Mexico, and comprises the laws relating to general mercantile transactions, corporations, partnerships, joint-stock companies, agency, sales, bills and notes, insurance, maritime law, bankruptcy, evidence, and procedure.

The Civil Code, from which the laws relating to wills, inheritance, the rights of married women, real estate, mortgages, etc., have been digested, is the Civil Code of the Mexican Federal District and Territories. This Code became effective June 1, 1884, and has been adopted with some slight modifications by a majority of the twenty-seven Mexican States. However, as each State has its own executive, legislative, and judicial system and laws, it is advisable in every case to examine the laws of the particular State in which a given transaction arises. Certain provisions of these Codes are subject to such amendments or other provisions imposed by the new Federal Constitution, and which will be more distinctly set out and defined in subsequent Federal legislation.

All amounts of money indicated are in United States currency.

Aliens. — Aliens enjoy all the rights and privileges guaranteed by the Federal Constitution to Mexicans themselves, subject, however, to the special conditions stated in Article 27 and other Articles of the Constitution. Foreigners cannot take any part in the political affairs of the country.

Attachments. — Attachment as a Precautionary Measure. — The property of a debtor may be sequestered in case (a) it is feared that any property subject to which a real action is brought may be hidden or wasted; (b) when the action is a personal one and when the debtor has no other goods than those in respect of which the proceeding is taken and it is feared that he may hide or transfer the same. The creditor must prove his right to bring suit with documents relating to the case, and the fact that there are no other goods and that the debtor may hide or transfer the same is evidenced on the testimony of no less than three eligible witnesses. In the application for sequestration, the amount of the demand or the value of the thing claimed must be expressed, and such article must be designated with precision. On making the decree of sequestration, the judge fixes the amount which the proceeding involves, and in case the sequestration is sought without being founded on documents giving the creditor right to executive action, such creditor must give security for any damage or losses which may be suffered. Should the debtor deposit the object claimed or its value, or give sufficient security or prove that he has sufficient property to meet the demand, the proceeding shall be withdrawn. (Arts. 1171-1180, Com. Code.)

In case the demand in the action shall not have been filed previous to the attachment or sequestration, the creditor is obliged to file such demand within three days, provided the action is brought in the place where the sequestration has been made. Upon opposition to the petition for sequestration either by the debtor or by a third party, the court is required to cite the parties to meet within three days, and if at the expiration of that period proof be offered the same shall be received within the following ten days. Decision thereon shall be rendered within three days following the meeting or within a like term after the period for proof has terminated.

Attachment in Executive Proceedings. — Certain documents entitle the holder to bring what is termed an executive action, in which case the plaintiff is entitled, as a matter of right, to attach the defendant's property. He may also be entitled to this right as a precautionary measure, as noted above. The following entitle the holder to executive action and consequently to attachment: (1) An executive judgment or non-appealable award; (2) public instruments, which are instruments executed before a notary; (3) judicial confession of the debtor; (4) bills of exchange, drafts, notes, orders, and other commercial paper, providing, however, that such instruments are executed in accordance with the provisions of the Commercial Code (see below); (5) policies of insurance; (6) awards of experts designated in insurance matters if given before a notary; if not so given, a judicial declaration of the experts, acknowledging their signatures and genuineness of the award, must first be had; (7) invoices, current accounts, and any other commercial contract signed and judicially recognized by the debtor. (Art. 1391, Com. Code.)

With regard to (4) above, article 546 of the Commercial Code provides that drafts, due-bills, and promissory notes to order must contain (1) the date and place of execution; (2) name and signature of the person liable; (3) amount of money or goods to be delivered, and date and place where the delivery is to be made; (4) the person to whose order the document is drawn; (5) the mercantile operation out of which it arises, if not executed by one merchant in favor of another merchant; (6) whether the value has been received, agreed upon, or is on account of, or proceeds from another operation. Article 547 further provides that promissory notes not drawn to order are not mercantile documents, and therefore do not give rise to any cause of action except the ordinary one, which is non-executive. In order to obtain executive action upon a bill of exchange, judicial recognition of the signature of the defendant must be previously obtained. However, the recognition of the signature shall not be necessary in order to issue execution against the acceptor. (Art. 534, Com. Code.)

The plaintiff is required to present his document entitling him to executive action, together with his demand upon the debtor. Upon these, a peremptory order is prepared, directing the debtor to make payment, and if he fails to do so, that sufficient goods to cover the debt, and costs, be attached.

If service of this order upon the debtor is not made at once, an appointment for a certain day and hour is made, which he is directed to keep. Should he not keep this appointment, the attachment takes effect immediately. Properties are attached in the following order: (a) Merchandise; (b) credits; (c) other personal property; (d) real property; (e) the remaining rights of action, etc., which the defendant may have. The attachment having been effected, the debtor is notified to appear before the court within three days to make full payment or to oppose the execution. (Arts. 1392-1396, Com. Code.)

Within such period of three days, the debtor must put in a defense accorded by the instrument on which it is founded, or move for judicial confession or acknowledgment. Should the execution creditor object to the instrument presented by the debtor, and offer proof, a period of proof not exceeding fifteen days is indicated, and this period having elapsed, the judge cites the parties to a verbal hearing, which must take place within ten days, and a decision must be rendered within five days thereafter.

The following defenses may be urged by the debtor: (1) To judgments: payment, when an execution is asked for within one hundred and eighty days; compromise, compensation, or arbitration if exceeding one hundred and eighty days and less than one year; renewal, delay or release, agreement not to demand, or forgery, if more than one year has elapsed; providing, however, that these defenses, except that of forgery, must be subsequent to the judgment, and be evidenced by a public document, by a document judicially recognized, or by a judicial confession; (2) to bills of exchange: the defenses of forgery, nullity, payment, compensation, limitation or lapse of bill, delay or acquittance given by the defendant, which is proved by a public writing or private document judicially recognized; (3) to bills of lading; forgery or material error in execution; (4) to other mercantile documents: (a) forgery of the document or contract contained in the same; (b) force or fear; (c) prescription or forfeiture of the document; (d) want of personality upon the part of the execution creditor or of the acknowledgment of the signature of the execution debtor in cases where such acknowledgment is necessary; (e) incompetency of the judge; (f) payment or compensation; (g) release or acquittal; (h) a promise not to collect, or to wait; (i) renewal of the contract. The defenses included from (f) to (i) shall be admissible only when founded on documentary proof. (Arts. 1397-1403; also arts. 535-583, Com. Code.)

When the debtor presents a defense and the matter requires proof, a period not exceed-depending on the class or kind of obligation) and the interest due may be enforced at the present time. These decrees were promulgated at the time that fiat paper money, issued during the revolution, was retired from circulation, and metallic currency substituted therefor. The object was to provide means for meeting all demands in metallic currency and avoid the scarcity of a circulating medium of currency in changing the monetary system to a metallic basis, and at the same time to protect debtors from being required to pay in metallic currency obligations contracted by them in paper money of far less value. All banks of issue being in liquidation their bills are not legal tender and only metallic currency is now accepted as such.

Claims against Estates. — Creditors against estates may present their claims only after the inventory has been made, and approved by the court. (Art. 3731, Civ. Code.)

The only claims paid before the formation of the inventory are the following: (1) The funeral expenses and the doctor's bills for the last illness; (2) the cost of living for the heirs, that is, expenses for food, etc. (Arts. 3775-3778, Civ. Code.)

After the inventory is presented to the court, the claims must be filed and approved after which they are paid in the order in which they were presented. The first to be put in possession of their share will be the heirs, and the creditors will then present themselves. (Arts. 3785-3791, Civ. Code.)

Any suit between a creditor and the estate is instituted and proceeded with according to the usual form of actions prescribed by the Civil Code. (Art. 3786, Civ. Code.)

Corporations. — Formation. — Corporations are formed in two ways, viz.: (1) By public subscription, or (2) by the execution by two or more persons of a public writing comprising the certificate of incorporation. (Art. 166, Com. Code.)

In whichever mode the corporation is organized, it is necessary that all of the capital stock be subscribed for and that ten per cent. of the subscriptions, represented by money, be paid in cash. If such ten per cent. be not paid within the time specified by the founders, such shares shall be considered as unsubscribed. All the capital stock represented by real or personal property, other than cash, must be represented by fully paid shares. (Art. 170, Com. Code.)

When a corporation is formed by subscription, the following matters are necessary: (1) The publication of the prospectus; (2) the subscription of the capital stock; (3) the holding of a general meeting to approve and ratify the by-laws; (4) the recording of the minutes of the general meeting and of the by-laws. (Art. 167, Com. Code.)

The prospectus prepared and subscribed by the founders must contain the proposed by-laws; the amount of capital stock to be paid in and a computation of the value; the names and domiciles of the subscribers, the number of shares subscribed for and the date of subscription, and the declaration that the subscriber knows and accepts the proposed by-laws, the whole of which must be certified by two witnesses. (Arts. 168, 169, Com. Code.)

When a corporation is formed by public writing (meaning a document executed before a notary), the following matters are required to be set forth: (1) The names and domiciles of the persons executing the document; (2) the name and domicile of the proposed company; (3) its object and duration and the manner of computing such duration; (4) the capital of the company and the nature, number, and value of the shares; the value and amounts subscribed if referring to stock companies or societies with special partners by shares; or a statement of what each partner brings to the company, whether in services, cash, or other property, with the value of each; (5) names of the persons who are to have the management of the company and the powers to be exercised by the manager or directors; (6) amount of reserve fund; (7) the manner of distributing profits and losses; (8) the part of the profits which the founders are to receive and the manner in which they shall receive the same; (9) the cases in which the company may be dissolved before the expiration of the time fixed in the certificate; (10) the basis upon which the liquidation of the company may be effected and the manner of election of the liquidators. (Art. 95, Com. Code.)

There must be annexed to the public writing a statement of the value placed upon the real and personal property contributed by one or more of the shareholders. In case of mining companies the valuation fixed in the articles by the incorporators is final and no separate certificate of appraisal is necessary. The public writing must also prescribe the method for calling and the time fixed for the first general meeting, at which meeting the by-laws of the company must be adopted. (Art. 175, Com. Code.)

In companies organized by subscription, the calls made by the founders may be paid to a banking institution or a business firm, and such sums may be delivered to the managers of the corporation, appointed at the first general meeting, after the protocolization and registration of the documents relating to the company are effected. The general meeting referred to is called after the capital stock has been subscribed and the deposit above referred to made. At such a meeting the following business must be transacted: (1) The examination and approval of assessments and the examination and approval of the value at which the real and personal property contributed by one or more of the shareholders may have been estimated, the persons contributing not having the right to vote; (2) the discussion and approval of the by-laws and of the portion of the profits reserved to themselves by the founders; (3) the appointment of directors and examiners. A list must also be made and signed by the shareholders, stating the number of shares and votes they each represent, which list becomes a part of the minutes of the meeting. The minutes of the meeting and the by-laws must then be recorded and registered in the mercantile registry of the municipality. (Arts. 172, 174, Com. Code.)

Corporate Name. — After the name of the corporation, the words "Sociedad Anonima" must be added. Corporations are prohibited from using the same name. (Arts. 164, 165, Com. Code.)

By-laws. — The by-laws of a corporation are required to contain the provisions, so far as applicable, prescribed in article 95 of the Commercial Code above set forth, and must also prescribe the manner of calling and holding the first general meeting of the stockholders. (Art. 178, Com. Code.) The by-laws must designate the number of shares which each director must deposit within the control of the company, as security for the faithful performance of his duties. This latter requirement also applies to the examiners, or comisarios, of the corporation, and the vacancies in the office of examiners and in the board of directors are filled in the manner prescribed by the by-laws. (Arts. 191-193, 198, Com. Code.) The appointment, dismissal, and duties of the manager or managers of a corporation must also be prescribed by the by-laws. (Art. 197, Com. Code.)

The number of votes necessary for the transaction of business at a meeting of the stockholders and the manner of computing them is determined by the by-laws. The general meeting of the shareholders, unless it is otherwise expressly prescribed, has power to amend the by-laws of the corporation. (Arts. 201-204, Com. Code.)

Proxies. — Shareholders may be represented at stockholders' meetings by persons holding their proxies. Such persons may or may not be stockholders, but no member of the board of directors may hold proxies. The by-laws should prescribe the form in which the proxies are to be drawn. (Art. 210, Com. Code.)

Capital Stock. — The capital stock of corporations must be divided into shares of equal value, and unless otherwise stipulated upon the organization of the company, such shares confer equal rights upon their holders. Shares may be made either in the name of the holder or to bearer, and in either event are required to state: (1) The name and domicile of the company; (2) date of its organization; (3) value of the capital stock, calls paid thereon, and the number of shares in which the capital stock is divided; (4) the duration of the company; (5) the rights granted to the shares by the certificate of incorporation or by the by-laws. The shares must be signed by the number of directors designated in the by-laws. Corporations are required to keep a registry of shares issued in the names of the holders and containing, (a) designation of each shareholder and number of his shares; (b) a statement of installments paid in; (c) transfers made and the dates; also the changing of shares from the names of the holder to bearer, when this is permitted by the by-laws; (d) a statement of the shares deposited as security for the faithful performance of the duties of the director, managers, and examiners. The ownership of shares in the name of any holder is proved by their inscription on the registry above alluded to. A transfer of shares issued to holder is made by a statement entered in the registry, dated and signed by the transferor and the transferee, or their respective attorneys in fact. A transfer of shares to bearer takes place by mere delivery of the certificate. Upon failure to pay calls or assessments ordered by the company, the latter may sell the shares for the account of the owner, unless otherwise provided in the by-laws, and apply the proceeds to the payment of such assessments. Declared dividends may also be held by the company and applied on unpaid calls. Corporations may not purchase their own shares except in the following special cases: (1) When fully paid shares are purchased, pursuant to the authorization of the general meeting and with funds arising from profits not applicable to the reserve fund; (2) when the purchase is made by virtue of an authorization previously provided in the by-laws; (3) when the purchase is made with the capital of the corporation pursuant to formalities prescribed for the reduction of capital stock. Shares purchased in the first mentioned case are not entitled to representations in general meetings; titles of shares purchased in the last two mentioned cases become null and void. Corporations may not make loans upon their own shares. (Arts. 176-186, Com. Code.)

Shareholders are responsible only to the extent of the shares held by them, but if any shareholder causes his name to appear in the denomination of the company, he becomes personally liable for its obligations. (Arts. 163, 164, Com. Code.)

The capital stock of a corporation may be increased upon the vote prescribed in article 206 herein set forth (see Special Resolutions), providing that the form prescribed with reference to the formation of corporations be complied with.

Reserve Fund. — Corporations are required to set aside from their net annual profits at least five per cent. thereof, which must be kept as a reserve fund until it has aggregated at least one fifth of the amount of the capital stock. Should the reserve fund be diminished through any circumstance, it must be formed again in the same manner. (Art. 214, Com. Code.)

Balance-Sheet. — Corporations are required to publish yearly, in the official journal of the state, district, or territory where they are domiciled, a balance-sheet showing the amount of capital stock, the portion thereof paid in and the portion still due, the amount of cash on hand, and an itemized statement of the assets and liabilities. (Art. 215, Com. Code.)

Taxation of Corporations. — A stamp tax is payable on the capital stock of a corporation at the time of organizing, as follows: (a) When the capital stock does not exceed two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, for every five hundred dollars or fraction thereof, fifty cents. (b) When it exceeds two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, but not five hundred thousand dollars, the tax established by the foregoing sections will be paid for the first two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and on the excess, for every five hundred dollars or fraction thereof, twenty-five cents. (c) When the capital exceeds five hundred thousand dollars, the tax fixed by the two preceding sections will be paid for the five hundred thousand dollars, and on the excess for every five hundred dollars, or fraction thereof, five cents. There is a graduated annual tax on capital invested by either a corporation or an individual, ranging from one per cent. on five hundred thousand dollars to five per cent. on five hundred dollars of capital invested in business. This tax is payable in equal divisions each bimester.

Corporations are subject to the same taxation on real estate and personal property as individuals.

Special Resolutions. — Unless otherwise provided by the certificate of incorporation or by the by-laws, the representation of three fourths of the capital stock and the unanimous vote of the shares representing one half of said capital stock is necessary for the following purposes: (1) To dissolve the corporation prematurely, except for loss of one half of said capital stock; (2) to prolong its duration; (3) to combine with other corporations; (4) to reduce the capital stock; (5) to increase the capital stock; (6) to change the purposes of the corporation; (7) to modify the charter or the by-laws.

Corporate Bond Issues. — By law of November 29, 1897, stock companies and limited partnerships by shares may issue obligations or bonds with or without special guaranties. Such bonds may be issued to persons named or to bearer. Corporations must keep a register of the bonds issued. The bonds may be transferred, etc.

The amendment of June 4, 1902, provides that the obligations issued outside of the Republic by corporations or companies established in Mexico will be valid only if all the following requisites are complied with: 1st. The contract or instrument authorizing the issue must fulfill the formal requisites of the law of the place of execution. 2d. That the law of the place of execution authorizes such issue. 3d. That the two provisions above indicated are proved by a certificate stating such compliance, issued by the Mexican ambassador; or, in the event of his inability, by a Mexican consul. 4th. That the contract or trust deed authorizing the issue be protocolized and registered according to law. 5th. If such issue be secured by mortgage (trust deed), that same be recorded in the district where the land is located. The rights and obligations of parties under the contract will be governed by the law of the place of execution, provided they are not contrary to Mexican prohibitive laws and good custom. Stipulations may be made providing that the Mexican laws shall govern. Obligations secured by mortgage (trust deed) covering property located in the Republic are governed by Mexican laws in everything pertaining to the mortgage security.

Foreign Corporations. — Foreign corporations legally constituted in other countries may establish themselves in the Republic, or have agencies or branches there and engage in commerce. They are, however, subject to the various provisions of the Commercial Code relative to companies of the same class, and it is especially provided that they submit themselves to the jurisdiction of the national tribunals. (Art. 15, Com. Code.) So far as the ability of such corporations to enter into contracts is concerned, and generally to carry on business in the Republic, it is provided that they must comply with the following provisions: (1) They must present and enter in the mercantile register of the municipality where they are engaged in business the proof of the protocolization of their certificate of incorporation, by-laws, and contracts relating to their organization, an inventory or last balance-sheet if they have one, and a certificate that they have been duly organized in accordance with the laws of their respective countries, which certificate must be given by the minister which the Republic has accredited in such countries, or in his absence by the Mexican consul; (2) when such companies have their capital stock divided into shares, they are required to publish annually a balance-sheet stating clearly their assets and liabilities, and also the name of the person or persons having the management and control of the company. In case such corporations fail to comply with the foregoing provisions, those who contract in the name of the company are rendered personally liable for the company's obligations incurred within the Republic. (Arts. 24, 265, 266, Com. Code.)

Protocolization of Foreign Corporations. — Besides the express provision of the law requiring foreign corporations to protocolize, recent decisions by the courts are opposing the validity of the transfer of real property to foreign corporations unless duly protocolized. All foreign documents must be translated into the Spanish language and such translation must be approved by a court before an order to protocolize is granted; this applies to deeds, mortgages, powers of attorney, etc. The stamp tax on the authorized capital stock of a foreign corporation is payable only once, and is as indicated for domestic corporations, with the exception that when the capital exceeds five hundred thousand dollars the rates mentioned will be paid on the five hundred thousand dollars and on the excess, for every five hundred dollars or fraction thereof, two and one half cents; but in order to obtain the benefit of this exception, it will be necessary to conclusively prove to the Finance Department that such foreign corporation is doing business abroad, and that its principal establishment is also located there; otherwise it must pay the tax as given in the case of domestic corporations. Notary's fees are the same as indicated for domestic corporations.

To proceed with protocolization it is necessary to have (a) Duly authenticated copy of (1) articles of incorporation; (2) by-laws. Manner of authentication: Documents must be subscribed and sworn to before a notary public; such notary's signature and powers must then be certified to by a court of record; the Mexican consul or ambassador must then legalize such signature. (b) A certificate from the Mexican ambassador at Washington stating that the corporation has been constituted and authorized in accordance with the law of its respective State.

Renunciation of Foreign Rights. Each individual shareholder of a corporation, whether domestic or foreign, if such corporation is authorized to buy real property, exploit mines, petroleum, etc., must waive his foreign rights in said corporation at the time and in the act of effecting the organization or protocolization, as the case may be, and agree not to invoke the protection of his government or the assistance of any diplomatic or consular agent thereof, that is, with respect to the affairs of said corporation, as provided in clause I of Article 27 of the Federal Constitution.

Deeds. — Execution generally. — If the consideration exceeds five hundred pesos the deed must be executed in Spanish before a notary, who signs the same with two witnesses, and the grantor and the grantee. If the consideration does not exceed this amount, the deed may be drawn as a private document and is signed by the parties in interest before two witnesses. All deeds must be recorded in the public register of the district and State in which the land is situated.

Execution by Foreigners. — Parties unable to appear personally before the notary must give a special power of attorney (see Powers of Attorney) to transfer or mortgage real property, or accept same. The consideration in a deed must be correctly stated. Taxes and costs involved in a transfer of ownership of real property in Mexico are as follows: (a) Cost of power of attorney (see Powers of Attorney). (b) Notary's fees are based on the amount of the consideration and are the same as those indicated under head of "Cost of Incorporation." (c) Stamp tax is payable on all transfers as follows: For every fifty dollars or fraction thereof, thirty-five cents. Deeds, mortgages, and trust deeds whose value do not exceed five hundred thousand dollars pay the full rate as indicated, but when the value exceeds five hundred thousand dollars, without exceeding two million five hundred thousand dollars, the rate is paid for the first five hundred thousand and one half of said rate for the excess value. Should the value exceed two million five hundred thousand dollars, the tax thereon is paid in the proportion first mentioned, and for all value in excess, at the rate of ten per cent. of the tax fixed for the first five hundred thousand dollars. (d) State tax on transfer of ownership is based on the consideration and varies in the different States. The average is about one per cent.

Foreign deeds and mortgages of Mexican property must be duly authenticated, as indicated in the case of articles and by-laws of foreign corporations, and must be translated and protocolized. The cost of such protocolization is the same as for the execution of a deed in Mexico, but the fees for translation, etc., must be added. All deeds executed to foreigners must contain the waiver of foreign rights referred to in Clause I of Article 27 of the Constitution.

Inheritance. — At the death of her husband, a woman is entitled to a share of his estate equal to that which corresponds to a child. Children inherit equal shares. (Art. 3627, Civ. Code.) If the wife has an estate in her own right, she receives only such portion as will make her share equal to that of each child. (Art. 3628, Civ. Code.) If there are no children, and the deceased has only one brother or sister, the latter and the wife share alike. If there should be more than one brother or sister, the wife is entitled to one third of her husband's estate, and the rest is divided equally between the brothers and sisters. (Arts. 3629, 3630, Civ. Code.) If there are no brothers and sisters, the wife is the only heir. Even though the wife has estates in her own right, she shall receive her share of her husband's estate, in the proportion stated in articles 3629, 3630, above mentioned. (Arts. 3631, 3632, Civ. Code.) The dispositions of articles 3629, 3630, apply only to legitimate brothers or sisters. If the latter are illegitimate, they will be entitled only to a food pension. (Art. 3633, Civ. Code.)

Interest. — Interest may be collected on money or objects. The legal rate of interest is six per cent., and when no rate of interest is stipulated in a contract, it is understood that the money or object shall draw interest at the rate of six per cent. (Arts. 2696-2700, 2894, Civ. Code.) There is, however, no legal limitation placed upon the rate of interest. A contract, in which interest is stipulated for, must always be in writing. If a person pays interest in installments, the payments must be applied first to the interest due, and thereafter in reduction of the principal. Compound interest is unlawful. (Arts. 2698, 2699, Civ. Code.)

Limitation of Actions. — The following actions are prescribed within one year (Art. 1043, Com. Code): (a) Actions for the recovery of the purchase price of merchandise sold on credit, where the account is not an account current. (b) Actions by employees for their wages. (c) Actions resulting from violation of contracts for the transportation of freight. (d) Actions against brokers. (e) Actions with reference to policies of insurance. (f) Actions with reference to supplies, etc., furnished to ships or the crews thereof; actions with reference to the sale of ships or their cargoes, or with reference to port charges, pilotage, salvage, averages, and actions for damages for fouling. The following actions are prescribed within a period of three years (Art. 1044, Com. Code): (a) Actions arising on bills, drafts, commercial notes, checks, bills of lading, and negotiable instruments. (b) Actions arising from loans on bottomry contracts. The following actions are prescribed within a period of five years (Art. 1045, Com. Code): Actions relative to partnerships and those brought against receivers of partnerships. The periods of prescriptions may be interrupted by a complaint presented in a court having jurisdiction, or by a judicial request upon the debtor for the acknowledgment of the obligation or for the renewal of the document on which the action is based. .

Married Women. — In Mexico the husband is the legal representative of his wife. The latter may not, without the consent of the former, given in writing, appear in a suit or action, either personally or through an attorney, not even in a suit begun before marriage. If a husband should give his wife authorisation to appear in a suit, he must state in the document whether it is only for once, or whether the same document is valid for any time. (Art. 197, Civ. Code.)

A married woman cannot sell or dispose of her property or goods without the consent of her husband, and may not contract obligations except in the following cases: (1) To defend herself in a criminal suit; (2) to litigate with her husband; (3) to dispose of her property through will or testament; (4) when her husband is legally unqualified; (5) when the husband is suffering from an illness so severe that his consent cannot be obtained; (6) when there should exist legal separation between husband and wife; (7) when the wife owns a mercantile establishment. (Art. 202, Civ. Code.)

In a necessary case, and if the husband is absent or refuses his consent, the judge may authorise a wife to contract or institute action. (Art. 200, Civ. Code.)

Married women always need judicial authorisation for the following: (1) To litigate and contract when both herself and husband are not of legal age. In this case the authorisation must always be a special one for each time of litigation. (2) To contract with her husband, except when the object of the contract is a power of attorney.

The actions of a married woman can be declared null and void only on the plea of default of her husband's authorisation, by the petition of herself, her husband, or the heirs of both. If the husband has either expressly or tacitly sanctioned the actions of his wife, nobody can enter a plea for nullity. (Arts. 203, 204, Civ. Code.)

A married woman over eighteen years of age and having the full consent of her husband may engage in business. The consent of her husband must be given in a public writing. As has been stated above, she may, however, engage in business in any of the cases mentioned in article 202 of the Civil Code. (Art. 8, Com. Code.)

A married woman, being a merchant, may mortgage her real estate as security for her mercantile obligations, and appear in judicial proceedings without marital consent. She cannot, however, burden the real estate of her husband, nor that belonging to the conjugal community, unless her husband has authorized her to do so in the writing authorizing her to engage in business. (Art. 9, Com. Code.)

A woman, who at the time of her marriage is engaged in trade, requires the authority of her husband in order to continue it. Such permission shall be presumed so long as the husband does not publish in a conspicuous place in the establishment of the wife, and in one of the papers of the locality in which she resides, or of the nearest locality, if in the former there are no newspapers, the fact that his wife has ceased to be engaged in business. A husband may also revoke the authority which he may have given his wife to be a merchant, but such revocation shall have no effect against a third person, unless he proceeds in the same manner stated above. (Arts. 10, 11, Com. Code.)

Dower is not known to the Mexican law; the wife is entitled to her share, which is one half of the community property. (Wives must join with their husbands in the execution of deeds, mortgages, and other instruments for the transfer or incumbering of real property.)

Mining. — Ownership. — All mineral deposits and veins composed of inorganic substances whose composition is different from that of the native work, such as gold, platinum, silver, copper, iron, cobalt, nickel, manganese, lead, mercury, tin, chromium, antimony, zinc, bismuth, sulphur, arsenic, tellurium, rock-salt, precious stones, placer gold and platinum and other deposits contained in the subsoil (referred to in Article 27 of the Constitution).

The unit of measure of mining property is the "pertenencia." It consists of a solid of indefinite depth, bounded on the surface by four vertical planes of one hundred meters on each side. The pertenencia is indivisible as to all acts and contracts affecting ownership. When it is impossible, by reason of surrounding claims, to reduce a denouncement to entire pertenencias, the irreducible portion is called a "demasia," or excess, and is considered for all legal purposes as a whole pertenencia.

The owner of a mine has the right to extract and profit by all denounceable minerals found on or below the surface of his claim.

Mining operations cannot be extended beyond the limits of the mine as shown in the concession, even though it is bounded by undenounced property.

The use of the waters coming from the interior of the mine belongs to the owner of the mine, and consequently he can extract and dispose of them, as well as all substances contained therein in suspension or dissolution. But indemnity cannot be claimed when such waters are exhausted or diminished by the drainage of other mines. When the appearance of water in the workings causes the extinction or diminution of extraneous sources, the owner of the latter may reclaim the waters belonging to him, but not to the extent of depriving the owner of the mine of the waters necessary for the exploitation of his industry, nor can he demand indemnity. The transfer or loss of ownership of a mine carries with it the use of the water found in or originating from the workings.

Foreigners. — The only restrictions placed upon foreigners are those embodied in Article 27 of the Constitution.

Acquisition. — Mines are originally acquired from the nation under concession issued by the executive authority through the Department of Fomento, after denouncement and upon fulfillment of the other requisites of the law. Denouncements of free lands only are admitted; and lands over which a concession has already been granted or where a denouncement is pending, are not considered as free lands. Nor are lands with regard to which the concession has been forfeited, or to which the denouncement has been definitely refused, or which have been declared free by the Department of Fomento, until thirty days after notice thereof has been posted on the bulletin board of the agency. A denouncement is not admitted when the denouncer has wholly or partly defaulted as a previous denouncement, until one year from the date of default. Denouncements must be made in duplicate, by petition setting forth the name, age, occupation, nationality, address and residence of the denouncer, the chief minerals to be exploited, the number of pertenencias, their location, marks of identification and boundaries. A certificate of deposit of the amount necessary to cover the stamp tax on the concession must be submitted with the petition. The denouncement must be personally submitted by the denouncer or by his duly appointed attorney in fact. Separate denouncements must be made of each mine or group of mines, except where mines owned or previously denounced by the same party are comprised within the boundaries of the denouncement, and where all the claims cover the same vein or deposit, and are under the jurisdiction of the same mining agency. An expert must be appointed by the agency to survey the mine and draw the plans thereof, and publication of the denouncement must be made in the official newspaper of the district. The Department of Fomento, after examining and approving the denouncement, shall fix a period within which monuments must be erected and proof thereof submitted to the Department. If the monuments are not so erected, within the said term, the denouncement is forfeited. Opposition to a denouncement must be made within ninety days after the publication of the denouncement. Matters relating to opposition proceedings may be submitted for determination to the Department of Fomento or to the courts. If no opposition is made the matter proceeds in due course and the concession is granted upon the payment of the necessary fees and taxes.

Recording. — Mining titles, transfer of titles, documents or judicial decrees affecting title, contracts of sale, and documents or judicial decrees affecting the exploitation of mines, are recorded in the register of commerce of the district wherein the mines to which they relate are situated.

Expropriation of Land. — The owner of a mine has the right to occupy, within the limits of his claim, the land necessary for the exploitation of his mine, for the building of houses, the making of installations, etc. He has also the right to build railways over adjoining lands for conducting the business of the mine. If the owner of the soil does not consent to this use, the necessary consent can be obtained from the Department of Fomento.

Monuments. — Monuments of masonry, not less than fifty centimeters high, square in shape, and at least fifty centimeters wide, must be placed around mining claims at such distance as to be seen one from another, and distinguishable by some characteristic of dimension, form, color, or other characteristic from those of adjoining claims. By the mining law, which went into effect on January 1, 1910, a period of one year was granted to owners of unmonumented mines, to erect the necessary monuments, upon the penalty, for failure so to do, of damages and losses to third parties and a fine of from one hundred to five hundred pesos; if the failure still continues, a further fine will be imposed, but without prejudice to the rights of the Department to have the said monuments constructed at the expense of the owner, after a period of thirty days.

Mortgages. — (Execution. — See Deeds.) There are two kinds of mortgages, necessary and voluntary.

Voluntary mortgages are those agreed to between the parties. (Art. 1858, Civ. Code.)

Necessary mortgages are those ordered by law, to be given by certain persons as security for the property they administer; they may also be exacted by persons whose property is managed by others. (Arts. 1869, 1870, Civ. Code.)

The following have the right to ask for and obtain a mortgage as security for their claims: (1) A co-heir for his share of the estate, before distribution; (2) the person who sells or exchanges a property and receives only part of the price or another property of less value: in that case the vendor will have a mortgage on the property he has sold or on that which he has exchanged for the amount overdue; (3) the person who lends money to another in order to enable the latter to acquire property: the mortgage will be on the property so acquired, provided that a public writing is made, in which it is stated that money was lent for that purpose; (4) heirs whose property is managed by their parents or ancestors: the mortgage must be on the property of the latter as security for the faithful compliance with their obligation; (5) persons not of legal age or otherwise legally unqualified on the property of their guardians, as security for their own property; (6) a married woman on the property of her husband, as security for estate received from her parents, providing that in a public writing it is stated what each one possesses; (7) creditors who have obtained executive sentence, on the free property of the debtor: the creditors may designate the property they wish to mortgage; (8) heirs on the property willed to them, if there is no special mortgage stated in the testament by the testator; (9) insurance companies on the property insured for the amount of the premium for two years, and if the insurance is mutual, for the last two dividends; (10) a state, town, or public establishment on the property of their administrators or tax collectors, in order to guarantee the faithful performance of their duties. (Art. 1875, Civ. Code.)

Recording. — To be valid against third parties, mortgages must be recorded.

Chattel Mortgages. — Chattel mortgages are unknown in Mexico. Loans made on personal property are obtained through a pledge, in which case the property is delivered to the pledgee. Rental contracts are frequently used in lieu of chattel mortgages, title to the chattels, which are delivered to the lessee, remaining in the lessor until the last rental payment is made, which operates as an invoice and passes title in the goods.

Oil Lands. — See introductory note and Article 27 of the Federal Constitution.

Powers of Attorney. — In general, representation of a foreigner in Mexico, either in the prosecution of claims or in the negotiation of business, must be through a power of attorney granted to a person or persons residing in Mexico. Such powers may be made according to the laws of the country where they are executed, but upon their arrival in Mexico they must be protocolized in the following cases: (a) When they are general powers. (b) When they refer to sums of more than five hundred dollars. (c) When the attorney by virtue of the power is to act in matters which in themselves must be executed before a notary. (d) When granted for judicial matters in which five hundred dollars or more is involved.

Powers not falling within the above classifications may be granted by a writing signed by the grantor before two witnesses. Such instrument needs no authentication or protocolization if made in the Spanish language; otherwise it is necessary to apply to a court to have an official translation made. These are called letter powers, and are proper in all cases where the amount involved does not exceed five hundred dollars and a transfer or mortgage of real estate is not to be made.

Powers requiring protocolization must be duly authenticated as indicated under the head of Foreign Corporations.

Notary's fee in all cases is two dollars and fifty cents, and stamp tax is as follows: (a) If there be but one grantor and one appointee, per sheet one dollar. (b) If one more person than the persons mentioned should intervene, either as grantor or appointee, per sheet two dollars. (c) If two persons besides those mentioned in (a) should intervene, per sheet three dollars. (d) Any greater number of persons intervening, per sheet four dollars. (e) Substitutions are subject to the same rates.

A power may be written on both sides of a sheet of paper, not exceeding thirty-five centimeters in length and twenty-four in width, whatever size the written space occupied may be. The number of lines written or printed on both sides must not exceed eighty. Non-compliance with these requirements causes the tax to be double that above specified.

A power of attorney may be general or special. A general power is one that applies to the administration of the affairs of the person granting the power; matters of transfer and mortgage of real property require special powers or clauses. Judicial powers require special clauses for the following: 1. In order to withdraw. 2. To compromise. 3. To refer to arbitration. 4. To answer and put interrogatories. 5. To make a transfer of properties. 6. To make a "challenge." 7. To receive payment.

A married woman and minors of more than eighteen years of age may be attorneys in fact, but in order that the contract may have full effect, the wife requires the express authorization of the husband, and the minor that of the parent or guardian.

Service. — Summonses are served, at the latest, within the twenty-four hours after they are decreed, and shall be served personally on the interested parties, except in the cases prohibited by law. If on serving the first notice the person notified is not at his place of domicile, a citation for a fixed hour the next day shall be left, and if even then he should not be present at the appointed time, the court officer shall deliver to any relation, servant, or person in the same house a document containing full details of the demand, the previous notifications, and the name of the person to whom the demand is delivered. (Arts. 73-75, Code of Civ. Proc.)

If the person to be notified has moved and his domicile cannot be ascertained, the judge shall order the notification to be made through publications in the "Diario Oficial," in the official papers, or in those of largest circulation in the town where action has been instituted. (Art. 75, Code of Civ. Proc.)

If notice is to be served abroad, the usual mode is through letters requisitorial, and also by means of the consular agent or secretary of the legation. Rules established by international treaties must, of course, be observed. Letters requisitorial must be legalized by the Minister of Foreign Relations. (Arts. 76-80, Code of Civ. Proc.)

Letters requisitorial are also sent from one town to the other in the Republic, through the judges of the locality. (Art. 215, Code of Fed. Civ. Proc.)

Wills. — There are two kinds of wills, public and private. A public will is that made before a notary and in the presence of two witnesses, and is required to have the stamps prescribed by law. A private will is not required to be written on stamped paper, nor made before a notary, but it must be signed in the presence of two witnesses, and is permitted only in the following cases: (a) When the testator is attacked with an illness so violent that life is imminently threatened. (b) In a town isolated by epidemic or in a besieged place. (c) When there is no notary or judge in the place.

Public wills may be open or closed. An open will is that at the drawing of which the testator declares, in the presence of those authorizing the act, what he desires to do. A closed will is that which is inclosed in a sealed envelope, shown to the persons authorizing the act, and declared by the testator to contain his last will and testament. (Arts. 3484-3486, Civ. Code.)

General Provision. — Any person having a closed will in his power and who does not present it to the court at the death of the testator will be liable to the following: (1) If he is an heir, he will lose his rights; (2) if not an heir, he will be punished according to the provisions of the penal code. (Art. 3534, Civ. Code.)

Wills made abroad. — Wills made in a foreign country are valid if executed according to the laws of that country. Consuls, vice-consuls, and secretaries of legations may act as notaries to draw a will for a Mexican, providing they draw it in accordance with the Civil Code of Mexico. (Arts. 3565, 3566, Civ. Code.) Said functionaries must send a copy of open wills drawn by them to the Minister of Foreign Relations. If the will is a closed one the functionary shall send to the Minister of Foreign Relations a copy of the act authorizing it. (Arts. 3567, 3568, Civ. Code.)

Mexican laws forbid the following persons to make a will: (1) Boys under fourteen years and girls under twelve years; (2) any person who is insane, but only while that state lasts. The following are requisites for the making of a will: (1) A perfect knowledge of what the word implies; (2) perfect liberty, that is to say, freedom from moral or physical force. (Arts. 3275, 3276, Civ. Code.)

TRADE-MARK LEGISLATION OF THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC AND LAWS REFERRING THERETO.

New Rulings. — Important decisions have recently been rendered by the Argentine courts, vitally affecting the form of trade-mark registration.

The practice has been to register trade-marks regardless of size and color, with a view, firstly, to accord registrant amplest right to prosecute infringers, irrespective of such features, and, secondly, to meet requirements of the law which provide that colors are not registrable.

This practice has resulted adversely. Registration certificate ordinarily shows the mark in the form of a print taken from the cliché used for the advertisement in the Boletín Oficial, while in practice, the registrant colors the trade-mark and varies the size, and the infringer, of course, counterfeits or imitates the labels as used in practice, not as shown upon certificate of registration.

In bringing suit the law requires that certificate of registration shall be attached to bill of complaint, the label appended to the certificate of registration constituting the basis upon which the Court appreciates the infringement. In order to more forcibly demonstrate infringement, fraudulent intention and the detriment which is caused the custom has been to submit to the Court a specimen of the mark as actually placed before the public, and the Court, in delivering its opinion, considered not only the mark as shown upon the registration certificate, but also, and perhaps more so, the specimen of the mark as used in practice.

Recently the tendency has been in the Courts of Justice to be exceedingly lenient with infringers, as is manifested through the decisions quoted below. The judges' view is that only registration certificate must be taken into consideration and that where such certificate makes no claim to size or color, it is not possible to prosecute an infringer on the ground that either color or size of his label resembles size or coloring of the registered mark as used in practice, though not as shown upon certificate of registration.

In Pommery v. Guerra and Gigliardi, experts appointed to report upon infringement expressed the opinion that infringement constituted a counterfeit on the ground that one of labels was a size exactly like that which the plaintiff adopted in practice.

The Judge accepted the opinion of the experts in so far as the counterfeit was concerned, for such was manifest on mere comparison of the labels, but rejected the opinion in so far as concerned the grounds for such opinion, alleging that the registration certificate made no claim to a definite size, and that consequently the size of the label was not a basis to judge the infringement.

On appeal it was held that: "The labels indicated as being fraudulent have, according to the description attached to the certificate, all the essential elements of the genuine ones, said description excluding size, color, and process of manufacture." The view of the Court was that, in the absence of specification of size and color, the alleged counterfeit might well have been a genuine label, and lacking sufficient evidence in other respects, the action was reversed and Guerra absolved.

A similar judgment was rendered in the case of Bisleri v. Lemos.

Briefly, then, to enjoy proper protection under the law, marks must be registered as actually used. The label appearing upon the registration certificate must be a specimen as applied upon the goods. The registration certificate will hereafter constitute not only a legal basis but an absolutely material basis to judge infringement.

How to protect a Foreign Trade-Mark in Argentina. — In order to protect foreign trade-marks in Argentina, registry there is absolutely necessary. The Argentine law does not require the previous exhibition of a duly legalized certificate that the trade-mark has been registered in the country of origin. This has been the source of numberless abuses, as dishonest people registered in their names well-known trade-marks, protecting well-known articles in foreign countries, in order to sell their rights of assignment to the true owner.

Of course it is a fact that in the Law No. 3975, title 5, article 68, and those following, it was clearly established that within four months after the enactment of that law any registration made could be canceled upon the application of the owner of an identical or similar foreign trade-mark who has registered the same in the country of origin with a previous date. Very few of the owners of important trade-marks throughout the world took advantage of this clause, due to the fact that communication with Argentina is slow, and in most of the cases, on account of the lack of agents interested in protecting the rights of their principals; but the said clause is evidently faulty, since it does not provide for the future, and the trade-marks registered in foreign countries subsequent to the enactment of said law, which were not registered in Argentina, are liable to be pirated.

As an illustration of the danger which confronts the foreign manufacturer who does not register his trade-mark in Argentina, as well as the evident tendency of the Argentine courts to protect honest manufacturers who have been deprived of their rights by the illegitimate registration of their trade-marks by some one else, we give the following decision of the court in the case of the Cadillac Motor-Car Company v. Hector Giannini: —

Cadillac Company v. Giannini. — The Agent Resident of the Cadillac Company of Detroit, in 1912, presented himself at the Tribunal and prayed the revocation of the mark "Cadillac"; registered by one Giannini, under number 25,610 in April, 1910. The Cadillac Company showed it was a corporation under the Laws of the United States of North America, located in Detroit, Michigan, and for say the past eight years had introduced into this Republic its automobiles, and the corporation, realizing that usurpers were taking advantage of its name in Argentina, resolved to register it as a commercial mark. When, on taking such steps, the Cadillac Company learned that one Giannini had registered the name "Cadillac" with the same shield used by the motor-car company. The Cadillac Company claimed that the said Giannini was absolutely unjustified in the registry effected; according to what the domestic doctrine and jurisprudence teach, that the word "Cadillac" being the name of a corporation, and having been used in the country before the registry of the mark, it is protected by the law and cannot be used by a third person as designation of his products; that article 42 of Argentine Law, as well as articles 45 and 47, confirm a rule establishing these laws — that the formality of registry is necessary. The case was open for proof, after which the attorneys demanded hearing for sentence. After consideration, the judgment was as follows: "Declaring the priority of the present action brought by the Cadillac Motor-Car Company, in consequence commanding that the respective office annul the mark 'Cadillac Company, number 25,610,' illegally registered by Don Hector Giannini, April 15, 1914, for distinguishing automobiles, coaches, motors, and their accessories. Costs on Giannini. Let it be known, entered and carried out. (Signed) J. Arias."

Having stated the evident necessity of applying for the registration in Argentina of foreign trade-marks in order to insure their protection, — a step which the importance of the country fully warrants, — we give the following excerpts from the law in the matter.

Application and Procedure. — All those who wish to obtain the ownership of a trade-mark of commerce or agriculture must apply to the Bureau of Patents of Invention. (Palace of Justice.)

The date and hour of the filing of their written applications will be entered by the officials in a book whose pages will be numbered and signed by the Department. In the petition it should be stated whether the petitioner renounces his right to judicial proceedings in case the registration is denied by the Bureau.

The entry will be signed by the chief of the Bureau, the secretary, and the petitioner, to whom a receipt will be given of the documents presented, in which will also be stated the number of the application. In the event that an authorized copy of said entry is demanded by the petitioner, it will be given without any extra cost except that of the cost of the stamped paper upon which it appears. The Bureau will proceed to officially publish, at the cost of the petitioner, an excerpt from the petition, containing the date of the presentation, name of the interested party, and the design of the mark. The publication will be made for five consecutive days in the capital and in the province or territory where the petitioner has his domicile. If, after a period of thirty days after the publication of the notice, no opposition has been filed, and if within this statutory period the office makes an examination and no identical or similar marks are found registered, the application shall be granted and a certificate of ownership issued.

The right of prelation for the ownership of a trade-mark will be granted considering the date and hour in which the petition was presented to the Bureau.

How to protect a Secret Process of printing a Trade-Mark. — If the process of printing the trade-mark is a secret and interested parties wish to keep it so, they should express themselves to that effect in their written application to which reference is made in our paragraph on Requirements, inclosing the description of the process in a sealed envelope which will only be opened in case of litigation. (Art. 18, Law No. 3975.)

Requirements. — The administrator of the Patent and Trade-Marks Office will not pass an application unless the following requirements are fulfilled: (a) The application must state the name and residence of the applicant, the articles to which the mark will be applied, and determine the class to which they belong or correspond. (b) With each application or petition, six copies of the proposed trade-mark must be filed. (c) A description, in duplicate, of the mark, if it be of a pictorial or emblematical nature, with a statement of the nature of the object it is meant to distinguish, must be filed with the application. The statement must also set forth whether it relates to the product of a factor, or of agriculture, or to an article of commerce; also whether the article is manufactured in the country or abroad. (d) A receipt of the National Treasury for the payment of the required fee must be filed, to wit, fifty pesos for each mark to be registered. The fee for registering an assignment of a mark is twenty-five pesos. (e) A power of attorney, if the applicant resides outside of the capital and does not attend personally, must be filed. (f) If the proposed mark is a photograph or other likeness, or the name of a person, specific authority to use the name must accompany the application.

The application and the description must be made in the Spanish language, in clear and intelligible writing, and any alterations or corrections must be confirmed at the foot of each sheet with the signature of the applicant or that of his representative. The margin of the paper must be left clear. At the foot of each copy of the description there must be affixed a facsimile of the mark applied for, when it consists of, or is in conjunction with, a design or emblem. There must also be affixed to the application a one peso tax stamp. (Arts. 4, 5, and 6 of Decree of December 5, 1900.)

Duration. — The protection of the rights for the exclusive use of the trade-mark lasts only for ten years, which can be extended indefinitely for like periods, complying in each case with all the necessary formalities and paying in each instance the tax established by law.

Extinction of Trade-Marks. — The right of ownership of a trade-mark (art. 14) expires: (1) By the request of the interested party. (2) When the owner has permitted a term of ten years to elapse without renewing the registration. (3) When sentence declaring that the trade-mark should not be granted or annulled has been passed. When the extinction of a trade-mark has been accomplished by some of the reasons mentioned in sections 1 to 3 of the above, the fact will be published by the Bureau in the tri-monthly report which the Bureau sends to the Executive Power.

Government Fees. — The government fees are fifty pesos, Argentine currency, payable when application is made.

No application will be given course without a receipt that this payment has been made. (Art. 3, decree of December 5, 1900.) For the registration of a certificate of assignment a fee of twenty-five pesos, Argentine currency, will have to be paid. For a duly authorized copy of the certificate which may be requested five pesos, national currency, will be paid, plus the value of the stamped paper upon which the authorized copy will be drawn.

What can be registered as Trade-Marks. — The following can be used as trade-marks of commerce and agriculture in the Argentine Republic: Names of the objects or persons in a particular form; emblems, monograms, engravings, printings, illustrations, seals, vignettes and stamps in relief; borders, words or fancy names, letters or numerals with special design or forming a combination; casings or wrappings of the articles, and any other signs with which it is desired to distinguish manufactured goods, articles of commerce, or the products of the soil and agricultural industry.

The trade-mark can be placed either upon the wrappers or on the boxes or on the objects which it is desired to identify. The names of privately owned estates can only be used as trade-marks by the owners of the same, unless said names are terms or words that have become of general use and which do not convey the idea of individuality or specialty.

What cannot be registered as Trade-Marks. — The following cannot be registered as trade-marks: The letters, words, names, or distinctive descriptions used or to be used by the nation or provinces; the shape or form given to the articles by the manufacturer; the color of the products; terms or words that have become of general use and signs which do not convey an idea of novelty or specialty; the designations usually employed to indicate the nature of the products or the class to which they belong; drawings or expressions morally improper. Names or photographs of persons cannot be used as trade-marks without the consent of the persons themselves or their heirs to and including the fourth degree.

By the Law of September 18, 1893, art. 6, the Bureau of Patents and Trade-Marks was instructed not to register any mark with the distinctive mark of the Red Cross. Those who had used it prior to that time were allowed to continue using the same without modification.

Colored Trade-Marks. — The Patent Office has refused to register colored labels on the ground of section 3, paragraph 3, of the law, which provides that "the color of products is not registrable." In view of the importance which the question of registering colored labels has acquired through the above-mentioned decisions, we represented to the Patent Office that the prohibition of section 3, paragraph 3, referred to the color of the products, not to that of the label, there being nothing in the law to prevent registering a combination of colors.

This case was dismissed by the Patent Office, but on appeal to the Federal Judge the decision was reversed, the Judge declaring that colors in combination and subject to a definite form (as a label) are registrable.

This decision harmonises with the judgments above quoted, for while one tribunal holds that combined colors are registrable, another tribunal declares that if colors are to be taken into consideration in contemplating infringement, those colors must appear upon the certificate of registration.

It is suggested that in connection with all future registrations four specimens be sent of the labels as actually applied to the goods, and recommended that in connection with important trade-marks the registration certificates be examined in order to make sure that they are in accordance with the new jurisprudence, and, if not, additional registrations should be secured.

Classification. How many Articles one Trade-Mark can protect. — The law provides that the exclusive ownership of a trade-mark is only acquired with relation to the articles for which it is asked and these should be clearly specified in the application.

In order to comply with the above statutory clauses the Executive Power issued a decree of classification on June 2, 1903, for which was afterward substituted the classification of the decree of July 30, 1912.

It should be also remembered that on June 7, 1912, there was issued a decree limiting the protection given to trade-marks to the articles in one class of the classification of June 2, 1903, and also clearly stating that if the articles were included in several of the classes the trade-mark would not be granted for all, unless a separate registration was made for the articles in each one of the classes. By the last decree, — that of June 30, 1912, — (a) The inscription of commercial and agricultural trade-marks will be affected only for a single one of the classes established in the present decree. If the manufacturer or merchant should wish to extend the use of a trade-mark to more than one class, he will have to file the corresponding applications and conform to the requisite established in Article 38 of the Law No. 3975, to wit, the payment of fifty dollars national currency. (b) The certificate constituting the proprietorship of the trade-mark will be issued with reference to every one of the single classes for which it has been registered. (c) If a manufacturer or merchant applies for the inscription of his name as a trade-mark, he will be obliged to do so in a form which shall avoid all confusion, and if the application presented with such subject should not conform to this requirement the Administration of the Patent and Trade-Mark Office will notify the interested party in the usual manner, in order that said party may modify the same to the necessary form. In case the interested party fails to modify the same, the Directorate will pass their resolution according to law corresponding to the matter. (d) When in a label or drawing, the registration of which has been applied for, there is expressed the name of an article of whatsoever class or nature, the trade-mark will be accorded only for the article indicated therein. (e) For the purposes of this decree there have been established twenty-five classes (classification of the decree of July 30, 1912.)

Right to oppose Registration of Trade-Marks. — The exclusive ownership of a trade-mark, as well as the right to oppose the use of any other which may directly or indirectly produce confusion between the articles protected by trade-marks, belong to the manufacturer, merchant, or agriculturist who has complied with the requisites of the law — to wit, registration.

The Patent Bureau will deny the registration of a trade-mark which, if registered, will directly or indirectly produce confusion with other trade-marks.

The opposition to the granting of a trade-mark will be made as follows: The chief of the Bureau, if the applicant has renounced the right to judicial procedure, will decide, according to his judgment, within a term of fifteen days, in which case the resolution of the Bureau of Patents denying or granting the ownership of a trade-mark can be appealed before a term of ten days elapse, and this appeal should be made to the proper department; which after listening to the opinion of the solicitor of the treasury will confirm or revoke the denying or the granting of the same.

B. Singer, in his treatise Trade-Marks of the World and Unfair Trade (edition of 1913), gives the following study of the procedure of the Argentine courts on these matters, a study which we consider to be very accurate: —

"In opposition suits, where appeal has been taken, the Patent Office suspends all further action and the case is referred to the judge of the Federal Court. The procedure is as follows: A written demand is made that the court should dismiss the opposition as filed, showing that the opponent's contention is groundless. The petition for dismissal is referred to the defendant and the defendant must answer nine days from the date of service of the papers. (Applicant becomes the defendant.)

" After the answer has been filed the arguments of the court begin, which generally last thirty days, during which time the parties may take such testimony as is necessary, etc. Generally the term is extended for one or two months longer, but during the first term of thirty days the parties must state the nature of the evidence. After the evidence has been taken both parties are allowed six days to examine the same. The evidence is then presented to the court and the court gives its decision.

" The time consumed in a suit in the first instance ranges from eight months to a year.

" After a decision has been rendered by the court of first instance, appeal may be taken to the Federal Chamber. In case of appeal to the Federal Chamber the appellant is given a period of nine days for filing his statement, which statement is referred to the appellee for answer, and he must answer in six days. After answer is given the court renders judgment. The judgment rendered by the Federal Chamber can be appealed from only when the same is a violation of some constitutional provision or if the same is based on defect of form, etc. The Federal Chamber litigation generally lasts one year or more; but the parties may file a petition to the judge for the prompt dispatch of the matter. However, this can only be done if no decision has been rendered for one year or more."

Procedure in the Case of Nullity, Imitation, or Counterfeiting. — " If the owner of the trade-mark has been negligent in filing an opposition according to article 21, the only remedy left for him is to bring an action for annulment of the trade-mark. The procedure is the same as in opposition suits.

" If there is imitation of the trade-mark, or if the trade-mark has been counterfeited, the owner of the registered mark may institute either civil proceedings or he can bring criminal action. In civil proceedings he may recover damages.

" If the trade-mark has been counterfeited, the procedure is as follows: The complainant makes a request for seizure of the goods. The request is filed at the court at the responsibility and risk of the petitioner, and he must furnish security. The court uses its own discretion, but the security required must satisfy the judge and must be sufficient to cover all damages which the seizure may cause. The court, as a rule, accepts the oath of the petitioner (this oath is known as the caucion juratoria), in which he states that he assumes the responsibility for all damages which may accrue, and this is allowed when the court is satisfied that the petitioner is a party of responsibility. The judge may suspend the above oath, and may accept personal bonds, etc. After the seizure is made, the plaintiff must institute action by filing a written statement and petition within fifteen days next following the seizure. Failure to do so entitles the other party to ask that the seizure be raised.

" The bill of complaint is filed before the federal judge, showing documentary evidence of the complainant's right to institute proceedings. The judge then fixes the date for argument. After argument has been made, the court again sets a date for another hearing, and although the entire proceeding is orally conducted, a written statement of all the evidence must be filed. In order to take the evidence a new date is set for hearing, and when all the evidence is filed, three days are allowed to both parties to examine the records, and finally a last hearing is set for argument. After that the judge decides the case. If the judgment is appealed the Chamber sets a date for hearing. The court, after going over the records, renders a decision. These proceedings generally take but a very short time."

The above references to the procedure in these matters have been taken from Singer on Trade-Marks. The articles quoted by Mr. Singer are from the Law No. 3975 of November 23, 1900.

Use and Ownership. — The use of the trade-mark is optional, yet it may be compulsory if the interests of public convenience should require it.

The cession or sale of a business establishment includes also the cession or sale of the trade-mark, excepting when it is otherwise stipulated, and the cessionary has the right of using the trade-mark, even if it were a nominal one, in the same manner in which the cessionaire used it, without other restrictions than those which were expressly provided for in the contract of sale or cession.

The exclusive ownership of a trade-mark belongs to the manufacturer, merchant, or agriculturist who has complied with the requirements of the law, namely, its registration.

In order to acquire the right of use of a trade-mark the assignment must first be registered in the trade-mark office which granted the same.

In case of contests, or in case protection is necessary of the rights appertaining to a mark, the trade-mark which will be considered valid will be the one for which the respective office has issued a certificate.

A certificate of ownership will be issued if, after a period of thirty days after the publication of the notice of the application, nobody has appeared making opposition to the granting of the mark.

The right to prelation for the ownership of a trade-mark will be granted, considering the date and hour upon which the petition was presented.

The certificate of a trade-mark which will be issued by the Office of Patents shall consist of a testimony or authorized copy of the decree which grants the trade-mark, accompanied by a duplicate of the design of the trade-mark. It will be issued on behalf of the nation, with approval of the government and will be signed by the chief of the Bureau and the secretary, and will have the seal of the same.

Assignments. — To register the assignment of a trade-mark the petitioner must present to the Bureau of Patents and Trade-Marks the following: A petition in which the names and domiciles of the cessionaire and cessionary appear, the number of the trade-mark, and the reference to the document by which the assignment is made; the certificate of the trade-mark; a receipt accrediting that twenty-five pesos, national currency, have been paid as tax; the original deed of the assignment or a legalized copy of same.

According to the Argentine law in the matter the ownership of a trade-mark passes to the heirs and can be transferred by deed or by will. As we have already stated in speaking about the ownership of trade-marks, the cession or sale of the establishment includes also the sale or cession of the trade-mark, excepting where it is otherwise stipulated, and the cessionary has the right of using the trade-mark, even if it were a nominal one, in the same manner in which the cessionaire used it, without other restrictions than those which were expressly provided for in the contract of cession or sale. (Art. 10, Law No. 3975.)

Authorized Copies of Certificates. — In order to obtain a new authorized copy or testimony of the registration granted, a petition should be presented, accompanied by a copy of the description and design deposited at the Bureau, and the receipt which proves that the tax of five pesos, national currency, plus the value of the stamped paper upon which the authorized copy will be drawn, has been paid.

In the event that several testimonies or authorized copies of the same trade-mark are desired, it is permitted that the request be made in one petition, but this petition should be accompanied by as many copies of the description and design as testimonies or authorized copies are desired.

Names of Manufacturers, Corporations, Merchants, or Agriculturists. — The name of the agriculturist, merchant, or manufacturer, and that of a partnership, the sign or designation of a house or business establishment on articles or determinate products, constitute property according to the Argentine law. (Art. 42, Law No. 3975.)

He who wishes to operate in an industry, trade, or a branch of agriculture already exploited by another person with the same name or with the same conventional designation shall adopt a modification which would make that name or that designation visibly different from the one used by the house or business establishment already existing. (Art. 43, Law No. 3975.)

If the one who is damaged by the use of a name of a manufacture, trade, or agriculture shall not file his claim within a period of one year from the date upon which the name was used by the other individual, he shall lose his right of claim. (Art. 44, Law No. 3975.)

Corporations have the right to their corporate name, like any private individual, and are subject to the same limitations. (Art. 45, Law No. 3975.)

The right to exclusive use of the name as property will be extinguished with the extinction of the business house that has it, or the extinction of the exploitation of the branch of agriculture or industry which uses it. (Art. 46, Law No. 3975.)

The registration of the name is not necessary for the enjoyment of the rights granted by the Argentine law, except in the case that the name forms part of the trade-mark. (Art. 47, Law No. 3975.)

Punishment in Case of Infringement. — A fine of from twenty-five pesos to five hundred pesos, Argentine currency, and imprisonment for from one month to one year will be the penalty which cannot be redeemed with money for those — (1) Who counterfeit a trade-mark of a manufacture, trade or agriculture. (Art. 48, Law No. 3975.) (2) Who use counterfeited trade-marks. (3) Who fraudulently imitate a trade-mark. (4) Who knowingly use on their products, or articles of their trade, a trade-mark belonging to others, or fraudulently imitate it. (5) Who knowingly sell, put on sale, lend themselves to sell, or circulate articles with a counterfeited trade-mark, or one fraudulently imitated. (6) Who knowingly sell, put on sale, or lend themselves to sell counterfeited trade-marks, and those who sell authentic trade-marks without the knowledge of the owners. (7) Who, with fraudulent intention, put, or order others to put, on the trade-mark of merchandise or products, a false statement or any other false designation with relation to the nature, quality, quantity, number, weight or measure, or the place or country in which it was manufactured or sold, or to medals, diplomas, honorary mentions, recompenses, or honorary distinctions granted at exhibitions or competitions. (8) Who knowingly sell, put to sale, or lend themselves to sell merchandise or products with any false statement other than those mentioned in the former section. In case of recidivation, the punishment will be twofold.

To those crimes to which the previous article refers and for which punishment is not established will be applicable the dispositions contained under the titles 5 and 6, section 1, book 1 of the Penal Code (art. 38, Penal Code, and following, on the responsibility of accomplices, and art. 42, Penal Code, and following, on the responsibility of those who conceal). (Art. 49, Law No. 3975.)

In order that a crime shall exist, it is not necessary that the counterfeiting or imitation should cover all the articles which are trade-marked, the counterfeiting or imitation of only one of the articles being sufficient. (Art. 50, Law No. 3975.)

The attempt will not be punished nor cause a civil liability, but it will give place to the destruction of the instruments used exclusively in counterfeiting and other crimes. (Art. 51, Law No. 3975.)

The products of the fines to which the law refers will be used for the development of schools in the place where the crime was committed, after the civil indemnification is made. (Art. 52, Law No. 3975.)

The merchandise or products with illegitimate trademarks which are found in the hands of the culprit or in the hands of his agents, will be attached and sold, previously destroying

COPYRIGHT OF LITERARY AND ARTISTIC WORKS.

What can be Copyrighted and Duration. — The authors of all kinds of manuscripts or musical compositions, paintings, drawings, sculptures, or those who own the original idea in some literary work will have the exclusive right, during their lifetime, to sell or distribute in Chile, their works, using printing, lithography, moulds, or any other means to reproduce or multiply the copies of their works. (Law of July 24, 1834.)

The Rights of Heirs. — Their heirs by will and their legal heirs will enjoy the same rights for a period of five years, to be extended to ten years at the will of the Government, but should the State be the heir, the works will become common property.

Assignments. — The authors and their heirs are at liberty to transmit their rights to another person.

Posthumous Works. — The owner of a manuscript, when a posthumous work, will enjoy the ownership of it for a term of ten years, counting from the first edition, provided it is published separately and not in a new edition of the compositions already published during the life of the author, for it will then run the same term as these.

The holder of a posthumous manuscript containing corrections of a work of the same author, published during his life, will enjoy the ownership for a term of ten years, provided said manuscript is presented to the courts within the year after the death of the author and it is proved to be legitimate.

Foreigners' Rights. — Foreigners publishing their works in Chile will enjoy the same rights as the natives and if published in other countries and a new edition is made in Chile, they will enjoy the same rights for a term of ten years.

Theatrical Pieces. — Theatrical pieces will have, besides the rights already granted for other works, the privilege of not being performed in any theatre in Chile without the permission of its author or heirs, during the life of the former and five years granted to the latter.

Rights of Institutions. — When the author of the work is an institution, the right will be for forty years counting from the first edition.

Translators' Rights. — The translators of any work and their heirs will have the same rights as the authors and heirs.

Requirements. — To be able to enjoy the rights mentioned in the foregoing articles, no title from the Government is required, and it will suffice to deposit previously three copies of the work in the Public Library at Santiago and advertise on the cover to whom it belongs.

Editors' Rights. — The Government will be able to grant exclusive privileges, not exceeding a term of five years, to the reprinters of interesting works, provided the editions are correct and beautiful. Should the author or editor of a work not care to enjoy this privilege, and omit the formalities and requirement already mentioned, the printer will have to present the three copies to the Public Library of Santiago.

Printers' Duties. — Every printer should also deposit in the same library two copies of each paper or newspaper or leaflet he prints and send one to the Secretary of the Interior and one to every censor.

When a Work becomes Common Property. — Once the terms mentioned above have elapsed, every work will be considered of common property and any one will be able to negotiate the same to their best advantage.

In Case of Piracy. — Should any one reprint, engrave, or imitate somebody else's work or in any way act against this law, the interested party should denounce him before the court, which will pass summary judgment in accordance with the laws governing the usurpation of somebody else's property.

PROCEEDING AND PUNISHMENT IN THE CASE OF IMITATION OR COUNTERFEITING OF MARKS OF COMMERCE, TRADE AND COPYRIGHTS.

Costs. — Every condemning sentence in criminal matter carries in itself the obligation to pay the costs, damages and injury on the part of the authors, accomplices, concealers and other persons legally responsible.

Punishment for Employees of the Administration in Case of Crime. — The employees of the administration who commit the crime of depriving a person of the exclusive property of his discovery or production, or should divulge secrets regarding the invention that he knew on account of his employment will be punished as follows: — When the employee is paid a fixed salary, suspended and lowered in rank; when he renders his service gratuitously, minor reclusion at its lowest grade, or a fine of one hundred pesos to one thousand pesos.

When the employee should prove that he acted at the command of his superiors whom he should obey, the penalties mentioned in this article will be applied to the superiors who ordered him to do it.

Counterfeiting of Tickets, etc. — Any one forging tickets for the transportation of persons or goods or for meetings or public functions with the intention of using or circular-ising them fraudulently, and those who use or imitate them knowing they are forged; any one forging the seal or mark of any authority whatever, or private establishment or bank, industry or commerce, or private party, and makes use of the stamps, seals, or counterfeited marks, will suffer the penalties of minor prison in one of its grades and a fine of from one hundred pesos to one thousand pesos.

Punishment for Infringement of Names and Marks of Trade. — Any one placing on manufactured articles the name of a manufacturer who does not manufacture these articles, or the trade-mark of a manufacture which is not the true one, will suffer the penalty of minor prison in one of its grades and a fine of one hundred to five hundred pesos.

The same penalties will apply to any dealer, drummer, or canvasser, who, knowing this, should sell the articles with assumed or altered names.

Punishment for Infringement of Copyrights. — Punishment of prison in one of its grades or fine of one hundred pesos to one thousand pesos will be inflicted on the party who should commit some fraud in literary or industrial property.

house of business which bears it or with the cessation of the industry to which it belongs. (Art. 32.)

The registration of a name is not necessary in order to exercise the rights accorded by this law, except in case it forms a part of the mark.

Punishment in case of infringement. — He who for the purpose of gain makes, counterfeits, alters, or executes a mark registered by another person in the proper register shall, upon complaint, be punished by imprisonment of from twelve to fifteen months. (Art. 34.)

He who with the same motive imitates a mark under such conditions that the consumer could confuse the same with products, the marks of which have been duly registered, shall, upon complaint, be punished by imprisonment of from nine to twelve months. (Art. 35.)

Those who refill with spurious products receptacles bearing the mark of another, or those who refill them with products which do not correspond to the genuine product mentioned in the mark which the receptacle bears, or those who mix genuine products with others extracted or spurious, shall be punished, upon complaint, with imprisonment from six to nine months. (Art. 36.)

He who knowingly sells or places on sale, or offers to sell or distribute, merchandise marked with the marks to which the preceding article refers, shall be punished, upon complaint, with imprisonment of from six to nine months. (Art. 37.)

Those who, against the wish of the legitimate owner, use or place genuine marks on sale shall be punished, upon complaint, by a fine of from one hundred to two hundred pesos. (Art. 38.)

Those who sell or place on sale merchandise with a misappropriate or counterfeit mark are obliged to give to the merchant or manufacturer who is the owner of them complete information in writing in regard to the name and address of those from whom the merchandise has been purchased or procured, also in regard to the time when the sale commenced, and in case of refusal they may be legally compelled under penalty of being considered accomplices of the guilty party. (Art. 39.)

Merchandise bearing counterfeited marks, which is found in the possession of the counterfeiter or his agents, shall be confiscated and sold, and the proceeds, after the expenses and indemnities established by this law have been paid, shall be appropriated to the benefit of the public schools of the Department in which the confiscation took place. (Art. 40.)

Counterfeit marks which are found in possession of the counterfeiter or his agents shall be destroyed, as also the instruments which served especially for the counterfeiting. (Art. 41.)

Those injured through the violation of the provisions of this law may bring an action for damages against the authors of the fraud and their accomplices. The sentence shall be published at the expense of the infringer. (Art. 42.)

No action, civil or criminal, may be brought after three years have elapsed since the commission or repetition of the offense, or after one year from the day on which the owner of the mark had cognizance of the fact for the first time. The acts which disturb this provision are those which are determined by the common law. (Art. 43.)

The provisions contained in the articles of this chapter shall be applicable to those who unlawfully make use of the name of a merchant, manufacturer, or of a firm, of the sign or designation of a commercial or manufacturing house, as established in articles 28, 29, 30, 31, and 32 of this law. (Art. 44.)

The provisions contained in the Penal Code shall be applicable to the offenses to which this law refers, provided that they do not conflict with what is expressly established by this law. (Art. 45.)

Procedure. (Chapter V of the Law of July 13, 1909.) — Every owner of a manufacturing, commercial, or agricultural mark, to whose knowledge it may come that there are to be found in the custom-house, post-office, or other Government or private office, labels, capsules, receptacles, or any other article similar to those which constitute or belong to his mark, may apply to the competent authority, asking for an attachment on the said articles, and the court shall grant the request on the responsibility of the petitioner and such security as the court shall deem necessary in case the attachment should have been granted wrongfully. It is optional with the judge to dispense with the security when the applicant is a person of well-known responsibility. (Art. 46.)

Without prejudice to what is laid down in the preceding article of this law and other measures which may be taken in the criminal court, the owners of the misappropriated, counterfeited, or imitated marks may, upon their own responsibility, apply to the competent judges, asking that an inventory and description be taken of the merchandise or products which are found bearing said marks, in a house of business or any other place. The said inventory shall be taken by the constable of the court or by any public notary whom the court shall name, by drawing up documents which shall contain a detailed description of the merchandise or products, and which shall be signed by the petitioner if he be present, the constable, or notary, as the case may be, and by the proprietor of the business or store, or, in his absence, by two witnesses. (Art. 47.)

When several inventories have to be made simultaneously in different places, the judge may appoint for this purpose any public notary, and in all cases may direct, if he shall believe it necessary, that there shall accompany the constable, or his substitute, an expert, in order that he may supervise the description of the inventoried merchandise. (Art. 48.)

If, during the taking of the inventory, the explanations provided for by article 39 of this law are given, they shall be included in the document. (Art. 49.)

In order that the order for the inventory and attachment of which the preceding articles treat may be given, the presentation of the certificate of the mark is required. (Art. 50.)

Fifteen days having elapsed from the effecting of the attachment, the same shall be without effect if the owner of the mark has not instituted the proper action. (Art. 51.)

The proceedings to which the offenses named in article 34, and the following articles of this law give rise, shall be conducted according to the procedure laid down by the Code of Criminal Procedure. (Art. 52.)

Criminal actions may not be officially instituted, and belong solely to the interested parties, but once initiated they shall be continued by the Government attorney if he thinks it proper. (Art. 53.)

The parties injured by violation of the provisions of this law may bring an action for damages against the authors and accomplices of the fraud. The sentences shall be published at the expense of the infringer. (Art. 54.)

TIBBETS, MOREY, FULLER & TIBBETS,

Attorneys and Counselors at Law,

Rooms 4, 5, 6, 7, and 8 CAMERON BLOCK.

We make a specialty of Real Estate, Commercial, and Corporation Law, Mercantile, Insurance, and Real Estate Litigation.

FEDERAL COURT IS HELD HERE FOR THIS PORTION OF THE STATE.

Practice in all State and Federal Courts. Prompt and careful attention given to Commercial Collections.

We have a special Collection Department, well equipped, under personal supervision of an attorney at law and adjuster of long experience. Will go in person to any part of the State to attend to important claims or collections, if desired.

In all claims placed with us we take quick action, dictated by our best judgment. We realize, however, that non-resident clients are usually averse to litigation; hence, we first use every effort by prudent negotiation to settle such controversies, where it can be done safely and to our clients' satisfaction.

Notaries Public and Stenographers in Office. Depositions carefully taken.

WE ARE GIVING CAREFUL ATTENTION, FOR EASTERN CREDITORS, TO MORTGAGES AND OTHER SECURITIES.
